Sam Thomas alias Larry Banks, arrested here as a fugitive from justice from Lafourche parish, was taken to Thibodaux on the 1st instant by Deputy Sheriff Frost who came up after him.

The D. I. B. intend giving a public rehearsal next Tuesday evening at Phoenix Hall. Verbal invitations to attend will be extended by the members to their friends.

An operation on Joseph Parker, who was recently wounded by Constable Fernandez, has been performed by Coroner Duffel, assisted by Doctors Legaré, Hanson, Clavier and Richard. The shots, which at first could not be found, were removed.

The bonds of W. E. Davis and Major Ramsey fixed at $200 on their preliminary examination for appearance at the next term of District Court to answer the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses and inciting to riot, have been reduced by Judge Duffel and furnished by the accused.

Chief of Police Wm. L. Langridge, of Gretna, came to Donaldsonville by the morning train yesterday to identify Joseph Lamoth, the Negro who a short while ago was arrested by our authorities for theft and supposed to be a fugitive from justice from Gretna. He states Lamoth is not the man.

We are informed that about fourteen gentlemen of Donaldsonville, headed by that veteran Conqueror, Robert Treille, have banded themselves together and are about to write to the Governor offering their services in case of a war with Mexico. Among the number are some of the old members and sons of others of the famed Donaldsonville Artillery.

About seventy-five ladies and gentlemen gathered together last night at the Hook and Ladder Hall and enjoyed themselves in an impromptu hop. Commencing at about 9 o'clock, to the tender notes of the piano played by Mrs. Gaudet, these lovers of Terpsichorean art danced until an early hour this morning. The originators of the little soiree have our thanks for the invitation extended us.

Septime Williams, a little colored boy of eight years, was precipitated from a skiff into Bayou Lafourche, near Donaldsonville, on Tuesday, and was drowned. He became scared at the report of a pistol, intentionally fired by some unknown negro to frighten him and two companions who were in the boat, and losing his balance, fell overboard. His body was immediately recovered and a coroner's jury upon holding an inquest found that he had died of asphyxia by immersion. The party who fired the pistol immediately took to the woods and has not since been heard of.

Friday before last, Mr. Augustin Corbo stepped into the grocery store of Mr. Charles Nesmith, in the third ward of the parish, and asked for a few matches. On receiving them from Mr. Nesmith and turning to go, he was attacked by two large and vicious dogs which caught him by the left leg inflicting several serious and painful wounds. Mr. Corbo tried in vain for several minutes to shake them off and to defend himself from them. He was finally rescued by a colored man named White, who came to his assistance with a heavy club. The dogs were owned by Mr. Nesmith, who it is alleged by Mr. Corbo, made no effort to prevent them from attacking the unfortunate man.

The Catholic fair and concert, given on Saturday, Sunday and Monday last, quite fulfilled the expectations entertained with regard to it. On the evenings of each day the grounds were quite filled with ladies and gentlemen, who, in all the different ways presented by the entertainment, enjoyed themselves immensely. The rendition of "La Lettre Charge" and the "Ten Gay Deceivers" was in a measure beyond that of ordinary amateur performers while the singing of Miss Gaudet, Miss Comstock and Mr. H. Comstock was, as usual, perfect. For the benefit of the holders of tickets in the tombola, we give the following list of those drawing prizes, 912, 363, 840, 512, 106, 327, 129, 52, 121, 338, 290, 205, 195, 285, 418, 86. The sum of $750 was netted.

The Stenner Alice LeBlanc cleared from her moorings in front of Donaldsonville on Wednesday last, bound for New Orleans. She is to resume her Monday and Thursday trips, leaving the city on those days at 5 o'clock P. M., and is offered by Capt. Wm. Barré and Messrs. W. Hicks and O. Landry, clerks. As long as the depth of the water in Bayou Lafourche will permit, she will go as far as Lockport, but when compelled to make her trips only as far as Donaldsonville, she will connect with flats and lighters. All her machinery and wood work have been over-hauled and put in thorough repair and she has been completely renovated and repaired.

