

JUSTICE JOHN'S COURT.

A BABY'S EFFORT TO RECONCILE FATHER AND MOTHER FAILS.

The Shooting Case of John Williams by Leslie Page is Sent to the Grand Jury. The Docket Devoid of Females.

Justice John is thoroughly an appreciative man, and little things make him very happy. Indeed, he is childlike in his guileless simplicity, and in the temperament that renders him easily susceptible to the fullest extent of ecstasy or plunges him into the dismal depths of despair.

As a general rule, Justice John is happy. He is optimistic in his views, sees the sunny side of everything, and is so much better off than the people he comes most in contact with.

Yesterday morning, however, the eminent judge and jury was in a perfect glee. He did not throw up his hat and cheer, nor did he offer three cheers in the courtroom for John C. Small, but he looked loving and enthusiastically at his new annual base-ball pass and began dismissing cases so fast that it looked as if he were as happy as a school boy to go to school.

The base-ball season opens to-day, and it is just as well for the lawyers to know that when the home-going arguments will produce a case, and that all persons caught "rooting" for any outside club will be sent down for sixty days on the first offense.

For the first time in many months there was not a single female on the docket, and only one woman was present as a witness, although there were several in the audience, and owing to their presence Justice John put on the morning session absolutely on reform movements.

A HEARTLESS HUSBAND. Julius Lee, a white man, was charged with assaulting and threatening to cut his wife, Mrs. Cora Lee, with a knife.

Lee was brought on just getting over a terrible spree. His face was red, his hair disheveled, and his eyes were bleared. He is a young and well-built man, and ordinarily would be called handsome, but yesterday morning he could not succeed in having made him to inflexibly on the grounds of personal attractiveness.

Mrs. Lee came into court leading by the hand a sweet little girl of possibly three or four years. The little girl was dressed in a fresh white petticoat dress, her rosy cheeks and blue eyes looked laughingly from beneath her big white stay hat, trimmed with apple-blossoms, and her glossy hair was waving and curling in a pretty golden ring about her shoulders. She was a child that no really human man or woman could help loving to look upon, and at the first sight of her father she clasped her tiny hands and cried: "Daddy, my papa, oh, mamma, daddy's my papa."

But the mother cast no glance at the husband beside her, and the little one stopped tugging at her dress, as if suddenly she knew by instinct that something was wrong.

"Wasn't Lee here a short time ago on a similar charge?" asked Justice John, kindly, and to this Mrs. Lee quietly nodded her assent.

"And didn't you beg me to give him another chance?" And to this query again Mrs. Lee bowed her head in acknowledgment.

"And didn't I tell you that I hated to do it, and that you would regret it?" he asked.

Again the assent came, although to the trembling lips no words were trusted. The head could sign the jail warrant, the heart dared not even then be heard. The eyelids trembled, as the hurrying clouds that bring the floods of rain-drops, move restlessly in the darkened skies.

Mrs. Lee turned to go; the little one, still holding her mother's hand, reached her other equally. The little girl went to the heaven-made jeweled clasp that through the years has caught up and bound a thousand human hearts.

The little outstretched arm was just too short to reach them both; the distance a trifle too great, the breach a little too wide. Her time was not yet.

A kiss thrown from her dimpled hand was the baby's last good-bye, and without a glance from the wife, the husband walked back to his cell. He began his service of sixty days in jail.

THE SHOOTING AFFAIR. The case of Leslie Page, charged with shooting John Williams, both white, was called and given a hearing. The testimony showed that the boys were not good friends, although they belonged to the same crowd of boys and young men and played ball together in the afternoon of the occurrence. Page, it seems, began a quarrel with Williams, and was choked by the latter. Page then drew a revolver and secured a shot-gun, and coming up behind Williams, within about seventy-five yards, he fired at him.

A number of the shot penetrated Williams' coat and hat, but none entered his body.

Several witnesses testified to the above facts, and Justice John sent the case on to the grand jury.

John Jones (colored) was charged with stealing a coat from a store on West Grace street, and says that his room was entered by a false key. The coat was recovered at a pawnshop, but Jones was not identified as the man who pawned it. It was discharged from the court.

In the case of A. Schwane, charged with cursing and abusing H. J. Dallman, a decision was rendered by Justice John to the effect that a creditor has a right to prevent a debtor from collecting any money or anywhere he finds the debtor, unless it be to the disturbance of public worship.

Mr. Schwane, who keeps a saloon at Fourth and Broad streets, was presented with a bill by Mr. Dallman in his own saloon. Schwane objected to the time of night at which Dallman called, although it was during his business hours, and Dallman swore that Schwane cursed him, and the case was continued to get another man who was present to decide the right.

A FEW MINOR CASES. Arthur Hackett, a negro youth, was fined $2.50 for fighting in the street. William Harman (white) was charged with being drunk. Harman, when asked when he worked, said: "I have worked on for two years."

"Yes," retorted Justice John, "but it's been so much more than that on that I will fine you this time."

