MAGNIFICENT PRIZES

King Corn Special at Virginia State Fair—Will Pay $50.00 for the Best Ear Corn.

The management of the Virginia State Fair, to be held in Richmond October 9th-14th, inclusive, have just announced the premiums which will be guaranteed and paid to prize winners in the King Corn Special of 1911.

As no requirement is attached regarding seed and no charge is made for entering or for space occupied by exhibit—in fact same is entirely free—and the farmer may enter in one or more classes—the exceeding liberality of the Fair is apparent when the classification is read, for it will be noted that both white and yellow corn classes have been made for single and ten ears and for six stalks with ears attached, and that in addition to the substantial first prizes and a number of secondary prizes in each class, very valuable implements will be given by merchants to the winners of the first prizes.

All persons are hereby forbidden, under penalty of the law, to trespass on my premises where I now reside, or on the farm recently purchased from W.O. Whitman, by riding, walking, hunting, or otherwise. This is not meant to apply to persons passing to and from town to the county farm.

J. G. BUSTON

Mrs. Minnie Cox Graham

Mrs. Minnie Cox Graham, wife of Judge S. C. Graham, of Tazewell, Va., died at her home in Tazewell, April 21, 1911.

In the death of Mrs. Graham the Church loses a devoted, active, earnest daughter and the State is deprived of a woman representing the best type of high-bred, high-spirited, pure and useful Virginia womanhood. Her ambitions were to be useful, to be true, to live faithful to the traditions of her people. The splendid old motto, "I serve," was hers through life; in her own family, as wife and mother and queen of her household, and as a potent force in such activities for the public welfare as became her station and her modesty. To her husband she was a loyal and dutiful wife, and affectionate, happy-hearted comrade. To her family she was a guarding, tender, watchful guide. To all about her, in her winter home in Florida, in her summer home in Tazewell, she was friend and helper. The humblest knew her ready bounty and quick sympathy and practical aid in their troubles and distress. The highest recognized in her not only an equal but a leader in all that tended to enliven and beautify social life, in every undertaking for the general good; and an unflinching comforter and source of strength in time of sorrow and disaster.

She was born in Chesterfield county, Va., September 23, 1862. Her father was Capt. Henry W. Cox, of the Confederate Army, and her mother, Martha H. Woolridge. She was of pure Chesterfield county stock, all her people except her paternal great grandfather having been natives and residents of that county since its first settlement in the early Colonial days. Her father's parents were Judge James H. Cox, one of the most distinguished jurists of the State, and Martha Reid Law; her grandmother's father being William Parran Law, born in England. Her mother's parents were Daniel Spencer Woolridge and Minerva Archer Cox. She was descended from Benjamin Watkins and nearly related to Archibald Cary, both representatives from Chesterfield in the Virginia Convention of 1776.

Mrs. Graham, after the death of her mother in 1871, lived with her grandfather, Mr. Woolridge, and her aunt, Mrs. T. M. Logan, wife of General T. M. Logan, then of Richmond, and in 1878 went to the Edge Hill School, near Charlottesville, conducted by the Misses Randolph, where, because of trouble with her eyes, it was necessary for her to have her lessons read to her; but notwithstanding this disadvantage her retentive memory and active and strong mind enabled her to be first in her classes. In 1887 she spent several months in Europe and in 1889-90 she lived there, completing by travel, observation and contact with ripened culture of the old countries the broad, comprehensive education for which such excellent foundation had been laid. She acquired accurate knowledge of French and German and ready access to the literature and learning of those languages which she utilized with thoroughness and discrimination.

June 21, 1898, she was married at the summer home of General Logan, in Buckingham county, to Judge S. C. Graham, of Tazewell. She had become a communicant of the Episcopal Church in 1881. Always she had been a busy and happy girl and woman. With her new surroundings and opportunities her life broadened and became brighter than ever. Born of long lines of people representing the highest there was of intellect and culture and social graces, and with her own exceptional advantages and acquirements, she was equipped fully to be an influence and useful in many directions. She was one of those who could move through life happily and cheerfully, with instinctive tact avoiding its entanglements and unnecessary annoyances, while ready to face issues when they arose with the dauntless courage and the fidelity to her ideals and her codes that she inherited. Her religion was of the kind that makes itself felt continually and does not need to be proclaimed. She hated cant and loved real righteousness and truth and purity, and in her life illustrated them. She could and did come in contact with men and women of many different kinds and take energetic and pleasant part in all the affairs of life and the world, disseminating the sunshine from her own soul and the delicate odor of her own virtues and taking no stain.

