Interesting Services at Broadbush-Memorial This Afternoon—Rev. Edwin Lee Tanner Will Preach at Holy Trinity—Catholic Notes.

"CORRECT DRESS FOR MEN AND BOYS."

We know you don't seek a fire until it is cold. But you don't wait until it is cold before you order in your coal. While just at this minute you might not need a Top Coat perhaps, nor a heavier suit than you are wearing, you know you will. And when you want it, you'll want it quick. We just want to bespeak your attention to our stock—to get you acquainted with it. To introduce to you a kind of Clothing that has lost all of the earmarks of ready-to-wear, and looks and IS like custom tailoring—all but the price.

The Rev. Father William O'Hara, of Norfolk, Va., was the guest last week of the Rev. Father McKeefrey, of St. Patrick's Church.

Services at Grace-Street. To-day promises to be one of unusual interest with Grace-Street Baptist Church. During the past week Dr. Hatcher has baptized a number of new members, with others secured by letter, will be welcomed to fellowship in the church at the communion of his morning, by Dr. Hatcher in an appropriate address.

To-night there will be special evangelistic services, and the sermon will be on "The Signs of the True Conversion."

June may be the accepted wedding month, but October surely has proven itself a close second from the number of brides it has claimed for its own. Like the leaves, they all seem to be putting on the holiday attire and leaving the parent stem.

It is all right for the young couples, but the dear friends, or rather, their purses, are suffering severely from the constant demand upon them. Several days ago—and they have not been so many—a large display of presents resembled a second-hand department store, and the aim of the guests to get as much as they could for their money and to make as much show; to-day the display of gifts is more suggestive of "Gleanings." It is, doubtless, a sign of the times that everything is as extravagant as possible—but it is surely an improvement that the gaudy gift is no longer an evidence of good taste.

At the one o'clock service, the organ of Dresden ware and little pieces of Carara marble. To be sure, they cost fabulous sums, but they are the real thing, and the bride of to-day no longer needs garrets to hide away gifts too unwieldy for her.

LAWYERS WORK ON THE AGREEMENT

Power Company's Counsel Submits Contract to Traction Co.

MR. AINSLIE ON TRANSFERS.

Replies to "M. D." and Explains That the System Decided on Will Work to the Convenience of the Public.

Mr. George Ainslie, counsel for the Richmond Passenger and Power Company, yesterday submitted to the attorneys of the Richmond Traction Company a draft of a contract drawn by him relative to transfers. The Traction people will make such changes and interpretations as they deem proper, and the agreement will probably be in shape to be signed by the middle of this week.

Mr. Ainslie said last evening that the transfer arrangement between the two companies would soon be in operation.

"The main details of the contract," he added, "have been discussed and agreed to, and we have prepared the first draft of the contract between the two companies for the transfer system and have submitted it to Messrs. Henry & Williams, counsel for the Traction Company. I presume that the legal end of the matter will be concluded early next week, and that the details of the agreement which affect the operating departments of the roads will be quickly settled. The system should be in operation by November 1st, or very soon thereafter."

"The plan which the companies have agreed on is neither very elaborate nor very simple, but if a person will locate in his mind the position of the intersecting points of the two lines, he will not have a great deal of difficulty in following the plan and in seeing how easily and simply it works. There was a letter in one of the afternoon papers of October 19th, signed 'M. D.' The writer of that letter, a practicing physician, evidently disapproves of the plan adopted by the two companies. It shows that the doctor has not familiarized himself with the subject of street railway transfers in general and with the proposed plan in particular, but I think that his troubles are more imaginary than real.

"I presume that the doctor will admit the propriety of allowing the companies to adopt reasonable regulations to prevent, as far as possible, the abuse of the transfer privilege, because it is a fact, demonstrated by long experience, that street railway companies are regarded as legitimate prey by an astonishingly large proportion of the traveling public. Persons who would not think of picking your pocket of five cents will unblushingly rob a street railway company whenever they can and boast of it afterwards. Such persons will, without doubt, soon join the ranks of the 'street riders' that is, those who ride as much as they can, doubling and redoubling their tracks, if they can slip by the conductor in the crowd."

Street, west of Laurel Street, but the Doctor must know that the Broad Street line of the Power Company reaches from Ninth to Laurel Street, which is through the very heart of that thoroughfare, and that very few people leave or board a car west of Laurel and east of the Reservoir, except during the time of attractions at the Ball Park or Exposition Building.

"The plan agreed on is not universal as regards the suburban lines, but those lines were omitted for reasons heretofore given in the papers. If the Doctor wishes to reach any general territory of the city, from a suburban line, he can do so on transfers between the lines of the Power Company. Of course, he cannot reach every spot, but he can go within a block or two of it, and it is against his inclination in having to walk a short distance that the Power Company balances the expense of maintaining its suburban lines."

CITY AMBULANCE SERVICE.

Its Efficiency Has Created a Larger Demand.

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and the authorities seem to be waking up to the fact that the two young men who serve the city as ambulance doctors are getting too much of a good thing. The places are much in demand, and in account of the experience obtained by the medical graduates who do the work.

The service under the wise organization of Dr. J. G. Trevilian, the surgeon in charge, has grown to be a very important institution, and the demand has grown in multiplied ratio with its efficiency until it has reached a point where a third man is a necessity.

All who see the ambulance on its daily calls or read the reports in the daily papers of its errands of mercy must be struck with the growth of the service. The call is now made with its efficiency until it has reached a point where a third man is a necessity.

All who see the ambulance on its daily calls or read the reports in the daily papers of its errands of mercy must be struck with the growth of the service. The call is now made with its efficiency until it has reached a point where a third man is a necessity.

The ambulance service alone is hard and wearing work, but this is not the hardest part of their duties. There is a white ambulance and a colored ambulance, and in addition the City Hospital, which is an important institution, and to this large colony of old and sick people the "Ambulance Doctors" are resident physicians, subject to constant call night and day.

When the doctor on ambulance duty does not close his eyes and go for twenty-four hours on a stretch, if one is sick the whole work devolves on one.

They are on duty every day in the year and can only get a day off by putting on a substitute. There are frequent nights when the doctor on ambulance duty does not close his eyes and go for twenty-four hours on a stretch, if one is sick the whole work devolves on one.

They are witnesses in nearly all cases that come into the courts for unlawful and felonious assaults, and their testimony decides important suits where damage is claimed for personal injury.

Frequently when in court they are called away by emergency calls, and they are between two fires—a reprimand of the Court for not obeying summons, or the neglect of a suffering citizen calling for help.

These troubles can only be obviated by another man, and as the cost is so small, in comparison with the advantages to be obtained, Dr. Trevilian expects his requests will be readily granted.

Mr. George B. Davis, superintendent of public charities, who has all these institutions under his control, declares there is pressing need for another ambulance doctor.

Miss Virginia Wadell Stuart, one of the instructors in the Art Club last winter, has secured the studio belonging to the Woman's Club.
