SIGNS OF SORROW OVER THE STATE

Cities Will Give Public Expression to Their Feelings.

MASS-MEETINGS CALLED.

The News Traveled Fast and Ships Came in From Sea With Flags at Half-Mast.

English Captains Have Deep Regret.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 14.—The shadow crept slowly up the street in Norfolk to-day, as one after another of the store fronts was draped in mourning.

When the thread which has been tensely strained for a week snapped this morning, the bells of the city began to toll.

First the fire bells, then Epworth Church bell, then other bells. Most everybody knew what the tolling of the bells meant. Hundreds sat up and waited for the news, which they feared must come before morning.

NEWS TRAVELED FAST. The news of the fatal termination on Friday, the 13th, of Czolgosz's murderous attack traveled fast.

The schooners Daylight and Ann J. Trainor, which were in from sea, this morning, had their flags half-masted, when they passed Lambert's Point. The same is true of the steamers and other vessels which followed them in. Somebody, probably the tug men, are telling the news at sea of the Cape.

The battleships of the North Atlantic squadron, which were in Lynnhaven Bay, came to Old Point this morning. Somebody told those aboard before the ships weighed anchor, and the flags were half lowered on the ships when they dropped anchor at Old Point.

There are no more sorrowful people in Norfolk to-day than the English residents here, and the British captains aboard the steamships in port, which by their flags tell of their grief.

ENGLISHMEN SORROW. One of these Englishmen said last night that he felt more sorrowful than he did when Queen Victoria died. "She was old," he said, "and I expected that, and her death was unexpected, and was the most tragic of the century."

Mayor Nathaniel Beaman to-day sent a telegram of condolence to Mrs. McKinley and later, by proclamation, called a meeting of the citizens at 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon at the Academy of Music.

FEAR ROOSEVELT. Fear that President Roosevelt may not be so conservative in his course as was President McKinley prevailed here to-day, and had a most disquieting effect upon business men. That public confidence in President Roosevelt is not absolute is one who believes that the country will go on as before. This view is gradually spreading to-day.

PENINSULA IN GLOOM.

The North Atlantic Squadron and Other Ships Show Emblems of Mourning.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Sept. 14.—Newport News, Norfolk, Old Point and Hampton Roads and its tributaries present a picture of gloom and mourning.

The North Atlantic squadron, consisting of the battleships Kearsarge, Alabama and Massachusetts, returned to Old Point this morning, and Admiral Higginson on receiving official notice from the Department ordered all flags at half-mast.

There is some probability that the troops at Fort Monroe and a number of seamen and marines from the squadron will be ordered to Washington for the State funeral. All out-bound foreign ships passing Old Point to-day carried, in addition to their regular flags, the American flag half-masted on their after masts.

Every ship, foreign and American, in this and Norfolk harbors and in Hampton Roads and the lower Chesapeake, displays the American colors at half-mast. The city is in deep mourning, crepe being in evidence everywhere.

The melancholy intelligence of the death of William McKinley, President of the United States, having been this day received by the Governor of this Commonwealth, who, deeming it proper to manifest by appropriate ceremonies the deep gloom that has fallen upon the people of Virginia and of the whole United States, therefore ordered as follows:

- 1. That the flags of the United States and of Virginia be displayed at half-mast on the Capitol.
- 2. That a salute be fired at each of the army posts of the State, of one gun every half hour, beginning at sunrise to-morrow and ending at sunset.
- 3. That the Capitol be draped with mourning.
- 4. That the State offices be closed from 10 o'clock to-day until Tuesday morning next.
- 5. That the Governor will wear crepe for thirty days and that it be recommended to all the executive officers to wear a badge of mourning for the same period.
- 6. That the Executive will unite with

WINSTON-SALEM'S SORROW.

Mass-Meeting Pass Resolutions of Sympathy and Commendation.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Sept. 14.—The Superior Court adjourned this morning until Monday as a mark of respect upon the death of President McKinley.

At a mass meeting of the bench, bar and citizens, held this afternoon, a beautiful memorial was presented and adopted. The memorial was as follows:

"William McKinley, as President of the United States, was, on the 6th day of the present month, assaulted and given a mortal wound by an enemy of law, an enemy of order and an enemy of all good. It was not a murderer, but an ordinary murderer, but it was a blow aimed at society. It was the outcome of the destructive teachings of organized force, determined to overthrow established government and to replace the same with disorder and anarchy. "These being the facts, well understood by the law-abiding, liberty-loving American people, it is the sense of this meeting that the Congress of the United States and the Legislatures of the various States, executive and judicial, at the least practicable moment, enact such laws as will efficiently prevent the occurrence of such dastardly acts, and will make it forever hereafter impossible for persons holding and promulgating the dangerous doctrine of anarchy to have a habitation anywhere within the boundaries of our beloved republic."