She was a member of the Colonial Dames and especially active in the Daughters of the Confederacy, but these were but small parts, comparatively, of the interests that attracted her ceaseless, dynamic energies of mind and body—energies, which never spared or restrained, probably caused her death in the midst of her happiness and usefulness. She shunned no task and to the last proved herself equal to every demand. Brilliant, of unflinching resources, a scholar of the classics and of contemporary thought and literature, she shone in any company; and as hostess in the conduct of her own household, as taking her part in public affairs, in church work and in the application of her endless charity, she met any emergency smiling, bright and competent. She loved her family, her Church, her State and people and to all of them was intensely loyal and devoted—a strong, pious, splendid Virginia gentlewoman, true to the records of her race.

She was buried at Tazewell, in the Jeffersonville Cemetery, on April 22nd, the services of the Church, being conducted by the Rev. C. W. Sydnor. She rests among the hills and the Highlanders she knew her husband loved, and she had learned to love with him. She leaves surviving her husband, Judge S. C. Graham; her daughter, Katherine E. Graham, eleven years old; her brother, Edwin P. Cox, of Richmond, and two half sisters, Mrs. V. H. Gottschalk, of Rolla, Missouri, and Mrs. Claude Botsford, of Chillicothe, Missouri, besides a family connection and a circle of friends extending throughout Virginia.

The Business Apostle of Peace

Manufacturers Record: Benjamin F. Bush, the president of the Missouri Pacific Railway, is attracting much attention in the West, which, judging from press reports, finds in him a new sort of railroad chief executive—one who, according to public estimation will "make good." He is pronounced for friendly relations between his company and the public, saying that such harmony must be established preliminary to fulfilling the task before him—the building up of the great system of which he has just become the official head, after a most successful term as president of the Western Maryland. He is quoted as saying: "The railroads are necessary to the public good, and the people and the railroads ought to be friendly;" also, "The first thing is to know that the people will not be too hard on us, and that the investors will get their money back with a reasonable addition."

Mr. Bush puts the situation tersely, and with force. What he says is true, and the people generally know it is the fact, but it is another thing to check demagogues who start up campaigns of railroad baiting for the purpose of carrying favor with voters who may not realize the position of the companies with respect to financing improvements and extensions. In some parts of the country the people and their representatives have attained a realization of the truth, and wholesale attacks upon the transportation companies have ceased, with the consequence that capital, which is always timid, has been reassured, and is now finding investment there; but in other places exactly contrary conditions exist, and it remains difficult to finance railroad enterprises.

It is most regrettable that in some few states such apparent hostility to railroad companies should continue. Every year that new lines and improvement are delayed scores a distinct loss to the section of country in which they are needed, but the loss cannot be measured by any part of time; it is incalculable. A year's delay in the building of a needed railroad may mean a five or ten year setback for the region which it would traverse. Immigration and settlement may be turned to other sections, where more liberal ideas prevail concerning transportation enterprises, with the result that they are settled and made many times more valuable, while the others remain in statu quo, or they may even recede; surely, as compared with the newly-settled sections, they are at a much greater advantage than they were previously.

There will be a vast deal of new railroad required in this country, especially in the South and Southwest, within the next five or ten years, and clearedhead, progressive men like Mr. Bush will do all they can to establish conditions favorable for securing such results. They will seek harmony first to get down to an understanding—a working basis—with the people, so that their work may proceed without hindrance. Conflicts are to be avoided. Every good business man knows this, and will go out of his way to escape them. They are consumers of time, energy and money, and when ended usually leave little, if any, gain to either side. The wise man in the workaday world of affairs is an apostle of peace, because he has neither time nor money to waste in fights which profit him naught.

Your Neighbors Experience.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley Kidney Pills. Mrs. E. G. Whiting, 360 Willow Street, Akron, O., says: "For sometime I had a very serious case of kidney trouble and I suffered with backaches and dizzy headaches. I had specks floating before my eyes and I felt all tired out and miserable. I saw Foley Kidney Pills advertised and got a bottle and took them according to directions and results showed almost at once. The pain and dizzy headaches left me, my eyesight became clear and today I can say I am a well woman, thanks to Foley Kidney Pills." J. E. Jackson.

