

RICHMOND AGAIN LOST.

THE LOCALS WERE UNABLE TO SOLVE LIPP'S DELIVERY.

Gilpatrick and Dillon Were Hit Freely by the Visitors—The Champions Fielded Very Poorly.

After the game Tobias Tibbs told me that he had passed through an earthquake and an Indian outbreak, but that he had rather a nice time without a bride, or bestride a post-grudge broncho than witness another such game of ball as the one Richmond played Roanoke yesterday.

There were three thousand proud roanoke present when Empire Clins brought his two hundred and ten pounds of healthy avowpounds out of the club-house, and took his station behind the plate, and I said the roanoke were proud. Well, so they were; but, alas! it proved to be a false pride. Pride is all right, if it is of the right kind, but the pride that induces a man to mope up the carpet with his brains because there is nothing left for him to do but labor, is the kind that Lucifer had when he betted the heavenly convention, and went over to the red-hot misery.

This is the kind of pride the local roanoke have.

LACK OF CONSISTENCY.

Instead of encouraging the team in the hour of adversity, instead of remembering the past, the fans lost heart, hope, and courage, and instead of cheering the champions, and in a dozen ways proved that ingratitude is the chief characteristic of their composite souls.

Well, I will admit that the game was wonderful to the credit of the pitcher of the team. I left an unpleasant taste in the mouth, such a taste as I generally have on the second day of January or the fifth day of July; but still this is no reason why myself or any one else should forsake the local, for the pennant is to be won, all must get together, fight together, and if it need be lose together. It is a case of united we stand and divided we don't.

Now for the game. Particulars are painful, and not a little mortifying, but the pill has got to be swallowed, and it is not sugar-coated. So here goes:

HOW THE GAMES WENT. The score was 14 to 6, and Richmond is indebted to Wrigley's poor work at third for one-half of these runs. The visitors had Lipp in the box, and I am sorry to say he was exceedingly fish in the matter of allowing hits to be made off of his do-very. While Roanoke pounded Dillon and Gilpatrick around the enclosure in a manner that was distressing, Richmond could not hit. If Roanoke could, why go further? Surely this lets the yellow secret out of the black bag, but hold—there is yet another thorn in the flesh.

POOR FIELDING.

The champions refused to field the ball properly—that is to say, they made errors; while, with the exception of Wrigley, Roanoke persisted in playing a beautiful fielding game. If the visitors can hold their present form up to the end of the season, they don't seem to know how to do anything else, I am sorry to say.

The score was as follows:

RICHMOND. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Kain, r. f. 4 0 0 1 3 1 0 Pender, r. f. 4 1 2 1 1 3 0 Wood, l. f. 5 1 2 3 0 0 0 Groves, c. f. 2 2 0 0 0 0 0 Williams, c. f. 2 0 0 0 0 0 0 Sullivan, 2b. 4 1 1 0 11 0 0 Tate, c. f. 4 1 2 2 0 5 2 0 Gochnaur, 2b. 2 0 1 1 1 0 0 Trull, r. f. 2 0 1 1 1 0 0 Lipp, p. 3 2 1 0 0 4 0

Totals. 28 14 7 17 27 11 5

ROANOKE. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Cockman, 2b. 5 3 2 0 1 3 0 Grove, l. f. 5 2 2 0 0 5 0 Williams, c. f. 2 2 0 0 0 0 0 Wrigley, s. s. 5 2 2 0 0 3 3 Sullivan, 2b. 4 1 1 0 11 0 0 Tate, c. f. 4 1 2 2 0 5 2 0 Gochnaur, 2b. 2 0 1 1 1 0 0 Trull, r. f. 2 0 1 1 1 0 0 Lipp, p. 3 2 1 0 0 4 0

Totals. 38 14 17 27 11 5

Score by innings: 1-0, 2-0, 3-0, 4-0, 5-0, 6-0, 7-0, 8-0, 9-0.

Summary: Earned runs—Richmond, 2; Roanoke, 6. Two-base hits—Roanoke, 3; Richmond, 1. Stolen bases—Richmond, 1; Roanoke, 2. Errors—Richmond, 1; Roanoke, 2. Time of game—one hour and forty-five minutes. Umpire, Kluge.

Games Yesterday. At Richmond, 6; Roanoke, 14. At Lynchburg, 18; Petersburg, 9. At Portsmouth, 6; Norfolk, 8.

Games won and lost by each club to each other club:

Table showing games won and lost between Richmond and other clubs.

Standing of the Clubs. Played, Won, Lost, P. C.

At Roanoke: Richmond vs. Roanoke. At Portsmouth: Lynchburg vs. Portsmouth. At Petersburg: Norfolk vs. Petersburg.

BEHIND THE BAT. Woodruff, formerly of Baltimore, has been signed by Wells.

