There has been no enterprise undertaken by the ladies more deserving of encouragement than this humane movement, which has driven them into the arms of those who gave their all for the cause they loved. Discontent was brewing and the one luxury of the old men was to find a sympathetic ear into which to pour their complaints—they complained about everything—there was nothing else to do.

In the summer, it is true, there were the trees, under which to sit, and the passing carriages to furnish some little diversion, but when the chill airs and wintry winds have driven them indoors, time lingers slowly enough. Some one asked one of the inmates what he did with his time. "Well," he answered, "I get up and eat my breakfast, then I wait for the dinner-bell to ring, then I sit around till supper, and then I go to bed. Surely not a very exciting programme when it is unvarying. Some time ago the Legislature recognized the fact that some amusement should be provided for the veterans. This much they conceded, but their liberality provided no appropriation. It remained for those indefatigable workers—Miss Isoline Moses, Mrs. Norman V. Randolph and Miss Ruby Bodeker—to make the movement a success. Last April these three ladies started on this mission, and through their untiring efforts have been able to accomplish their kind purpose. Although funds are still lacking, it was deemed wiser to open the room now and add to it from the further donations that they hope to receive.

The room is given by Lee Camp, and is formerly known as Pegram Hall. It has been made most attractive, cheery and cosy, with tables and chairs, six book-cases, a piano and rockers. A large number of magazines are on hand, and games of all descriptions—checkers, backgammon and the like. The sons of Captain Baker lent much assistance to the ladies by wiring for electric lights and building a stage that will be used for amateur theatricals. The ladies purpose having one entertainment every month, and will be grateful if any of the talented people of Richmond will contribute towards the entertainments. Six elegant Morris chairs have lately been donated and $50 by the Eastern Memorial Association.

The old soldiers are exceedingly appreciative and take the liveliest interest in their new room. They say it is above all things what they most desired. On next Thursday evening Hon. D. C. Reardon, of the Somerset of Lee Camp, will make the opening address. Dr. Carlisch will accept the room in the name of the soldiers, and Mr. John Lamb, commander of the Sons of Veterans, will make a few remarks. Mrs. Gill's boys will add in the reception of the Home there will be such limited space that invitations have been sent only to the Governor and wife, Mayor and wife, a committee from each camp and the heads of all the memorial societies and representatives of the press.