Touching and patriotic addresses were made by several citizens.

AT LEXINGTON.

High Tributes from the Two Great Educational Institutions There.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

LXINGTON, Va., Sept. 14.—The announcement of President McKinley's death this morning caused universal grief in Lexington. The flags at the Virginia Military Institute were at once half-masted. General Shiple, the superintendent, through Adjutant H. E. Hyatt, published an order this afternoon at dress parade before the corps of cadets announcing the President's death, concluding as follows:

"I do not think the death of the President will have any material effect on banking at this time. There will be little or no difficulty in procuring a discounting of paper. Of course, it depends largely on the New York Clearing-House, but in New York the death of the President was anticipated on Saturday, and it appears to have been agreed that no material effect would result from Mr. McKinley's death. Of course, money may come a little higher, but that will be very small, in my opinion, as there is a great deal of available money in New York at this time."

Mr. Morris' Telegram. The sorrow of the community at the death of the President this morning found official expression in the message of President L. Z. Morris, of the Chamber of Commerce, to Secretary Cortelyou, and in a call which has been issued by President W. M. Turpin, of the Board of Aldermen, for a joint session of the two branches of the Council of the city to be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow.

The faculty of the University of Washington and Lee University, at a mass meeting this morning, adopted the following: President McKinley's administration will be noteworthy in the annals of American history. Abroad it marks the extension of the influence of the United States; at home it cemented two sections once severed by war into a union stronger than ever before. But in death's dread hour the ability of the statesman and the fame of the ruler are for the moment forgotten. It is the man, of whom we think the tender, devoted husband, the loyal friend, the Christian, who passes away with a prayer on his lips. Therefore, be it Resolved, first, That we, the faculty and students of the Washington and Lee University, while mourning with the rest of the nation over our irreparable loss, do extend to the stricken wife and family of the President our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that God will support and sustain them in this trying hour.

Second, That these resolutions be printed in the college papers and that a copy be forwarded to the President's Secretary, Mr. George B. Cortelyou, Buffalo, N. Y.

PYTHIAN SYMPATHY.

The Mayor of Pocahontas Sends Resolutions to Cortelyou.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

POCAHONTAS, Va., Sept. 14.—J. M. Newton, Grand Chancellor, Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias of Virginia, sent the following telegram of condolence to Mrs. McKinley: "Accept the profound sympathy of the order of Knights of Pythias of Virginia in your great sorrow. We feel a great personal loss in the death of our most illustrious brother."

(Signed) "JOHN M. NEWTON, Grand Chancellor."

The following telegram was sent by Mayor Ware: Hon. Cortelyou, Buffalo, N. Y.: The mayor and citizens of Pocahontas desire to express their grief at the untimely death of our beloved President, and trust that you convey our deepest sympathy to Mrs. McKinley.

(Signed) E. W. WARE, Mayor.

IN STAUNTON.

A Meeting of Sorrow to Be Held To-Day. Scenes on the Street.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

STAUNTON, Va., Sept. 14.—When the news of the death of the President reached Staunton this morning, at 3 o'clock, all the bells of the city were tolled. At that early hour the downtown streets were crowded with people in a great state of excitement to read the latest bulletin. A deep gloom has been over the city all day.

The Masonic Temple has been draped in mourning. A mass-meeting of citizens will be held at the Opera House to-morrow afternoon to give expression to the sorrow of the community. All the ministers of the town are to be present, and all the choirs of the churches and the Stonehall Bank will take part.

Alderman Mosby said that there was usually a delay in such cases, but that if counsel for the prisoners were to do so, the case could go through the various courts of New York for years. Dilating pleas could be made, but he felt that as the case was a clear one and was to draw long plans among anarchists that the successful man was to give up his life for the cause, there would be no delays, but the law allowed to take its course quickly.

GRAIN EXCHANGE CLOSED.

A general meeting of the members of the Richmond Grain and Cotton Exchange was held in the rooms of the Exchange yesterday morning at 11 o'clock.

At the meeting, Mr. W. E. Eas, was in the chair; Captain B. A. Jacob, secretary. The president, in appropriate remarks, announced to the trade the death of His Excellency, William McKinley, President of the United States of America, and stated that the action of the exchange in taking such action as the members deemed necessary. Mr. W. R. Savage moved that in respect to the memory of the late President of the United States that the rooms of the Exchange be closed during the day which mourning was adopted and the meeting adjourned.

On account of the death of the President there was no matinee at the Casino yesterday and there was no performance last night.