The excursion of the Junata Benevolent Association of New Orleans, made to Donaldsonville on Sunday last, was as predicted, for it, quite a successful affair. The excursionists reached here on the early morning train, were met at the Texas and Pacific Railroad depot by the Independent Brass Band and repaired to the Phoenix Hall where they danced away the time until dinner was announced by that prince of entertainers, Mr. Sam St. Martin, of the River side hotel. On starting themselves at table, at about 2 o'clock P. M., the pleasure seekers had set before them the dishes of the following menu: Soupe a la Provençaise; Fish-red snapper a la Croûte; Meats and vegetables--Boeuf a la mode, Sautéed, veal, roast of veal, Fried potatoes, green peas, artichokes, Entree, Omelette, Wines, brandy and Florida; Dessert--cocoa-ice-cream. After dinner the gentlemen of the association paraded the streets of Donaldsonville and surrounded the Mayor and other prominent citizens and the distinguished Donaldsonville and Gretna officials.

DEATH OF SAMUEL J. TILDEN.

Samuel J. Tilden, the great Democratic leader, is dead. After a very short illness he passed away at Greystone, his home in New York, quietly and apparently without pain. On Saturday evening he caught a cold from slightly exposing himself to the chilled air of the night which threw his digestive organs out of order and produced vomiting and diarrhea accompanied by much pain. He was immediately attended by his physician, who administered some medicines which relieved him, and on the next morning he appeared better. Through Sunday he diverted himself by taking a long ride, but at night he was again attacked and, though the restorative given produced some little effect, his system was enfeebled to such an extent as that the coolness of the weather affected him unfavorably. Next day he was confined to the house and was so weak after suffering his evening attack that he had to be carried to bed. From this time on he ceased to speak though apparently his mind was as strong as usual and he suffered no physical pain. All during Tuesday night his sleepless rest was watched over by Miss Gould, his niece. At 4 o'clock in the morning he was assisted to a chair in his bed room and remained seated without evincing any signs of consciousness and without rallying a moment until, at 5:30 A. M., his two attending physicians pronounced him dead. He had remained in his chair as if asleep, his life going out with the gradual failure of his breath.

In his death the United States have lost one of its greatest Statesmen and citizens and the Democratic party one of its ablest leaders. Though it was known that Mr. Tilden had been in bad health for some years past, his demise, not being expected, was unlooked for and, occurring thus suddenly, has been a shock to the whole country.

Fifty years ago Mr. Tilden commenced his political career in New York and gradually and steadily worked himself up to the leadership of his party. He set up reform as his guiding star and followed it without swerving until, through it, he brought himself into prominence in New York by over-coming and defeating at the polls the mightiest of the Tammany faction. His strategy through the Tammany spirit evinced by Mr. Tilden placed him in the gubernatorial chair of New York, but hardly had he been seated therein, when he was called upon to cope with a political ring stronger than any which has ever mastered and controlled any State or set of people. As Governor, he stopped not to consider that those who composed it were of the same party affiliation as himself, and his incorruptible integrity led him to make war on the Canal Ring which was composed largely of influential and leading Democrats of New York State. Success crowned his efforts to exterminate this monster and drag from the power it had acquired, and Mr. Tilden proved himself a man of the strongest public financial and administrative ability. So, when in 1876, the presidential election loomed up, his party centered on him as the Democrat most prominently fitted to guide the Nation's destinies. The Electoral Commission seated his opponent as having been elected. In 1880 and 1884 he would have again become a candidate for the presidency had not the decline of his health, superinduced by great political work, prevented. But having in 1884 refused to be brought again into the field he retired into almost absolute private life and spent his time divided between his home in New York City and his country home, Greystone, at Yonkers, on the Hudson River. These were splendidly and luxuriously fitted out with all the comforts and embellishments which a vast fortune could supply, while well stocked libraries in each allowed Ex-Governor Tilden to revel in his dearest studies, finance and political economy.

He dies at the age of seventy-three after a long career of usefulness, and leaves a name which is honored by his countrymen.

OUR MEXICAN TROUBLE.

An insult has been offered the American Nation by Mexico that which a greater could not have been thrust upon any country, and yet our neighbor seems to be allowed to follow her own course with perfect impunity. For years past the Mexican States on our border have been committing a series of deplorable unprovoked and unprovoked, but their impudence and tenacity has now reached such a point as to call for strenuous measures from the United States. If these are not now taken we place on a firm foundation the scoffing charges already made against us by the nations of Europe that our boasted citizenship and the national protection extend around it are but myths.