As an umpire, Betts is all right, all right, his work yesterday was utterly impartial, and he was master of the field, as all umpires should be, from the call of "play ball" till the game terminates—Norfolk Pilot.

Umpire Wood, of the league staff, officiated yesterday, and his work was, perhaps, as all human umpires must do, not showed any partiality and apparently tried to hold the scale of justice even—Lynchburg News.

The champions will leave for Roanoke to-night.

Wood was guilty of a display of temper yesterday, and also of some shabby work when he interfered with Williams in the first inning, and prevented his throwing Pender out at second. This gave Richmond two runs, which they would otherwise never have gotten. We want to win, but in an honorable manner. Pender and Wood were way on yesterday. Roanoke's work yesterday was poor.

The poor Farmers have begun to lose again. Pender was very sore over the game. Sweeney was strictly in the game. The purse for the players, provided they win the pennant, is growing.

The following amounts have been so far subscribed: A. Saks & Co., $50.00; H. L. Valentine, $10.00; Taylor & Brown, $10.00; P. M. Boykin, $10.00; W. H. Cunningham, $10.00; Samuel Rosenfeld, $2.50.

HALLMAN LOST THE GAME. He Was Wild and Portsmouth Suffered Another Defeat.

NORFOLK, VA., April 18.—Special.—The third of the series of games between Norfolk and Portsmouth was played this afternoon on the Portsmouth grounds in the presence of about three thousand as crazy cranks as ever entered a ball ground. They were booming over with enthusiasm, which was, however, in good temper.

The game, barring a few costly errors, was first-class. Hallman lost the game in the first inning. He was wild and lost control of the ball. Leach was substituted, but his support was not equal to that given Schmidt.

There were no special features, except the heavy hitting of Reeman and the superb base-running of Norfolk's crack-a-jack, Captain McFarland, who has been under good control, and is paying great attention to team work, and is discouraging individual brilliancy.

There is no mistake that Norfolk this year will go for the pennant with both feet up, and the people of this city expect fine results and will give liberal support. The enthusiasm to-night is at high-water mark. Score:

PORTSMOUTH. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Glenn, r. f. 4 1 2 0 1 0 0 Marr, 1b. 4 0 0 0 0 0 0 Burke, 2b. 5 0 0 1 3 0 0 Hollins, c. f. 4 1 0 0 5 0 0 Hargrove, c. f. 3 1 3 0 2 0 0 Brown, l. f. 4 1 0 0 5 0 0 Hall, 2b. 5 0 1 0 2 4 2 Helman, s. s. 3 1 0 0 3 1 0 Hallman, p. 1 0 0 0 2 0 0 Leach, p. 1 0 0 0 0 0

Totals. 37 6 7 12 24 12 5

NORFOLK. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Stephenson, l. f. 4 3 0 0 2 0 1 Armstrong, c. f. 4 1 0 0 3 1 0 Turner, 1b. 4 1 2 0 10 0 Langford, s. s. 5 0 1 0 1 0 0 Wentz, 2b. 4 0 0 0 1 1 0 Brown, l. f. 4 1 0 0 5 0 0 Redding, r. f. 2 2 0 0 1 0 0 Schmidt, p. 3 0 0 0 4 0 0

Totals. 35 8 7 0 27 16 5

Summary: Earned runs—Portsmouth, 1; Norfolk, 1. Two-base hits—Reeman (3), Turner (2), Stolen bases—Glenn, Hall, and Leach; Stevenson, McFarland (2), Armstrong, and Redding. Double plays—Hallman, Hall, and Marr. Base on balls—Hallman, 3; Leach, 4; Schmidt, 2. Hit by pitched ball—Reeman, Helman, Helman, Leach (2), Glenn. Struck out—Hallman, 2; Leach, 3; Schmidt, 2. Wild pitch—Schmidt, 1. Time of game—Two hours and ten minutes. Umpire—Betts.

WON ALL THREE. Lynchburg Again Proved Too Much for the Farmers.

LYNCHBURG, VA., April 18.—Special.—Lynchburg won the game from Petersburg by heavy batting in the first two innings. Kitson was batted out of the box in the first inning. Kane took his place and was found with equal ease. The score was:

LYNCHBURG. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Pickering, l. f. 6 1 3 0 3 0 1 Leahy, s. s. 6 1 2 0 0 0 0 Fear, r. f. 5 2 0 0 0 0 0 McDann, 2b. 5 2 0 0 1 2 1 Schabel, c. f. 6 1 1 0 6 0 0 Smith, c. f. 5 3 2 1 2 0 0 Little, 1b. 5 2 4 0 9 12 0 0 Evans, 2b. 4 2 1 0 0 0 0 McFarland, p. 4 2 1 0 0 5 0