It may be interesting to note that Richmond will have a "Life of McKinley." It is being written by Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, assisted by an eminent corps of writers. The book will be published by the B. F. Johnson Publishing Company.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HERE.

At the same hour during which the last mass-meeting of the citizens of Pocahontas was held at Canton, Ohio, the people of the city of Richmond will gather together in a funeral and recognition service in honor of the murdered chief. The service will be held at the very highest interest and impressiveness, similar to that expression of public sentiment witnessed here when Garfield was buried, after having fallen at the hand of an assassin.

At the meeting of the Richmond pastors held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the parlors of the Methodist Episcopal Association it was decided to hold this meeting in lieu of the one proposed for this afternoon. It was the opinion of the assemblage that such a service should be held on the day of the President's funeral, and it was thought best to have two services of this kind, one to-day and one at that time, would not be practicable. And thus again a service such as could be held this afternoon would of necessity be so simple in its character that the general public would be less satisfied to turn out in great numbers.

The meeting decided upon will be held on Thursday—the day of the funeral at Canton—at the hour selected for that sorrowful event.

The Methodist Episcopal Church is the place chosen for the meeting on account of the fact that it is located in a central portion of the city, equally accessible from all sides. While essentially a funeral service, the meeting will have a religious character and the public life of the deceased President, prominent laymen, as well as the clergy, are expected to participate in the service. A request was made that Mayor Taylor ask that all business houses close during the hour of the service.

A committee, consisting of Dr. George Cooper (chairman), Dr. W. W. Lear, Rev. J. J. Gravatt, Rev. W. N. Calhoun, D. D., and Mr. S. R. McKee, was appointed for the meeting. This committee will get together Monday, at 1 o'clock, in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association, and will proceed with its work.

The meeting will be held in the room in which it was held, was a large picture of the President, framed in a sombre black. The thanks of the body were extended to the Rev. Mr. Leath, who had kindly offered the use of the Academy of Music for the service, which it was thought would be held this afternoon.

In the Churches To-Day. Special prayers for the bereaved family will be offered in all the churches to-day. Among the Baptists this will be the case and in nearly all instances special references will be made in the sermons of the day.

The Grove-Avenue congregation will meet in the chapel at Richmond College. The pastor, Rev. B. Hawthorne, will preach on the subject: "The Holy Comforter." A part of his discourse will have reference to the nation's calamity in the loss of President McKinley. He will speak of the great grief of the country in being deprived of its wisest, purest, noblest and most useful public servant and of the consolation imparted to all true believers by the holy spirit in reflecting upon his Christian faith, patience and courage, and his noble triumph over the fear of death.

Dr. George Cooper, of the First Baptist Church, and Dr. W. R. L. Smith, of the Second Baptist Church, also said yesterday morning that they would offer prayers for the afflicted family and refer in their sermons to the sorrow that has fallen upon the country.

Among the Methodists and Presbyterians the same thing will occur. Casual references in sermons and special prayers will form a part of the service. The Rev. W. B. Beauchamp will conduct the service at Union-Station Methodist Church and will offer prayer. Dr. W. W. Adams, of the Centenary Methodist Church, will do the same, and will allude in his sermon to the death of the President.

In the Episcopal Churches the prayer in the ritual for those in distress will be said. In all of the churches mentioned a prayer will be made. Dr. W. E. Evans, at Monumental, will speak of the matter in his sermon.

In all the other churches, Roman Catholic, Christian and others, special prayer will be offered.

He Was Invited. Rev. Dr. William E. Hatcher received a telegram from the official headquarters of the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, on Friday, asking him to be one of the speakers of the occasion of the jubilee celebration over the recovery of the President from his dangerous wounds.

This telegram was of course sent when it was generally thought that President McKinley would recover, and the Exposition officers, after conference with the President, had decided to accept of his participation in the celebration. Dr. Hatcher was the only speaker from the South who was asked to make an address at the Exposition. He accepted the compliment to him, as well as to his city and State, that he was selected.

Action of the Veterans. The veterans, inmates of the Soldiers' Home, met last evening at 7 o'clock in the Pegasus Hall, and gave public expression to their grief at the death of the President. The complete harmony of the occasion. The life and deeds of the dead Chief were commended in the highest terms, and the sympathy of the veterans was extended to his afflicted wife in the dark hours of her suffering. The meeting was very interesting, and the veterans could barely refrain from tears.

Mr. Robert S. Bell was called to the chair and made a short opening talk, thanking the assemblage for the honor done him and explaining the object of the meeting. Mr. W. W. Adams acted as secretary.

