What Is Education?

BY REV. DR. SOPHAR.

WHAT A TEACHER SHOULD LEARN.

There scarcely exists better exercise for the youthful faculties than the observation of subjects of the animal world. It possesses the greatest sharm for youth and thus easily accustoms our little opes to attach for awhile their attention to a certain subject; it acoustoms the eye to observe things, not superficially but scrupulously. An eye thus exercised discovers a thousand little marks, which forever remain concealed to the neglected faculty. Perception is gradually forced to give to the observer the right idea of the object perceived. Memory is kept active by the comprehension of the various names of the animal's different parts. Imagination is cultivated by sketching the correct picture of the animal observed. Judicative intellect is logically trained by the judgment of 'the animal and by the search for the similiarity and for the difference existing between two different animals.

"Your advice is theoretically right," one may remark, " but where shall we obtain enough animals daily to represent one of the objects of Linne's system?" This will surely not be found wanting, if only your good will prevails. Indeed I can not suppose that every tutor will be possessed of a collection of natural curiosities. But the magnificent collection of natural products, nature itself, is open for the tutor as well as for all men. If he diligently searches for objects, he will find many a thing, and if he has among his friends some hunters and farmers and asks them to assist him in his purpose, to lend him the animals caught, for representa-tion to his boys, he will never be em-barrassed for subjects in the lessons of natural history. In every institute even before a collection of natural products can be obtained, this lesson must not be neglected, and you may always introduce a new subject. We hear the scoffer say: "Let us then bring oxen, horses, sheep, into our school-houses and represent them to the young ones in natura." This objection deserves no answer, because common sense will suggest that we take the children to see those ani-mals which are unfit to enter our threshold. They may observe the animal in all its different parts and return into their class-room in order to discuss the subject observed. Now the question arises: Whence shall we obtain foreign animals from time to time foreign animals are shown, which no sensible tutor should fail to see with his boys. These animals are few only; nor does it matter whether the boys ever see the greatest part of these foreigners. The aim of the child's lesson in natural history is not to become professor of natural sciences but the exercise of the child's faculties, for which surrounding nature gives suffi-cient material. And to be entirely protected from a want of substance you must combine botany with zoology, and treat the former particularly in summer, the latter during the winter session. Instruction in botany does not essentially differ from the lesson in zoology. The chief aim is the exercise of the boys. The means are the representation of a plant for their own observation. Now, if this lesson would be taught to pupils of whom we knew that they will never leave their native State or practical to introduce the plants by their Latin names of the Linnean sysplant. You say, this is too difficult his hands. for children. But facts are proving that it is very easy for them. European children from six to eight years, will see her children from six to eight years, pean children from six to eight years, girls as well as boys, who were taught botany six months, knew nearly all the plants of their surrounding flora. They could name them according to Linné and were not a little proud of the accomplishment. And I may guarantee, in the name of American youth that we're not do the several if we can the several if we are the several in the several i youth, that we can do the same if we are systematically instructed and our is cease to be provisions for public charity.

A MARDI GRAS INCIDENT .- A certain individual from Ascension or some other parish where spirituous liquors are not permitted to be sold, also went to the great city to see the wonderful sights. When Rex had retired and the Mystic Krewe had vanished he started to go up town. The crowd was dense, locomotion was dif-ficult, and the noise and confusion great. The devotee of total abstingnee being wearied with attempts to find the street cars leaned up against a letter box post, and, after a moment, pulled a nickel out of his vest pocket, dropped it in the letter hox, and then called out, "all right, driver, go ahead."

Mow it Feels to be Scalped.

An Old Indian Fighter's Description of

the Hair Raising Process. I know'd just as well as I know'd anything that my hair was going to be raised in less'n two seconds unless some of the boys seen my fix and made the devil a present of that In-jin. I heerd some o' the boys give a shout, and knew by the scatterin' of shout, and knew by the scatterin' of the squaws and young ones that some o' 'em were coming. I heerd a shot and a yell, and the squaw that had yanked me down fell dead with half her body on are. The big Injin was game, anyhew. He kicked the dead squaw off o' me, and then set one o' his feet on my chest. The numb feeling had almost left me, and I could see the fringe on the leggings of the see the fringe on the leggings of the Injin. I know'd what he was after, and if ever o man cussed and swore to hisself, that man was me, because none o' the boys seemed to get there, nor to shoot. Two o' the soldiers war a coming for me all the time, but the business was done so quick that they didn't have time to shoot agin' after killing the squaw, till the thing was over; but it seemed mor'n a week to me. The Injin bent down quick and grabbed me by the scalp lock. Lord! how he jerked! I shut my eyes. Then it felt as if some one had ripped a gash with a dull pair of scissors all 'round the top o' my head, and then poured a ladleful o' melted lead onto it. A flash o' the awfullest, sharpest pain that can be imagined ran all through me, clean to the end o' my toes. Then it seemed as if a horse were hitched to my hair and he was struck with a whip, give a sud-den spring, and tore the top o' my head off from side to side. I could feel my knees draw up, and my hands go shut and grab in the snow, and I set my nails into the flesh. The sen-sation was jest as if from the top o' my head there had run cords down thro' my body, which were fastened in my flesh all along, and that these had all tore loose from my toes up, and followed the top o' my head when it was jerked off. I know'd I were calped, and that were all I know'd for three days.