Totals. 45 18 20 2 27 15 8

ROANOKE. A. B. R. H. S. O. A. E. Shonta, 2b. 5 0 0 0 0 0 2 Little, l. f. 4 2 0 0 1 1 2 Dandison, s. s. 5 2 1 0 3 10 0 Brodie, r. f. 4 1 4 0 2 0 0 McGann, c. f. 5 0 0 0 3 1 2 Breen, 1b. 5 1 0 0 0 2 1 Keefe, r. f. 5 0 0 0 4 1 0 Powers, c. f. 2 0 0 0 4 1 0 Kane, p. 2 3 0 0 0 3 1

Totals. 44 9 6 0 27 18 8

SCORE BY INNINGS. 1-0, 2-1, 3-1, 4-1, 5-1, 6-1, 7-1, 8-1, 9-1.

Summary: Earned runs—Lynchburg, 1; Petersburg, 2. Two-base hits—Lynchburg, 3; Petersburg, 1. Stolen bases—Lynchburg, 3; Petersburg, 1. Errors—Lynchburg, 1; Petersburg, 2. Time of game, two hours.

BOSTON BADLY BEATEN. The Giants Turn the Tables on the Senators—Orlino Defeat Bridgemoor.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., April 18.—Philadelphia played all around Boston to-day in the presence of 14,000 spectators, and won by a score of 11 to 1.

Score: R. H. E. Boston..... 00402000-6 5 1 2 Philadelphia..... 00340004-11 12 2

Batteries—Mahn and Ryan; Taylor and Clements.

BALTIMORE, 6; BROOKLYN, 2. BALTIMORE, MD., April 18.—Dr. Arlington Pond was the star performer in the closing game of the Brooklyn series, and pitched out a game for the champions.

Score: R. H. E. Baltimore..... 00402000-6 5 1 2 Brooklyn..... 01100000-2 5 1 0

Batteries—Pond and Robinson; Payne, Gumbert, and Grim.

WASHINGTON, 7; WASHINGTON, 6. WASHINGTON, April 18.—New York turned the tables on Washington to-day and won through bad errors by the home team. Attendance, 3,600.

Score: R. H. E. New York..... 200011200-7 10 3 2 Washington..... 12000000-6 9 2 2 up to the seventh inning, when the home team found their batting eyes, and knocked Foreman out of the box. Goar, who relieved him, fared no better. The locals tried three pitchers, all of whom were hit freely.

Batteries—Meekin and Wilson; Gilroy, Malarky, and McGuire.

Score: R. H. E. Pittsburgh..... 311102010-9 17 8 Cincinnati..... 002010241-11 12 2

Batteries—Killen, Goar, J. Foreman, and Merritt; Ehret, Foreman, Davis, and Vaughan.

LOUISVILLE, 5; CHICAGO, 3. LOUISVILLE, KY., April 18.—It was not until the ninth inning, when the Colonels tied the score on Miller's three-base hit; Morrison, who had singled, coming in; and a two-bagger by O'Brien scored Miller, and O'Brien came in on Clarke's single. Two of Chicago's scores were made on home runs by Friend and Dallen. Attendance, 2,600.

Score: R. H. E. Louisville..... 000200000-5 8 3 Chicago..... 000020010-3 9 3

Batteries—Hall, Weyhing, and Warner; Friend and Kitzgrade.

Standing of the Clubs. CLUB. W. L. P. C. Washington..... 2 1 .667 Chicago..... 2 1 .667 Boston..... 2 1 .667 Philadelphia..... 2 1 .667 Cleveland..... 1 2 .333

Games Scheduled for To-Day. Louisville at Cincinnati. Chicago at St. Louis. Monday is an open date.

McCabe's Won. They Proved to be Too Much for Randolph-Macon.

ASHLAND, VA., April 18.—Special.—McCabe's University School team, of Richmond, and the team from Randolph-Macon College crossed bats on the college campus this afternoon in the presence of about five hundred enthusiastic "rooters" and "fans." The game was highly exciting up to the sixth inning, when the visiting team were guilty of several "yaller" plays, which resulted in three runs for the school boys, and gave them a lead that was never lost.

McCabe's put up one of the stiffest games ever played here, and during the entire contest were guilty of only two errors. They also batted like fiends when hits were most needed.

The home team could do nothing at all with Hines, only three hits being made with his delivery. Doolley carried off the laurels for the college boys, accepting five difficult chances without a very good error. Mr. Scott umpired a very good game, his decisions being generally satisfactory to both teams.

Score by innings: 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9.