A committee, consisting of Messrs. F. H. Langley, Horace Shifflet and C. M. Cheving, was appointed and reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the members of the Soldiers' Home, in sympathy with the people of the United States, who have fallen—murdered by a cowardly assassin—Confederate, that we, veterans of the Confederacy, do hereby, in view of the home here for our call, viewing with the deepest abhorrence the act of that vile creature, which has plunged a nation into mourning and thrilled with horror the hearts of the world, the taking of the life of our Chief Magistrate is an outrage on the State and the freedom of our people.

Resolved, That we remember the kindly sympathy of President McKinley with the veterans of the Confederate States, and in the efforts he has made to allay the passions of sectional strife and to unite us as one grand country; and we deplore the loss of one who has done more than any other to heal dissension and to soothe the wounds caused by bloody war.

Resolved, That in the life and in the death of William McKinley, the President of the United States, we recognize the good citizen, the patriot, the statesman, the brave and faithful soldier, and as exhibited in the most touching manner on his death bed, the tender, gentle, loving, manly husband.

And resolved, That we offer to Mrs. McKinley the assurance of our grief. In the hour of her bereavement we will be at her side, and we will do all in our power to relieve her grief. "God's will, not ours." And we pray that the same good God may endue her soul with patience under her affliction and with resignation to His blessed will, and lift up His countenance upon her and give her peace.

It was ordered that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the President, for transmission to Mrs. McKinley, through the proper channels. It was also ordered that the resolutions, several short addresses were made by the veterans attending. They all spoke in the highest terms of the President.

Purchased a Flag. The employees at the Chesapeake and Ohio shops, on Seventh Street, yesterday afternoon purchased an amount of cloth to produce a large and handsome United States flag, measuring 12x20 feet, which was hoisted over the buildings. It was hung at half-mast in honor of the deceased President and will be allowed to remain so for the next thirty days.

There are from 400 to 600 employees at the shops. The contributing to the fund with which the flag was purchased are the men working in the car shop, the machine shop, the paint shop, the boiler shop, the tin shop and the repair shop.

Wallace Text Offered. The following telegram explains itself: Ironton, O., Sept. 14, 1901. R. M. Harvey, Agent Wallace Circus, Richmond, Va.

If the people of Richmond desire to hold McKinley memorial meeting on Sunday, September 22, they are welcome to the free use of my tents, seats and the band. Notice the proper parties. Explain to them that the big tent seats almost two thousand people and that it is water-proof. R. E. WALLACE.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Virginians Have a Very High Regard for Mr. Roosevelt.

It must be a source of satisfaction to President Roosevelt to realize that the generous hearts of the American people, while suffering keenly the loss of one who has been to them a sad and steady guide in the most trying financial and military vicissitudes, spontaneously give out assurances of trust and confidence.

That there has been in the minds of the general public an apprehension of immense weight is called in no question. This concern is natural, and has invariably manifested itself under similar sad circumstances in the past.

That men of large experience in public affairs be called to the rescue, and to allay disquietude in the minds of Southern readers, attention is directed to the opinions of the distinguished members of the Constitutional Convention, whose expressions follow. These sentiments are published in the issue of The Times do credit to the generosity no less than the sagacity of the experienced and able authors.

They are in consonance with the views of leading editors and public men all over the South.

MR. GODDE'S ESTIMATE. The following members kindly give their estimate of Mr. Roosevelt: President John H. C. Sells, of Solicitor General, "I do not do the honor of a personal acquaintance with President Roosevelt, but I know that he enjoys to an unlimited extent the respect of many good men, in whose judgment I repose confidence. He is a man of great natural ability and fine literary attainments, as shown by his official career and his published works.

"The idea is entertained by some of our people that, in the exercise of a strong man, the policy of his administration will be a policy of strict propriety, but I have observed, after a long experience with public men, that the occupancy of high official station has a very conservative influence, and for that reason I have no apprehension whatever that the public interests will be injured by the access of Mr. Roosevelt to office.

"There may perhaps be a temporary shock in the stock market, but beyond that there will be no serious consequences. Mr. Roosevelt is a high-toned, honorable gentleman. He will no doubt feel in honor bound to carry out, as far as he can, the policy of his illustrious predecessor. I do not believe that he will be erratic or extreme on any subject, and that he will make a good business President."

Senator Phil W. C. Cobill, of Chesterfield: "Mr. Roosevelt will, in my judgment, attempt to follow the policy of President McKinley on all essential matters of government. I do not believe that he will be erratic or extreme on any subject, and that he will make a good business President."

Treasurer Harman: "I believe Mr. Roosevelt will make a good President. He will not be a man who will be interested in the country will no longer suffer by reason of his accession to power."
