A Trip Made in 1877
Note—Before entering upon the subject matter as above headed, the writer will skeletonize his steamboat career prior to the starting on said trip.
About the first of June, 1870, when the public school vacation commenced in the city of Louisville, Ky., I was 14 years and 7 months of age and resided in the extreme west end of the city known as Portland. This port at that time was the head of navigation for the large steamboats that plied from Cincinnati and Louisville to New Orleans, as the Louisville Portland canal had not been enlarged.
For two generations all my ancestors had been rivermen and it was quite natural that I should have a predilection for that life. After school had closed I was given a levee clerkship by M. K. Louis Staib, who was the discharging clerk for the Louisville and Henderson U. S. Mail Lin.
M. K. Staib was also a "boss drayman" and hauled all the freight from the Portland wharf around the falls of the Ohio to the city wharf where it was re-loaded for Cincinnati and Pittsburg. I was given the salary of $5.00 per week. The mail line at that time consisted of three fine side wheel packet boats, viz: Tarascon, Grey Eagle and Morning Star. In the fall of the year, before my clerk years of service, and to say that I was proud of my promotion would be to express it mildly. Remained on this boat until the summer of 1871, when she was laid up on account of low water and we were transferred to the steamer Palestine and I was promoted to a second clerkship with a salary of $50 per month. In December, 1871, my mother, brother and self left Louisville on the new steamer Maria Louise to join my father in New Orleans, and there make our future home. In January, 1872, my father was chief engineer on the steamer John T. Moore and secured for me the third clerkship on that magnificent boat. Salary $75 per month. On account of low water the boat had to go to the bank in the spring and then followed, the trip to White River and St. Louis, which was published in The Times of Friday.
The "Moore" returned to St. Louis with a load of sugar and molasses and my mother, who was an invalid, and my brother took passage on her for the "Old Kentucky Home". My uncle, A. M. Moffett, then took me off the boat and placed me in his office, he being in the lumber business. There I was taught bookkeeping.
In September, 1872, I had the yellow fever and was then a "thorough" Southern chap. Returned to Kentucky in November, 1872, in time to witness the death of the dearest of all earthly friends, my mother. Returned to New Orleans in February, 1873, and was given the second clerkship on the John T. Moore at a salary of $200.00 per month. In May 1873, had the smallpox on board the "Moore," and was locked up in a room by Capt. Billy Boardman in order that the authorities at Shreveport would not send me to the pest house. Returned to Louisville in the summer of 1873 on the steamer John Kilgour. On this trip up seven men died from cholera, which was raging that summer. Returned to New Orleans in the fall and boated that season, also in the year 1874. In the winter of '75 and '76, was chief clerk on the steamer Ora, running from Monroe, La., to Bayou Bartholomew. Returned to New Orleans in May, 1876, and in June shipped on boat Fannie Tal-um as second clerk. This boat went through to Pittsburg and from there to St. Louis, and laid up the summer. I secured the third clerkship in the Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co on the steamer Lake Superior, and remained there until fall.
