A. J. Hammons, clerk of the district court for Union parish, has been suspended from office by District Judge Halstead in a proceeding for contempt growing out of the clerk's failure to obey an order of court for settlement of a partition suit involving several hundred dollars. Deputy Clerk J. M. Dawkins is temporarily performing the duties of clerk.

The spirit of municipal improvement pervades the land, notwithstanding the business depression growing out of the European war, and even Ponchatoula, La., has caught the infection. The Democrat of that city village says: "It is currently rumored that the town council is seriously considering the question of appropriating 40c. for putting in a new glass in the front door of the town hall which was knocked out about four years ago."

Ponchatoula Democrat Sold.
The Ponchatoula Democrat, which recently completed its second year of life, has been purchased by Hayden W. Wren, formerly superintendent of the New Orleans Board of Port Commissioners, commonly known as the dock board, and the paper will henceforth be published under his management. Mr. Wren is said to be well and favorably known in Tangipahoa parish, and it is confidently expected that the Democrat will fully maintain in his hands the reputation it has already established as an able, alert and comely newspaper. That's what we hope for, anyway.

Pay Your Small Bills.
The Birmingham Age-Herald, under the above caption, calls attention to an evil which merchants in every community have to contend with, and its remarks on the subject are here commended to the careful consideration of those persons who may be guilty of the practice complained of.

"The retail trade of Birmingham has been fairly active during the last six months, but collections have been slow. At least that complaint is generally heard at this time."

"The small merchant usually has sufficient capital for his business needs, provided his customers pay their bills on the first of the month, but when customers in large numbers neglect to settle, the merchant is not only inconvenienced but often seriously embarrassed."

"It sometimes happens that a good customer meets with misfortune, but through no fault of his, is unable to meet his ordinary obligations, but it is a well-known fact that many people who are always able to pay their bills, have a habit of putting off the collector. Why they are proverbially poor pay is a question that might be referred to psychology. This observation on the habit of many well-to-do folks delaying the settlement of store accounts is common to all cities in all sections of this country."

"Of course, a large percentage of people who owe the butcher and the grocer and the dry goods firm are scrupulously prompt in sending checks for the amounts due, but at this season when every mercantile concern, large or small, needs all the money owing to it, prompt payment by everybody should be the rule."

"The banks have ample funds on hand to accommodate their customers in all reasonable demands, but if everybody paid their bills promptly, the volume of money in circulation would be appreciably increased. In every large city there are hundreds of merchants who send out monthly statements by the thousand. In many cases there will be a thousand and accounts averaging about $5 each. If all the customers made prompt payment the merchant would not have to call on the bank for assistance at a time when the financial demands for large operations are pressing."

"As a matter of civic pride as well as a matter of moral obligation let every debtor who can possibly do so, pay his bills without further delay. Such action will result in easy money."

THE DEATH GRAPPLE IN EUROPE

The gigantic struggle of millions of armed men in Europe continues with unabated violence, each hoping all former records for blood-spilling and destruction of human life, and it is yet impossible to foresee the outcome of the international death-grapple.

Censorship of news from the battlefields has increased in severity, making it more difficult than before to form even an intelligent estimate of the progress and facts of the fighting. Such reports as are given out from the official news bureaus of the contending nations are meagre and conflicting, colored according to their source and consequently tainted with the suspicion of exaggeration and undue partiality.

For instance, reports from Petrograd chronicle total defeats and destruction of Austro-Hungarian armies every few days, creating the impression that the forces of the dual monarchy are all but annihilated; whereas emphatic denials promptly come from Vienna, accompanied by accounts of the checking of the Russian invasion of Hungarian territory and successful counter attacks upon the invaders.

There is similar incongruity and contradiction in the reports of the fighting in eastern Prussia, Serbia, Montenegro and Bosnia, but there seems little reason to doubt that the Austro-Hungarians have had much the worse of the struggle, taken as a whole, and that the Slavonian allies are likely to prove more than a match for their Teutonic elements in the eastern theatre of war, particularly so long as the latter are compelled to keep a large proportion of their armies engaged against the French and English allies on the west.

The battle of the Aisne, which began three weeks ago, is still raging day and night, with little apparent advantage to either side, so far as can be judged from the censored reports emanating from Berlin, London and Paris. It seems reasonably certain that the allies have gained considerable ground against the German right wing, and are still hopeful of the success of their attempted turning movement by which it is sought to double that end of the German flank and sever the communication between the German forces in Belgium and France respectively; but Berlin claims that no appreciable benefit to the allies or harm to Germany has resulted from this maneuver, and that the long German line is intact and impervious to the assaults of the enemy.