Randolph-Macon..... 02100002-5 McCabe's..... 01110245-14

Summary: Earned runs—McCabe's, 7. Two-base hits—Withers, Laughon, Hill, McCabe, Holland. Left on base—McCabe's, 1; Randolph-Macon, 4. Hit by pitched ball—Kerr, Hill. Base pitches—Hines, 1; Robertson, 2.

on balls—Off Hines, 2; off Robertson, 2. Time of game—one hour and thirty-five minutes. Umpire, Scott.

Squire's School Wins. Squire's School and Masonic Home boys crossed bats yesterday evening, resulting in a victory for Squire's School. The feat was accomplished by Squire's School.

ture of the game was the playing and batting of Hill at second. The following is the score by innings:

Score: R. H. E. Masonic Home..... 011030001-5 8 3 Squire's School..... 303142002-15 18 2

Batteries—Bass and Hill; Tyler, Cottrell, and McJohn.

MR. ALLAN'S PAMPHLET. He Says Lamb Must be Downed in the Interest of McKinleyism.

Mr. Edgar Allan has just completed a 23-page pamphlet entitled: "An Open Letter to the Republicans of Virginia on the Question of the Removal of the City Chairman, as an Attack on the McKinley Campaign." This is being widely distributed among the Republicans.

Mr. Allan, in his letter, first goes into his record as a Republican and as city Republican chairman. Coming down to the beginning of the fight between Colonel Lamb and himself, Mr. Allan says that the Colonel's opposition to McKinley was the cause of it.

Mr. Allan quotes from Colonel Lamb's letter to Mr. Michael Murphy urging him to hold on as city chairman the following: "It is due yourself to hold the fort and not let a true man, with Irish blood in his veins, be bulldozed by an Englishman."

"Your sincerity," Mr. Allan takes up the charge made by Colonel Lamb that Democratic money is being used by the McKinley boomers and states that every cent that he has spent has come out of his own pocket.

Under the head of "Objections at Large to the Removal of Lamb," Mr. Allan argues that Lamb must be downed in the interest of McKinleyism. Going on he shows that he has a majority of the counties with him, as well as many leading Republicans.

He says that Colonel Lamb has lost an opportunity, and instead of harmonizing the party has widened the breach. Mr. Allan places all the responsibility for the row on Colonel Lamb. In conclusion he says that he is after nothing but his rights, and urges on the McKinley boomers to get on with the work.

Want Him Back in the Council. The many friends of Mr. John M. Higgins are very anxious to see him announce himself as a candidate for common council. Mr. Higgins represented the party in that body for ten or twelve years in the ablest and most efficient manner, and his constituents would be glad to see him take upon himself the same duties again.

A Coming Attraction. Les Statuaires Vivants Concert Club has been engaged by the Citizens' Association of Chestnut Hill and Highland Park to give their production at their new hall on May 8, 1896, and will prove very attractive, as this company has quite a reputation for pleasing those who see them.

Where They May Be Secured. The tickets for the Royal Arcanum entertainment, which is to be held at the Academy on Tuesday night, may be secured from Mr. V. W. Ball, of No. 412 North Second street; Mr. R. L. Harris, of No. 59 Louisiana street, and Mr. Julius Straus, corner Tenth and Main streets.

Property Transfers. Richmond: Abram Ellick to Maria de Chalmot, 12 feet on east side First street near Clay, $2,500.

Thomas E. Johnson to F. J. Wicks, 23 feet on north side China street near Heivider, $1,150.

THE GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY. Crane Will Appear in This Splendid New Piece on Wednesday.

Mr. Crane makes his promised appearance at the Mozart Academy of Music on Wednesday, when he will make known his new comedy, "The Governor of Kentucky." The play will be repeated on Saturday night, on Thursday night "His Wife's Father" will be the bill. It will be given a second presentation at the Saturday matinee, on Friday night "The Senator" will be revived.

"The Governor of Kentucky" is described as a comedy illustrative of Southern life and manners. The chief personage in it, as it is to be supposed from its title, is William Lee, the Governor of Kentucky, a man the author pictures as honest, upright, and of unimpeachable integrity. The serious plot is very early ushered to the front. A railroad corporation, anxious to secure great concessions, sends its main affairs to the Governor to get him to sign a bill that will give it these concessions. Lee refuses point blank to have anything to do with it. "Sign this bill," says the Governor, "and my people will help nominate you for the Senate." Lee answers him by ordering him from the room. The bill is signed, but not by the Governor, and the most damaging result is his going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never mentioned, and the latter's pretty daughter pleads eloquently that he be spared the disgrace of going to prison. The Governor is in love with this girl, and his heart yearns to do her bidding. Much depends upon his decision. If he shields the old man, he must, perforce, assume the responsibility of the dishonest bill, and this will cost him the nomination for the Senate which he so much covets. Throwing ambition to the winds he determines to shield his friend, and then resigns his office. The fate of the bill is never