know, but everybody says things at the college are in a muddle.

Some say the end is not yet, but no one professes to possess direct knowledge of any impending action on the part of the Board of Trustees, from the faculty, or from the students. There seems to be a spirit of unrest and opposition, and a feeling of expectancy that something is going to happen that will have a great effect in straightening out the imbroglio or will cause big changes at the college.

No action as far as known has been taken in regard to the hanging in effigy of President-elect F. W. Boatwright.

A member of the Board of Trustees, in discussing the matter, said there was really nothing, as far as he had been able to learn, indicating directly that the figure was intended as an effigy of that genleman, as nothing was found attached to it saying that it was intended for him.

to it saying that it was intended for him.

The placards, however, which were tacked up all around were of such a character as to leave no mistake on this score in the minds of all. Nothing has been dropped from the lips of the students to indicate that they were cognizant of the effigy having been placed in the grounds; indeed, all of them, when asked, deny any knowledge of the affair. The matter is looked on as being more grave than any of the actions of the students herefolore, and there is talk of a rigid investigation.

on THE ALERT.

It is said, also, that the faculty are on the alert for any further trouble, and will nip in the bud any concerted action on the part of the students to make any additional demonsration, as is rumored will take place to-night.

The students deny any knowledge of any further schemes on their part, and say they believe it is without foundation, but nevertheless the rumor is in the air around the college.

Some of the professors still affect indifference in the matter, and speak of it as a joke, while others will talk freely on every other matter except the trouble at the institution.

It has been several times mentioned that the objection on the part of the faculty to the new president was not alone on account of his age. What the objection is, however, they have declined to state.

It is said that one of the faculty who is most opposed to Professor Hoatwright was heretofew his earnest backer, and assisted him in securing the European university courses which, as much as anything else, fitted him for the new position.

The fact is frequently referred to now anything else, fitted him for the new position.

The fact is frequently referred to now that Professor Boatwright on his return from Europe superceeded Professor L. N. Hasseieff as professor of modern languages through the influences which are now most bitterly opposed to his present advancement.

It is understood also that resignations will take place before the meeting of the board in June. A member of the board said he had heard rumprs of intended resignations by some of the professors, but thought they would think better of it later on.

Said he: I know of few better places than a professorship at the college. They receive, some of them, as high as $2,500 a year, and have a home furnished them. They work a few hours a day and are undisturbed in their opportunities for literary pursuits or social pleasures. I do not believe these gentlemen will be quick to surrender such good positions when there are so many able men seeking places.

Being asked if the board would not be pleased if rome of the present faculty voluntarily resigned, he replied that he could not speak for the board in that regard, but he said if they offered their resignations the board would not he state resignations the board would not hesitate to accept them.

Dr. Wythe Davis, who, it is said, was one of the four members of the board who refused to make unanimous the election of Professor Boatwright, said yesterday that he knew nothing of the subsequent trouble at the college, except what he had seen in the newspapers, and he had read the printed reports with much interest.

he had read the printed reports with much interest.

When asked concerning the controversy between Dr. Ryland and Mr. Conway R. Sands, as to the vote by which Profes-sor Boatwright was elected, he declined sor Boatwright was elected, he declined to make any statement.

When asked if he knew exactly the circumstances of the vote, he said he was not clear on that point, and smilingly remarked that the banquet which followed the meeting was so pleasant and congenial that it was very hard to recall anything of an unpleasant character that occurred before.

genial that it was very hard to recall anything of an unpleasant character that occurred before.

Professor Boatwright has not yet been officially notified of his election, and while the seething waves dash around him he is entirely serene, and smiles as brightly in response to every salutation as if not even a gentle-zephyr had ruffled the bosom of the waters about him. The present disturbance at Richmond College recalls a similar and more serious state of affairs at Harvard University but a short time ago, when a young man was elected to the presidency of that old and honored institution.

The students painted the handsome works of art about the grounds in a brilliant carmine hue and raised cain generally. They even pulled from its pedestal the statue of the founder of the institution, and generally made vandals of themselves.

Harvard, however, still survives, and the young man is a very popular president with all the students.

A Let'er From Dr. Ryiand.

A Let er From Dr. Ryland.

A Let er From Br. Ryland.

The following open letter to Mr. Sands in reply to his, published in yesterday's Times, was sent to The Times by Dr. Ryland last night:

Richmond, Va., Dec. 20,1894.

Conway R. Sands, Esq.:

My Dear Sir,—On Tuesday last you addressed me, through The Times, and on the following day I replied. To-day you write a second letter, and it is hereby acknowledged.

In reply to your Tuesday's letter I acknowledged.