The Month-old Chick

Chicks that are three or four weeks old, while past the critical stage of their existence, are not yet raised by any means. Many people look after their chicks pretty carefully until they are really safe from "infantile" disorders which are always liable to create havoc in the flock. In the first place, see that the chicks get plenty to eat. After they are three or four weeks old, chicks can scarcely eat too much, providing the food provided for them is of the right kind. As a rule, the more the chicks eat the faster and the better will they develop, although of course they must receive only wholesome foods and no "slops," etc. Variety in feeding is essential, and as many different kinds of grain as possible should be provided.

Supply meat and green food frequently, in addition to the grain feed. If possible, it is always well to give the chicks constant access to both meat and greens. They will not eat too much if they are accustomed to it gradually; otherwise, they are liable to overeat at first. For green, any kind of vegetables or grasses that the birds will eat with relish will be good for them. For animal food, green cut bone or ground beef scraps are probably best. Between these two, one is about as good as the other, depending upon local markets as to which one can be secured most cheaply.

Of course, cleanliness and proper sanitation are important. The coops and brooders must be kept scrupulously clean and free from filth. Chicks can not thrive in a filthy, foul-smelling atmosphere, to say nothing of the harbor such a place affords for the breeding of disease germs, lice and mites, etc.

Vermin must be closely guarded against. If neglected, they often cause more trouble and loss among month old chicks than any other cause. Use insect powder on the bodies of the chicks to kill the body lice. Spray or plant the coops with coal oil or with liquid lice killer to exterminate the red mites or lice which infest the coops.—Agricultural Epitomist.

A Leading California Druggist

Pasadena, Cal., Mar. 9, 1911. Foley and Co., Gentlemen—We have sold and recommended Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years. We believe it to be one of the most efficient expectorates on the market. Containing opiate or narcotics it can be given freely to children. Enough of the remedy can be taken to relieve a cold, as it has no nauseating results, and does not interfere with digestion. Yours very truly, C. H. Ward Druggist, C. L. Parsons, Sec. and Treas. Get the Original Foley Honey and Tar Compound in the yellow package, J. E. Jackson.

Farmers Institute

The Annual Meeting of the State Farmers Institute will be held in the city of Staunton, beginning on August the 9th, to 11th, inclusive. This will be an important meeting, as matters vitally affecting the Agricultural interest of the State will be under discussion, and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of farmers and representatives from the State at large, and especially from the Southwest.

Hurrah for The 4th of July

A Tournament and Coronation Ball has been suggested for the Fourth of July celebration at Tazewell, but the objection was raised that the present generation of young Knights would not be so active and energetic as their fathers; that the days of even the semblance of chivalry are far behind us, buried beneath the well forgotten splendor of the achievements of horse and lance; and that no contestants would present themselves for the coveted honors.

The management of the Fair Association is willing to give the young men a chance—not only this, but will leave it entirely with them. If they want a Tournament and Coronation Ball, then they must present their names to the Secretary by June 17th. On that date, if a sufficient number of names have been presented to make the contest interesting, the Tournament will be allowed to go on; if not, it will be declared off.

Young ladies of Burkes Garden, the Cove, Clear Fork, Thompson's Valley, Bluestone and other sections, call on your Knights Valiant to respond to this call, so their Queen may be crowned at the Ball on the night of the Fourth! Take a pride in your localities and see that your neighbors in the next valley are trampled in the dust by your noble warriors. If memory serves well, the honors were carried away the last Tournament by the Cove. This was several years ago. Do you mean to let the Cove keep these honors forever?

The Tournament will be open to contestants from Tazewell and adjoining counties. An entrance fee of $1.00 will be charged. The winner will be given the honor of crowning his Queen at the Ball. Besides this, a purse of $25.00 is offered by the Association, divided between the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th honors, as follows: $12.50, $6.25, $3.75 and $2.50. That novelty race will be detailed next week, as we haven't room this week. Watch the papers for it, because it may be worth $25.00 to you. TAZEWELL FAIR ASS'N.

Rescue the aching back. If it keeps on aching, trouble comes, backache is kidney ache. If you neglect the kidneys warning, look out for urinary trouble—diabetes. This Tazewell citizen will show you how to go to the rescue.

J. F. Ireson, of Tazewell, Va., says: "I gladly verify the statement I gave in 1907, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, for I still consider them the best kidney medicine to be had. My back ached and there were pains across my sides, these troubles being caused by weak kidneys. It was difficult for me to straighten after stooping and when I lifted, sharp twinges darted through my body. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Jackson's drug store and they soon made a complete cure. For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for United States.