How much longer this terrific combat can be sustained before one side or the other gives way under the fearful strain can only be surmised. The toll of killed and wounded is indeed like to "stagger humanity" when the truth and sickening details of the awful struggle are made known.

Italy still keeps neutral "by the hardest," but the tension of the effort seems to increase from day to day. The Italian government has protested to Austria against the placing of mines in the Adriatic, where the explosives are claimed to have destroyed Italian fishing vessels, and Austria depends on these mines to protect her navy and coast from attacks by the French and English fleets, she is not apt to accede to a demand to relinquish such an essential method of self-preservation. This provocation is not unlikely to prove a potent pretext for changing the neutral attitude of Italy and evoking a declaration of war from that country against Austria.

The Roumanian parliament was to assemble this week to determine the attitude of that country in the pending international conflict, and the chances are considered favorable to the participation of Roumania on the side of the triple entente as opposed to Germany and Austria-Hungary.

The Japanese expedition against the German concession in China has been joined by an English force and the allies have been victorious in preliminary engagements. It is claimed that the German stronghold has been completely invested by land and sea, and that its subjugation must soon ensue.

No important naval events have been reported during the past week. German balloons and aeroplanes have become increasingly active and have dropped a number of bombs in Paris, Ostend and other Belgian and French cities.

The Germans are preparing to besiege Antwerp.

FINE PROSPECTS FOR THE FAIR.

Fishing touches are being applied to the extensive arrangements for the second annual fair under the auspices of the South Louisiana Fair Association, and everything will be in readiness for the opening of the big exhibition next Friday morning, according to schedule. Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the great good to result from the fair, and the importance of every man, woman and child in this section coming to Donaldsonville to view the exhibits, which will constitute almost striking demonstration of the marvelous resources and advantages that lie at our very doors, and the unsurpassed opportunities for development in every field and branch of activity and industry. Those who attend will see many things that will instruct and educate them, that will engender new ideas and formulate new ideals. The display as a whole cannot fail to be of the utmost interest and value, and all who see it will be benefited, both in a material and moral sense.

An exceptionally attractive program of public speaking, athletic and literary events, baseball, horse races and other sports and amusements has been prepared as auxiliary to the exhibits, and there will be no lack of interesting features for the edification and entertainment of all the people, old, middle-aged and young.

It should not only be deemed a matter of personal recreation and pleasure, but a civic duty bearing on every resident of the nine parishes embraced in the fair association to attend the fair and to contribute something toward making it a notable advertisement of the resources and progress of this section.

Once in a while a newspaper man comes into his own. Arthur Caper, a well-known Topeka publisher, has been nominated for governor by the Republicans of Kansas, receiving the largest vote ever given a candidate in a Kansas primary. His election in November by a big majority is virtually conceded.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY.

Gov. Hall has issued a proclamation designating Friday, Oct. 9, as fire prevention day in Louisiana, and calling upon the people to observe it by a general cleaning up and removal of rubbish, trash and waste from their premises.

"Let all heating apparatus and chimneys be carefully gone over and placed in proper condition for winter use," says the governor. "Let all public and private institutions, hotels, asylums, factories and theatres be carefully looked over on that day and when necessary, any changes made that will further protect the safety of the occupants. Let local authorities give attention to the matter of better building regulations, fire protection and prevention, as well as added apparatus for fire fighting. Lastly, let fire drills be held on that day in institutions, factories and in public, parochial and private schools, and earnestly recommend that teachers instruct their pupils through short talks and proper programs, on the dangers of fire and the simpler means of fire prevention."

It is estimated that the annual fire loss in this country amounts to over $250,000,000, or about $2 per capita. Statistics compiled by the fire marshal's office of Louisiana show that the fire loss in this state during the year 1913 totalled $3,632,331, an amount nearly equal to the cost of maintaining the state government during the same period.

The great bulk of the fire loss is due to defective flues and heating apparatus, smoking, the careless use of matches, and the accumulation about premises of rubbish and trash, and is therefore preventable by the exercise of proper precaution.

The solution of the fire waste problem, now being recognized as the greatest of modern conservation, lies in fire prevention. The people must be taught that it is irrational to spend millions of dollars in putting out fires and scarcely anything for fire prevention. It would cost infinitely less to prevent than to extinguish them. With the proper precaution taken by property holders at least 60 per cent of the fire waste would be eliminated.

REVIVING AMERICA'S MERCHANT MARINE.

Encouraged by recent congressional legislation amendatory of the restrictive navigation laws that have heretofore militated against the issuance of United States documents to foreign built vessels, the United Fruit Company has taken steps to have all its fleet of sixty-two steamships transferred from British and Norwegian to American registry.

The first of these vessels to discard the British flag and substitute the star spangled banner sailed from Boston on the 12th ultimo.