About the time I lost my hair the cav'iry came up, and the Injins was licked, and there wasn't many of 'em got away. The boys who seen the Injin scalp me said they killed him, but if they did, they didn't get my scalp back. It mought a got lost in the snow, though. They sent me to Laramie, an for four or five weeks I land a little the screet head that a variety. had a little the sorest head that ever set on a man's shoulders. They let me come East to get sound, and I've sence been hon'ably discharged, the Gov'ment saying that a man that had been scalped once by the Injins had done all that nat'rally could be expected of him for his country. I'm a itchin', though, to get out 'mong them dirty Nez Parses. Ther's one thing certain, the devils can't get any more scalp out o' me if they ever have a

An Appalling Curse.

Carefully prepared statistics show that there are over six hundred thousand drankards in the United States, and that seventy thousand die annually who go to the grave of a drunkard. Every year one hundred thousand men and women are sent to prison under the influence of intoxication, while three hundred murder and four hundred suicides occur from the same cause. Two hundred thou sand orphans are annually thrown upon the charity of the world by this curse of intemperance. Nine-tenths of our crime and not less than seveneights of the pauperism is the im-mediate result of whisky, and that at a cost to the government—lesides individual want—of not less the $60,000,000, every year.—Exchange.

A Senatorial Contest.

Terrebonne Progres We are glad to see the State Senate are not blind partisans as is frequently the case in the U.S. Senate. In the contest of Moore vs. Cage, the com-mittee acted under law and so rewill never leave their native State or our Western Continent, the English names of the plants, as used in the different States, would suffice; but since we are persuaded to the contrary, that our children will not only come in contact with foreigners, but will travel more and quicker than their fathers have traveled, it is more practical to introduce the plants by attempt to settle at all, and he says that he has accounted for every dollar tem, the one now known and accepted by all civilized nations. We may also mention the English name of the the collector, Wright, never paid into

On His Dignity,

N. O. Delta The telegraph reports Congressman Ellis as having said to an applicant for an appointment:

I decline to hold other than the most formal relations with this Administration so long as it preserves its present attitude to-wards the Government of Louisiana. I have been opposed to the punishment of Anderson; but, were I Nicholls, I would never pardon him until assurance were given that he and Wells would no longer be retained in Federal offices in L This is now the present relationship of our member toward the Adminis-tration. We would suggest that it tration. would have been much more consist-ent with dignity and propriety had Mr. Ellis always maintained this attitude towards President Hayes. We would then have been spared the ha-miliating specticle of seeing bis fre-quent visits to the White House for the purpose of urging the appointthe purpose of urging the appointment of Warmoth's man, Mr. Effing-ham Lawrence, as Collector of this port.

For the benefit of that misguided business class who rely on their "long established and well-known reputations" to attract custom, we repeat this little story that is now making the rounds of the press:

"The late A. T. Stewart once came to the conclusion that although advertising was a good thing as a ladder it was of no great benefit to him, as his name sold his goods. To test it, one department only of his establishment was advertised. Its business overtopped that of all others so immediately and so largely that Mr. S. concluded that to get the full power of his name it must appear in printer's ink. His advertising manager says, 'from that time he advertised more largely than ever in the leading papers."

John P. Griffin, express agent at Paris, Texas, has been arrested and placed in jail, charged with robbing the company of $10,000. About a month ago Griffin stated that he was knocked down and robbed of the package when at the train at night awaiting to deliver it to the messenawatting to deliver it to the incession to St. Louis. His tale at the time was considered a little "thin," and the chances are that he is the guilty party.—Shreveport Herald.

RAIL TO TEXAS.—Says the New Orleans Democrat: We hear that Chas. Morgan is making arrangements to extend the line of his railroad to our sister State, in accordance with the right granted him last year by the Legislature. His agents have already made extensive contracts for crossties, and it really looks now as if New Orleans will not tarry long before it enters into direct communication with Texas.

The great walking match between Henry Schmehl and Miss Vickers, in New Orleans, for $500 a side, was completed Sunday night, Mr. Schmehl being the victor and making the 400 miles in 119 hours, 41 minutes, 25 seconds, and Miss Vickers making her 260 miles in in 119 hours, 46 minutes and 45 seconds, Schmehl-winning by only five minutes and 20 seconds.

The Dreadful Consumption. Creeps in upon us unawares, the sad consequence of having once too often neglected a trifling cold. Defy this nawelcome visitor by using Parker's Ginger Tonic on the first appearance of a Cough, Cold or Sore Throat, and you will escape the danger. There is no cure equal to it, and its powerful action on the mucous surfaces of the throat and lungs, removes all soreness and inflammation therefrom, and pro-tects the feeble from Consumption. Equally valuable as a corrective, the thousands of ladies who suffer untold miseries from functional derangements, will gratefully appreciate its comforts, as it gives entire relief from Painful Periods and establishes the healthful regularity of the disturbed functions. Fever and ague, and its cogener, bilious remittent, besides affections of the stomach, liver and bowels, produced by miasmatic air and water, are both eradicated and prevented by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a purely vegetable sixir, indorsed by physicians, and more extensively used as a remedy for the above class of disorders, as well as for many others, than any medicine of the age. A languid circulation, a torpid state of the liver, a want of vital stamina, size conditions posuliarly favorable to malarial diseases. They are, however, surely remedied by the great Preventative, which, by invigorating the system and endowing it with regularity as well as vigor, 'provides it with a resistant power which enables it to withstand disorders not only of a malarial type, but a host of others to which feeble and ill re ulated systems are subject. The Bitters are a safe as well as searching eradicant, and have widely superseded that dangerous drug, quinne, which palliates but does not eradicate malaria. That Terrible Scourge