In reply to your Tuesday's letter I gave the endosement of the president of the board of trustees to the verity and accuracy of my record as secretary of the board, at its meeting December 11th, I did not wish to go into matters which, in my judgment, were not pertinent to that record, and thus prolong a controversy, and so turned your "other facts" off as pleasantly as I knew how. In alluding to the minority as the "Big Four" I meant no unkindness. I was sincere when I spoke of them as "loved and honored."

when I spoke of them as loved and honored."

Misinterpreting my motives and evidently presuming upon my indisposition to discuss the private affairs of the board before the public, you this morning accuse me of disingenuousness and indirection. I am grieved that you have such a spirit, but as you see fit to repeat your statements and characterize me thus. I will now answer you in no uncertain manner.

THE END IS NOT YET.

RICHMOND COLLEGE STILL IN A

STATE OF EXCITEMENT.

A Discussion of Some of the Causes That Led up to the Trouble—Prof. Boatwright Remains Serens.

The disturbance of the waters at Richmond College have not altogether abated.
Just what the trouble is no one seems oknow, but everybody says things at the college are in a muddle.

Some say the end is not yet, but no one professes to possess direct knowledge of any impending action on the part of the Roard of Trustees, from the faculty, or from the students. There seems to be compared to give an independent and sincere, as the four who voted no. I repel the insinuation, that manhood, independence and sincered the responsibility. For myself I believe the twenty-seven who stood up and were counted and recorded as voting in the affirmative were as homest and intelligent, as independent and sincere, as the four who voted no. I repel the insinuation that manhood, independence and sincered the part of the Roard of Trustees, from the faculty, or from the students. There seems to be a few and independence and sincered the part of the Roard of Trustees, from the faculty, or from the students. There seems to be a few and independence and sincered the part of the Roard of Trustees, from the faculty, or from the students. There seems to be a few and in you to desire to place me in such a position. I will say further, that it was surprise at your desired to place me in such a position. I will say further, that it was surprise at your first demand that led me in my reply to do you the kindness to conceal what I was sulling to believe the under the surprise at your first demand that led me in my reply to do you the kindness to conceal what I was surprise at your first demand that led me in my reply to do you the kindness to conceal what I was sulling to believe the under the say willing to believe the me and your second demand these from me all doubt as to your second demand these from me all doubt as to your second demand takes from me all doubt as to your se tion that manhood, independence and sincerity found their home only in the hearts of four out of thirty-one who cast their votes.

But the point I desire to emphasize is, that the secretary could only give his record, and that he had no right to presume to interpret the influences or processes by which the meeting arrived at its conclusion. Except by yourself, I am sure this will be universally admitted.

But you go further and base your charge of disingeneruousness upon the "fact" that I concealed a vote taken by ayes and noes, and which, if reported, would have exhibited Mr. Boatwaright's weakness and the strength of the minority. In reply I have to say that the president, Dr. Curry, and I as secretary are clear that there was no such vote. There was but one vote for the nominee, and th's vote was taken by rising and counting. The rising vote was taken in place of a recorded vote, as proposed by one of the members, and which was objected to as without precedent in the board. The proposition to make the election unanimous was not pressed, but withdrawn on the ground that it might place some member in a false position. I have said there was but one vote for president. The presiding officer says the same thing. If I am wrong the board must say so. I shall not deviate from my conviction in obedience to your unbrotherly instruction. On this single vote the count showed 27 to 4. Whether the twenty-seven will reverse their action at your instance and contess, after hours of discussion and deliberation, that they did not know what they were doing is beyond my belief. In spite of the claim you obviously make that you and three others of the board have greater wisdom, integrity, sincerity and love for the college than the rest of your brethren, I will presume to say that they are your equals in every respect.

Now as to your "other facts." I can show them to be without foundation. You say. "Had you published all the facts, or had those facts done justice to those members of the board who were desirous of retaining in t done to impair the system of schools nothing to interfere with the work of any professor." You know full well that not one thing was done or said to bear out your idea.

Again you make charges as follows: That at the annual meeting in June, second day, a motion was made to elect a president, which was defeated. At the close of that day the question was asked publicly whether anything more of importance would come before the board. The answer by the secretary was: "I know of nothing." Under this information many of the members went home. On the third day, when there were only fifteen present, without notifying the trustees or even assembling the city members of the board, the chalrman appointed a committee of five, consisting entirely of ministers, to make nominations to be submitted to the semi-annual session—a session where usually only routine business is transacted.

