...ubbur—Day of Atonement.

Friday evening and Saturday morning next, the 22nd and 23rd, there will be solemn services at the Synagogue.

The Day of Atonement commences every year on the 9th and lasts until the evening of the 10th day of Tishri, and all over the world that day is observed by the Jews as a day of fasting, penitence and prayer. The command concerning the solemn fast is most clearly pointed out in the 23rd chapter of Leviticus. How prayed the High Priest on the Day of Atonement? Upon his exit from the Holy, he said:

May it please Thee that this year be a year of rain, sunshine and dew in season—a year of grace, a year of blessing, a year of prosperity, a year of plenty, a year of health, a year of successful mercantile operations, a year in which men are not dependent on one another, in which ignorance and fanaticism will cease, and in which mankind do not oppress one another, and do Thou, Mighty Jehovah, not turn to the prayer of the wayfarers.

We Israelites believe in God as a reality. He is our Father, was always our Protector and besides him there is no other God. Our fathers believed that repentance of sin and with the pure confession to their God, only, and not to man, may bring atonement. "God is no man that he should deceive." Oh let us pray to Him, to spare our health and life, and may He grant us the rain of heaven and the fruits of the earth. And thus let us meet the great day, fraught with present troubles and past reminiscences. On Atonement day there are in our midst neither rich nor poor, neither proud nor humble, neither high nor low, neither wise nor ignorant. All distinctions, temporal or spiritual, cease with the setting of the sun, and we stand before God like children before their father, God, "who is good unto all," and "whose mercy extendeth unto all His creatures" has an open ear for the petition of every individual. May our prayers for health, for happiness, for rain, for sunshine, for dew, all in its season be heard. May He preserve us for life, for blessing, for peace, for plenty. May we not need one another. May our homes not become our graves. May the hand of grace be uplifted over the State of Louisiana, and its Governor, over the City of Monroe and its inhabitants, my dear friends and myself and mine.

D. B. L.

Services will be held Friday night at 7 o'clock, and Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

River Items.

The Hanna Blanks left New Orleans Wednesday. She will probably come no higher than Camp's, where she will be met by the Stein to-day.

The Annie Kelly and barges left the same port Wednesday forenoon for the Ouachita. Her mission, we learn, is to collect seed cotton for the Gretna ginnery which gins for the seed, furnishing bagging and ties—which any Ouachita planter can afford to do, and make money.

Capt. Fred Blanks is reported making tissue and adipose matter rapidly at Hot Springs under the benign ministrations of Dr. Dick Sinnott. Capt. Jack has entirely recovered from his recent illness at Louisville.

The D. Stein passed under the draw of the railroad bridge Wednesday with 4 or 5 feet clear space between her smokestack and the lower chord of the draw. The Stein is commanded by Capt. Jno. Gomellan, with Mike [illegible]by and Lamy Ray, two Monroe marines, in the office. She reported only 3 feet water on Fenner's bar Wednesday. Cotton goes through at $1 12½ per bale.

New Soldiers.

We learn that the Sweet Sweet's an organizations composed of a [illegible] or more of the most attractive young ladies of our city, with their brass [illegible] new rooms and bright uniforms, will make their public appearance as a [illegible] ll corps at the Opera House in the [illegible] week of next month.