Early in July A. K. Cutting, a citizen of the United States, published in Texas an attack upon a Mexican. The matter alleged touched the individual as a private party though at the time he was and now is connected with the Government. After the publication appeared, Mr. Cutting went over to Paso del Norte and was there arrested by the Mexican authorities on a charge of criminal libel. Between this time and the 23rd of July, no steps were taken for Mr. Cutting's release, but on that day a temporary demand was made by U. S. Minister Jackson of the Mexican authorities, and on their failure to accord Secretary Bayard telegraphed additional instructions to the Minister. Later the House Committee on Foreign Affairs considered Representative Lanham's resolution calling on the Department of State for all the correspondence touching the case, but it was deemed unnecessary to take any further action on the resolution as a letter from the Secretary of State would without doubt be released within a few days. Still, however, preparations for the trial of the prisoner in Paso del Norte were being pushed forward, and, on July 30th, the case was actually commenced. On the 3rd of August the committee, at a special meeting, passed a resolution requesting that the Executive make a second demand for the prisoner's release. It was understood that should the Mexican authorities again refuse, our Minister should be at once withdrawn. On the 5th day the Cabinet met and considered the case, but no report was had of their proceedings.

The House of Representatives went into a long discussion of the matter on the 4th of August before doing anything. It was stated that Mexico would yield to the demand of this country, but it now seems that she will only do so in way perfectly satisfactory to herself. It has been learned that after the sentence of Cutting he will be pardoned.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Our Associate writes from Vicksburg Points of Interest. Concerning the Famous Hill City.

VICKSBURG, MISS., Aug. 3, 1886.
DEAR CHIEF: Don't think I am going to treat you as unkindly as my Cincinnati trip, ignoring your very existence. But really there was some excuse then. Jack Frost had laid in a too familiar grasp upon me; my eyes ached with looking on a white-waste of snow, and I was capable of doing nothing but watch the thermometer fall and fall, and wonder why I ever left the sunny South. Then we were caught in one of the coldest snafus of the season, and it was very interesting to see the pretty feathery particles of snow, drifting softly down, enveloping the grim old hills in sheets of bridal purity. Now, the burning rays of the August sun causes me to look upon that experience as the "baseless fabric of a dream."

We arrived here Sunday morning, and climbed a steep hill to our hotel, all breathless, tired and dusty. We've got a bit necked in this now though--climbing hills, I mean--the whole place being built on a succession of them, steep or shelving, until one gets lost in a labyrinth of heights. The court-house, a handsome, solid-looking stone structure, crowns one of them, and the Yernada Hotel, another.

The principal object of interest to visitors in the National Cemetery, where seventeen thousand slumbering heroes keep the "bivouac of the dead," awaiting the final reveille which shall arouse them to eternal peace. Only four thousand of these are known, the rest having no other record on the walls of time than a simple number. This is a beautiful park, ornamented with flowers and shrubbery, filled with echoing music of silver-throated songsters and cradled in the arms of the mighty Mississippi, whose bosom once rocked the argosies of war and whose now placid waters were ploughed by hissing shell and ball. It has a strangely subdued and melancholy look here, this river, as if it were bidding a last, touching farewell to these everlasting hills it has loved so long.

Seven years since the changing waters cut through a peninsula at the foot of the city. They have taken the new channel, which will soon leave this place inland, to all intents and purposes.

Away at the other end of the city is situated what during the war was the Marine Hospital, now selected into a pauper tenement house, and the bitter wall of poverty surrounds where stricken warriors in fevered delirium dreamed of home.

St. Paul's church, Catholic, is a pretty gothic building erected on an eminence, approached by a flight of stone steps, and beautifully decorated interiorly. The windows are all stained glass, memorial ones, and back of the altar an immense cross rears its pathetic form with the figure of the Man of Sorrows, life size.

The presbytery is in the midst of a quaint garden, gay with old-fashioned flowers, and all around the church great grape vines show from their pink petals a fragrant bosom on the presser-by.

The streets are lined with tall, wide-spreading trees whose branches touch and intermingle, and are so steep in some places that one can look down into the first story of the houses, while walking on a level with the second.

The plans of business are not over-attentive. Cheap ready-made clothing is strung across the sidewalks and exclaims of children in various stages of nudity play beside the door-way. In fact the whole city has a quaint, sleepy look, as if it had outlived its youth and usefulness and was imperceptibly gliding to oblivion.

We leave for Monroe to-morrow morning, to attend the Press Convention and go thence to Chicago and I shall probably write you from both these places.

Until then, a kindest, E.