On Wednesday, Sept. 16, a like event was witnessed in New Orleans by an enthusiastic assembly of several thousand people. With elaborate and interesting ceremonies, conducted under the joint direction of Commodore Crawford H. Ellis, southern manager of the United Fruit Company, and the New Orleans Association of Commerce, the British ensign was lowered from the peak of the building of United States registry, while a band played "Auld Lang Syne," and the stars and stripes of the United States was raised instead to the inspiring strains of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Appropriate prefatory addresses were made by Mr. Ellis, L. E. Bentley, representing Collector of the Port of New Orleans, Mayor Martin Behrman, J. D. Hardin, president of the New Orleans Board of Trade, Edgar B. Stern, acting president of the New Orleans Association of Commerce, and Ernest M. Loeb, president of the Board of Port Commissioners, after which the officers of the vessel were presented with their American licenses.

Immediately following the raising of the new flag a salute of twenty-one guns was fired by a battery of the Washington Artillery, and all the steam whistles in the harbor tooted their loudest in honor of the auspicious and momentous incident.

As fast as the vessels of the United Fruit fleet reach United States ports their registers and flags will be changed. May these gallant ships prove the pioneers of an innumerable host destined to carry the flag of the world's greatest republic over all seas and to all lands, as an emblem of peace, liberty and prosperity!

Primary Election Called.

At a meeting of the Democratic executive committee of Ascension parish held here Tuesday, a primary election was called for Tuesday, Oct. 20, to nominate candidates for the offices of justice of the peace for the first justice of the peace ward, and member of the parish school board from the first and eighth police jury wards. Candidates will have until Oct. 10 to file written notification with the chairman of the Democratic committee of their intention to enter the primary, and the deposits to be required of the respective aspirants will be $5 for justice of the peace, and $10 for school board member. The committee will hold another meeting here Sunday, Oct. 11, to act upon notifications of candidacy, and declare those candidates without opposition to be the nominees of the party.

A vacancy in the office of justice of the peace of the first justice ward was caused by the resignation of Landry LeBlanc, who has been appointed postmaster of Smoke Bend, vice E. P. Melancon, resigned.

Under the law now in effect, certain members of the parish school board are serving for two, four and six years, this having the effect of constituting a board with overlapping membership. The present board, at its organization in 1912, segregated the parish into three divisions by wards and drew lots for the short, intermediate and long terms. The two-year periods of service were drawn by Messrs. Henry Dugas of the first ward and F. Edw. Babin of the eighth ward, and it is considered likely that both these gentlemen will be candidates for re-election in the approaching primary. Hereafter the members elected at biennial intervals will serve for six years, thus preserving the overlapping terms in regular order.

Fair weather for the fair is promised by Forecaster Kline, so get out your best big and tucker and prepare to come along.

Parasites to Fight Cane Borers.

It begins to look as if the days of the sugarcane borer are numbered, says the Times-Picayune. Its conqueror has been found, and it will no longer be a menace to the Louisiana crop. November will tell the tale. By that time T. E. Holloway of the federal Bureau of Entomology, in charge of insect investigation at the Audubon Park station, will be enabled to announce definite results, and science does not take anything for granted until the proof is patent and produced.

The only method of control at first within the knowledge of the planter was to burn the trash after the crop was gathered. But the borer did not cease from troubling. Then the method was tried of leaving the trash unburned, but raking it to the headlands and plowing it under before the next crop was planted. The result was more satisfactory. The reason for the reduction of infestation was traced, and the answer was simple, even to the layman. There is a parasite which attacks the borer. The burning of the refuse from the cane destroyed the parasites as well as the borer moths, and when the new cane came up the borer did not have as many enemies to defend himself against, and thrived better in consequence.

The tests in progress are along the line of developing more parasites. These destroy the borer, but do not damage the cane. Mr. Holloway will not only have some developments to announce at the end of the crop, with regard to the parasites under cultivation and observation, but will pursue the quest for still more powerful parasites.

Porto Rico has followed the parasite plan for several years, with excellent results, and has scoured the United States, West Indies and even South America for beneficial insects. Louisiana has begun a hunt in Arizona for a species that conveys promise, and has been informed that formidable borer and moth destroyers may be found in the Rio Grande valley. After the sugar season Mr. Holloway will invade that section, establishing himself at Besenaville, Tex., where he hopes to recruit his practical legion. He also planned a similar expedition to Cuba, but foreign war has made Uncle Sam draw in his purse strings, and science may have to wait for "flush" times. However, the work already in hand is expected to prove valuable.