"Oh, I know that," said Justice John; "you will take anything; you will take a drink, too. You had better go down for a while."

that her gold watch, which was stolen from her some time ago, was in the possession of John Scheer, who conducts a jewelry store at No. 183 East Main Street. When Sergeant John Hall went to Scheer's place yesterday morning, he inquired for the watch, and he no longer had it. He was told that it had been sold to a small white boy, but suspecting afterwards that the boy had not come into possession of it, he had returned it to the youth.

He told the watch in half an hour. A witness, although there were several in the audience, and owing to their presence Justice John put on the morning session absolutely on reform movements.

THE ALUMNI BANQUET. Preparations for the Reunion on Friday Night.

Arrangements are practically complete for the banquet and reunion of the Alumni Society of the University of Virginia, which will take place to-morrow night at the Jefferson Hotel.

The dinner is to embrace twelve courses, and covers will be laid for between one and two hundred. It will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and will be served in the handsome dining-room on the south side of the hotel, which will be profusely decorated with the college colors.

The menu will be printed in the dark blue book of the year, and at each plate will be a dainty rosette of the college colors, which each gentleman will be expected to don.

The Jefferson orchestra will play during the dinner. Judge James C. Lamb will preside at the banquet, and act as toastmaster. Secretary Herbert will probably be present and respond to one of the toasts. Senator Frank R. Robertson, President of the Virginia State Bar Association, Dr. J. E. Hooper, and Professor Kent and other members of the board of trustees will also be present.

The guests will assemble in the reception-room, and will be invited to take an appetizer in the saloon, where they must mix themselves.

For this purpose there will be three large punch bowls, one of which will be filled with sprigs of mint, one with cracked ice, and the other with julep, duly sweetened.

Meeting of the A. P. V. A. The quarterly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, was held Tuesday afternoon at the rooms of the Virginia Historical Society, with a good attendance.

Resolutions were adopted expressing the sorrow of the board at the death of Mrs. James D. McIntire and Mrs. E. B. Addison, two valuable members of the board.

Mrs. Bagby presented a report of her recent official visit to Jamestown, stating that the grounds were in good order, and that preparations were being made for the reception of the Association and its friends on the occasion of their annual excursion, May 13th. Mrs. James Lyons reported that the steamer Pocahontas had been chartered for that occasion.

The report of the committee to prepare the Year-Book of the Association was received, and adopted. The book will be ready by the middle of next May. It is a complete history of the Association, and will be distributed free of charge.

The board, by a unanimous vote, directed the corresponding secretary to return to Mrs. Mary J. Galt the thanks of the Association for her valuable work at Jamestown.

Supreme Court of Appeals. Harvey vs. Anderson, et al., No. 192. Further argued by Major A. B. Russell for appellant, and Messrs. John Rutherford and Rosewell Page for appellees, and submitted.

Emmons vs. Piddock, No. 103. Submitted. To-day is opinion-day, and the race-track has been a unanimous vote, directed by the board, to be concluded in time, Norris vs. Jones, et al., No. 106, will be argued, and then Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company vs. Clowes, No. 104. Bail vs. Orlanbach, No. 105, has been disposed of, and it is hardly probable that both 106 and 107 will be completed this week.

Monday, the docket in order, beginning with Morris vs. Deane (105), after the preceding cases are disposed of.

Smooth "Articles." Two young men, named R. L. Cunningham and James Bennett, who came here from Baltimore about a month ago, left town Tuesday, and are mourned by sundry citizens. A prominent city official is numbered among the victims. Monday day he was approached by Cunningham, the gentleman had met a few days before. In the note Bennett represented himself to be a brother Mason, and requesting the loan of four dollars, and promising to return it on the following day. This he failed to do.

Two Small Fires. Two alarms of fire were turned in yesterday. The first was a small alarm, caused by a fire in the kitchen of the house at No. 110 Third Street. The loss was trifling.

The second alarm was at 1:50 P. M., and was occasioned by a blaze in the grocery store of Charles Gunst, No. 45 Broad Avenue. The loss in this case also was trifling.

Reading-Rooms in Fulton. The new reading-rooms at No. 422 Denny street, Fulton, were thrown open to the public on Monday evening. The rooms are beautifully arranged and furnished, and supplied with an excellent collection of reading matter. They are under the direction of the following gentlemen: Henry J. Harrison, Thomas Williamson, Henry Lee Valentine, R. Nelson, Sam P. Waddell, and W. T. Creekmur.

Workman Knocked Scholes. One of the men who is at work tearing down the old Theatre was struck by a falling plank yesterday morning, and knocked senseless. Restoratives were applied, and the man was soon able to get to work.

LOST OR FOUND. LOST—HAVING LOST TWO SHARES of stock of the RICHMOND PERPETUAL BUILDING ASSOCIATION, No. 206, this is to caution the public against trading for same, and have applied to the association for recovery.

Recovered Her Watch. Mary Anderson, who is also known as Mary Butler, a colored girl, a few days ago lodged complaint with the detectives when told by an officer.

Sergeant Gibson has a fine, heavy gold pair of spectacles which he thinks has been stolen from somebody in the city. He wants the owner to come for them.
