NEW ORLEANS LETTER.

Holiday Spirit Begins to Manifest Itself. Little Lassie Charges Purchases to Santa Claus—Death of Mrs. Robert C. Davey.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 14, 1906. Staff Correspondence of The Chief.

"Coming events cast their shadows before," and if you have any doubt of the truth of that saying, you want to take a peep into the Canal street stores and guess how near Christmas is.

Toys, toys, toys, and still more toys, silver knock-knacks and all the other signs which never fail to blossom out at this particular season of the year are making their appearance in windows and upon center counters, and even this early in the game the holiday spirit begins to manifest itself right merrily.

The other day I went out shopping with a friend of mine who was accompanied by her mite of a daughter, and this little lassie, hearing her mother's oft repeated instructions to various clerks to "charge that, please," wanted to know what was meant by that particular phrase.

Her mother explained it to her, and after a while the diminutive damsel wandered off to the toy department of the store we happened to be in, while her mother and I proceeded to buy out the rest of the establishment.

That evening at dinner she made the announcement to her Papa that she had "bought a whole lot of things at Holmes' store to-day." Papa said, "Indeed!" and wanted to know what they were.

"Oh," said she, "a 'buful wed automobile, a drate big dollie, a luvly little parlor set, a weal stove what you kin cook on, a woeking horse, a piano, a—"

"Here, here, here!" exclaimed her highly amused parent, "Who paid for all that?" "Oh, I had 'em charged," announced Miss Precocious, airily.

That's where Mother sat up and took notice. "Charged!" she repeated in horrified amazement, "and to whom?" "Why, to Santa Claus!" replied the youngster, and she is wondering yet why everybody laughed.

Dr. L. L. Szabary, who was convicted a year ago of failing to report a yellow fever case, was acquitted in the criminal district court last Monday and the decision of the lower court reversed.

ANOTHER WORLD'S FAIR.

Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition to be Held at Seattle, Washington—Will Exploit Alaska and Promote Oriental Trade.

An international exposition is to be held at Seattle, Washington, in the summer of 1909. It will be known as the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, and will aim primarily to exploit the resources of the little-known northland. The enormous sum of $10,000,000 will be invested in the enterprise.

The United States bought Alaska in 1867 for $7,200,000, the purchase being made principally for the sake of doing a good turn to Russia, which country had been faithful to the United States during the civil war. Since that time, the government's revenues from Alaska have aggregated more than $10,000,000, and the country is just $1,500,000 ahead on the Alaska deal, according to figures supplied by Secretary Taft.

Alaska has produced more than $100,000,000 worth of gold, and the fur output since 1870 represents a total value of $80,348,762. There are millions of acres of land available for settlement, and farming will be the principal industry as soon as better transportation facilities are secured. It has been demonstrated that all sorts of vegetables and the hardier grains will grow in the northland, while the inland valleys are excellently adapted to stock raising.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will bring together in trade the shores of the Pacific. Nine hundred million people—more than half the population of the globe—live in the Orient. Yet the trade between the Orient and the United States is not large, and that with the tropical Orient is not increasing. Through the medium of exhibits, the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition will teach buyer and seller what each needs.

Seattle citizens have already taken up $650,000 worth of stock in the enterprise. This subscription was secured in one day, and amounted to more than $3 for every man, woman and child in the city. No city ever before raised so large an amount for any purpose in so short a time.

The state of Washington will appropriate $1,000,000 for the fair, and the federal government will be asked to contribute a like amount. State participation will be on a large scale, and the displays made by the western commonwealths will be elaborate and interesting. Manufacturers from every part of America and from abroad will show their wares. Participation by foreign countries will be confined to those which border on the Pacific ocean or have dependencies there. It is assured that the representation which these nations will make will exceed the showings made at all earlier world's fairs.

Seattle, the New York of the Pacific coast, is located on the shore of Puget Sound. The greatest ships of the world ride at anchor beside her miles of wharves, and six-masted masted another on her business thoroughfares. The city is growing so fast that census takers fail to keep pace. The population now exceeds 200,000, having more than doubled since the census of 1900.

The exposition site has been chosen and laid out by John C. Olmstead, the famous landscape architect. It embraces 250 acres of the University of Washington campus, and is picturesquely situated on the shore of Lake Washington, within the city limits, and distant 20 minutes by street car from the business center.