Mr. Holloway had considerable to do with a similar campaign in connection with the corn weevil, in which Louisiana is also deeply interested. The parasite which attacks the pest on the cereal is scientifically wonderful and destructively efficient. Instead of devoting itself to the weevil direct, it torpedoes the eggs of the weevil. Preventing the birth of the weevil is naturally preferable to attacking it after it has had chance to entrench, and if that parasite can be multiplied and kept busy, it will be a factor in corn salvation.

A Typical Pig Club Boy.

The case of George Sonnier, of Scott La., is fairly typical of what hundreds of boys all over the state of Louisiana are doing in pig club work.

In 1913 he joined the pig club of Lafayette parish and purchased a two month old Poland China gilt. With this pig he won the sweepstakes prize of about $25 at his parish fair that fall, in competition with men and other club members.

In the spring of 1914 this sow gave birth to four pigs—three of which young Sonnier sold at $5 each, and he is raising the fourth to exhibit at the parish and state fairs this fall. This pig, now six months old, weighs 265 pounds and is still gaining rapidly. She is being fed wheat shorts, soy beans and sorghum. Young Sonnier's father owns a farm, and every morning George goes out with his wagon to gather the cover for his pigs. He intends to have a pasture of his own next year and will be able to reduce the cost of raising his pigs. His hogs are easily worth $125 at the present time.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPENED.

Session of 1914-15 Inaugurated Under Favorable Auspices—Large Enrollment of Pupils—Teaching Corps for Current Year.

The public schools of Ascension parish opened Monday morning, and reports received at the office of Supt. J. L. Rusca are to the effect that the attendance at each of the institutions is unusually large, and the prospects altogether promising.

At the Donaldsonville High School the work of the session was inaugurated under the most favorable auspices, and the enrollment of pupils was perhaps the largest recorded on any opening day in the history of the institution. There were no formal ceremonies, but in addition to the customary morning exercises as conducted throughout the session brief talks were made by Supt. Rusca and Principal W. H. Miller, outlining the work it is hoped to accomplish during the scholastic year and urging the students to co-operate in making the entire session the most fruitful and successful the high school has ever had.

The attendance to date is 462, divided by grades as follows: First 92, second 58, third 63, fourth 37, fifth 32, sixth 29, seventh 35, eighth 35, ninth 18, tenth 26, eleventh 15, special 9. The domestic science course, which is being offered for the first time this session, promises to prove one of the most popular in the curriculum. The opening week of the session finds forty-nine girls enrolled in this department, and the number will doubtless be materially increased as the work progresses and its value becomes apparent.

The teaching corps of the various schools throughout the parish is constituted as follows:

The Influence of Fairs.

The agricultural fair is an effort for improvement—the parade day of the farmer and the manufacturer—the yearly inspection of the community. Such an occasion ought to bring out the best there is in any parish or state, for it is only by comparing the best results with moderate or mediocre effort that we arrive at a standard, or know how much can really be accomplished. The fair idea comes out of the "Harvest Home," a totally different object in modern times. The "Harvest Home" was merely a period of rejoicing that the harvests were safely passed and the grain secured for the long winter which was to follow. It had little of educational value excepting as it might furnish opportunity for one landed proprietor to exchange views with his neighbor and profit by the experiences narrated between flagons of wine and beer. The object was social intercourse and merry-making. The educational value of the gathering was secondary and incidental.

With the modern fair the order has been reversed. The educational value is the chief object sought and the various committees lay stress upon the exhibits in an effort to have these represent the best results of the territory covered by its sphere of activities. In many cases, like the Shreveport State Fair, it embraces all the territory within the state. Almost every parish will have some interest centered at this fair, and the aim of the officers is to show the best products from every region, thus stimulating to renewed effort the thousands who will view these results. The social features, while secondary in the aim of the fair association, are not so viewed by many of the participants, and amusements during fair week will be the order of the day. The success or failure of the entire effort will hinge considerably upon the entertainment afforded, and while the effort is educational, there is no reason why the instructive exhibition should not be at the same time an occasion for well-earned enjoyment. The fair is the instrument of the developing community. It dies a natural death in sections where growth has stopped, and its vigor is a pretty fair indication of the state of development among the people of the community in which it is being held.—Southern Farmer.

All your friends will be at the fair.

Files Suit for Divorce.

An item in the New Orleans States of Sept. 30 says: "Mrs. Laura Richard and board from her husband, Joseph Benjamin Castagnos, to whom she was wedded May 23, 1893, in Smoke Bend, La., on the ground of cruel treatment and abandonment. Four weeks ago he left her, taking their three younger children with him to Donaldsonville, and leaving the oldest, a daughter, 17 years of age, with her mother. Mrs. Castagnos asks for the decree of separation, for the care and custody of her four children, and for alimony on which to support them."