It is difficult to conceive of a statement with a busis of truth better handled for making a wrong impression than this. All of these points were talked over and thoroughly disproved in the recent meeting. But I will again reply in detail:

1. The Trustees have never attempted to elect a president without having a committee to nominate and withoug giving due noticer When the question was ejrung upon the second day of the last annual meeting, without these precautions, it was promptly voted down. This accords with the traditional fairness of the board.

2. When the secretary was incurred of as to business, he could only reply in regard to official routine. He is not always consuited about what new business will come up at the meetings.

3. The meeting the third day was the continuance of the regular sessions of the board, a separate or special call of members, as you intimate should have been had, is never made from day to day. The members who departed after the second day left no excuse, nor did the board know they would not return. More than double a quorum was present, and the board know they would not return hore than double a quorum was pres were not "personal letters," but an official notification.

5. The semi-annual meeting has frequently been chosens for canvassing and settling such questions. It is the annual meeting that is crowded with "routine work," and "usually" the semi-annual meetings are almost wholly given up to general subjects. Mr. Wilson was elected at a semi-annual meeting. The meeting held on the Hith instant was the largest meeting for a long while, there being five more members present than at the annual meeting in June.

6. The committee was composed of ministers. That is the one redeeming statement made by you that is not "misleading." They were ministers—ministers founded the college and ministers are always going to be its steadfast friends. Rev. A. H. Sands was for years one of our most honored and useful members. It comes with sorrow to me that any such man or any member of this committee should be discounted by the son of a minister. But it is worth noting that this committee of ministers did not nominate a minister for president, but a young layman—a godly, useful member of the church of which you are deacon.

It will be clearly seen from these anawers, all of which can be proved from the ground. I repeat here what I said in my first article, that for faithful, patient, thorough work. I have never seen the meeting of the lith instant surpassed. If I chose to give "other facts," such as you gave (which are in the main opinions or impressions), I could say that from "start to finish" the nomination of Mr. Boatwright grew steadily upon the board. His elecion was the result if conviction.

You intimate that in some special sense you represent the alumning of the colleges.

board. His election was the result if conviction.
You intimate that in some special sense you represent the alumni of the college. I wish to remind you that there are twenty-two of this honored band on our board, and there is assurance that every one but four is a Boatwright man. By what rule do you work out your representative character?

I think you can no longer say that I have failed to answer your "statements" "seriatim," and in justice to me will acknowledge that you are "enlightened," and that the "misleading statement which unconnected would have created a false impression of the acts of our body" was made by you. Yours truly,

C. H. RYLAND.

TROUBLE FOR MR. CLARK

CHARGES OF UNPROFESSIONAL CON DUCT AGAINST HIS FIRM.

And the Senate Recalls His Confirmation as District Judge of Tennessee Pend-. ing an Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 .- The Senate went into executive session to-day after its meeting and recalled the confirmation of Charles D. Clark, nominated to be district judge for the Eastern and Middle districts of Tennessee on the 17th instant, and who was confirmed Tuesday. This prevents the issuance of the commission to the recently confirmed judge, and leaves the case still pending before the Senate. The fact that the Senate should go into executive session almost the moment the session convened indicated that something unusual has occurred, and as soon as the doors were closed Senator Harris made a statement to the Senate.

He said the nomination of Mr. Clark had been endorsed by the Bar of Tennessee, and confirmation promptly followed, so that there might be no delay in filling the vacancy existing on the bench. dle districts of Tennessee on the 17th

CAUSE OF THE RECALL.

Vesterday, however, Mr. Harris said he received an invitation to call upon the Attorney-General, and the official laid before him charges that had been preferred against the firm of which Mr. Clark was a member by a prominent legal firm in New York city. These charges were that the Tennessee firm had been guilty of unprofessional conduct in accepting a fee on both sides of the same case. The Attorney-General thought that charges of this nature, coming from a reputable firm, should be investigated before the commission should be issued to the nominee, and in this opinion both Senators Harris and Bate agreed. It was for the purpose of puting the matter before the Senate that this executive session had been called. Mr. Bate corroborated what Mr. Harris said, and the Senate thought that no harm would come to Mr. Clark, were he not implicated in the charge, by having the whole matter investigated.

MR. HOAR'S OBJECT LESSON. MR. HOAR'S OBJECT LESSON.

Mr. Hoar deprecated the undue haste that had been recently displayed in confirming nominations to judicial offices, and said that this case, whether the charges were true or false, should suggest to the Senate the advisability of permitting the public to have proper notice of the appointment of men to office by allowing a reasonable time to elapse before taking action.

The case was referred to the Committee on Judiciary, with instructions to investigate and report, and meanwhile the Attorney-General was informed of the action of the Senate, and instructed to hold up the commission.
