PROPHECY AND FULFILLMENT.

Several years ago The Times, in a series of articles, warned the Democratic party that if it continued to commit its fortunes to Mr. Bryan and his intimates...

These remarks are from a newspaper that gave Mr. Bryan its cordial support, and the paper is conducted to-day under the same management.

Mr. Bryan is now out in a card in which he says that he will not be a candidate in 1904, but that he is in favor of a candidate who is loyal not only to the ticket but to the platforms of 1896 and 1900...

ATLANTA'S LIBRARY.

Miss Wallace, librarian of the Carnegie Library in Atlanta, has written an interesting letter to the Constitution, in which she speaks of the popularity of the institution.

A BRAVE PREACHER.

There is no nobler or more admirable man under the sun than the devout and consecrated minister of the Gospel who, upon all occasions, stands up for the right, and who has the courage to declare the truth, no matter what the odds are against him.

PIOUS READERS.

Philadelphia is known to be one of the most pious cities in the country. It could not be otherwise with such truly good gentlemen in it as Mr. Anthony Comstock.

broke the locks were drunk, and that they worked for twenty minutes before they succeeded in their attempt. It was the plain duty of the officers of the law...

A SAD CASE.

The Staunton News draws a pitiful picture of "poor old man Kruger," who refuses to be reconciled to British rule and who is unwilling that Boer generals shall visit England and be hospitably entertained by the English people.

Those of us who had experience in the war times and who remember the horrors and outrages of that war sympathize with "old man Kruger."

But there is this difference between Mr. Kruger, late President of the Transvaal republic, and Robert E. Lee, leader of the southern troops.

General Lee fought as long as there was hope, but when hope was gone he made manly surrender. His brave boys would have followed him to the last.

Trend of Thought In Dixie Land

The Chattanooga Times thinks the call for a national meeting of the Populists in Springfield, Ill., August 27, will hardly create a ripple among politicians, and says: "The Populist party doesn't seem to appreciate the fact that it is a very dead organization."

The Galveston News rises to remark: "It is just as well to let Mississippi and Georgia continue to think they are seriously in the cotton-raising business, but the fact is that there are fifteen counties in Texas which together produce more cotton than either Georgia or Mississippi."

The Mobile Register says: "A colored preacher, W. N. Welch, of Evergreen, adds his word to the words spoken by Lucas and other enlightened men of his race advising that the negroes strive to get homes and reputations for working well and living honestly."

The Columbus, Ga., Enquirer-Sun discusses the 'Professor' Stedd affair, and says: "While it is a question whether he should have been permitted to resign or have been summarily dismissed, it is probable that the conservative course is better for the college."

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Consul Bragg got into trouble with the Libans through letters to Mrs. Bragg, and Minister Suroso has had an unpleasant experience through Mrs. Suroso. Just make it a qualification of our Ministers and Consuls that they be bachelors!"

Birmingham News: "The Czar and the Emperor were very cordial when they met in Montauk, however, their subjects are working overtime building warships and army guns."

Nashville News: "Perhaps all this agitation of the Philippine friars and their lands has been a skillfully managed real estate boom."

An Hour With Virginia Editors

The West Point Plain Dealer copies from The Times an editorial on the Terrens system, and says: "The above editorial from the Richmond Times and which we are familiar with the Terrens system referred to, still we are satisfied that a far better system than we now have can be gotten up, and we are willing to try some other good system."

The Bristol Courier in a sarcastic vein rubs it into its town folks as follows: "Let us swap dollars with one another; rent houses to and from one another; tell all the outside world of our excellent advantages in the way of manufacturing, and hold our factories at exorbitant prices, and all go to the poor-house together."

The Farmville Herald says: "And now the Rev. Crawford says he never charged that Judge Campbell had been bribed, but only doctored. Then he should have been man enough, even be Christian enough, to have said so in open court. And even now it is not too late to say what he means by being 'doctored,' and to proceed to prove it."

The Leesburg Record says: "Governor A. J. Montague is prominently mentioned as a presidential possibility. This is a high compliment to our Chief Executive, and demonstrates that his ability is recognized in national as well as State affairs. The Review of Reviews considers him the only available Southern man for the place."

The Suffolk Herald finds the Senegambian in the Amherst accumulation of timber. It says: "According to the newspapers we judge there is a good deal of politics in this case. There being two factions of the Democratic party in Amherst, the friends of Judge Campbell largely stand by him right or wrong, while his political enemies largely use his indiscreet action as a basis to down him politically and put him out of office, and are against him, right or wrong."

Clifton Forge Review: "How quick Carter Glass began to hope for the disappearance of 'any ascerbity which may have developed in the somewhat heated campaign.' Carter has a happy faculty of always using a word not in common use. But when a fellow has just been nominated to Congress after a rough and tumble fight he may be excused for wishing that 'clouds to roll by' in every language known to the tongue of man."

Charlotte Gazette: "A primary election is at least one election two many."

Mr. Cole Married in Roanoke. (Special Dispatch to The Times.) ROANOKE, Va., August 15.—Mr. William E. Cole, of Richmond, and Miss Lucie S. Blount were married last night at the residence of the bride's mother in this city. Rev. W. O. Tolbert officiating. The couple went on the mid-night train for New York.

REUNION AT CHASE CITY Veterans of Armistead Camp to Have a Big Time the 29th. (Special Dispatch to The Times.) CHASE CITY, Va., August 15.—The tenth annual reunion of L. A. Armistead Camp, Confederate Veterans, No. 25, of Virginia, to be held here on the 25th of this month, will be an occasion attended by a large crowd from this and adjoining counties.

Governor Montague has written to Captain Thad D. Jeffress, commander of the camp, and says: "If I am in Richmond and imperative duties do not preclude, I shall make every effort to be present. Other distinguished gentlemen have signified their purpose to be present. The programme has been arranged for the reunion on the grounds of the Southside Academy at Chase City. The speaking will be in the public hall of the academy."

Governor Montague is very popular here, and he will receive a royal welcome. Hon. John Lamb, General Boling, of Petersburg; Grand Commander Smith, of Suffolk; Hon. R. G. Southall, of Amelia, and other prominent men will attend.

The Kaiser will find the toughest job he ever had on hand when he undertakes to pacify an American girl whose feelings he may have officially wounded.

The Republicans will probably have several congressional candidates in the Virginia field, the decree having gone out from national party headquarters that only the fighters deserve the plea.

Judge Whittle and his boys are forcing the 'possum hunting season. It is a good rule not to hunt 'possums until the snakes retire for the winter.

The Norfolk papers tell us of the arrest of a Portsmouth pig wagon. The Portsmouth pig counter is still free.

The most remarkable international mix-up on record was pulled off the other day when a fight between Greeks and Syrians in Chinatown was stopped by four American policemen, two of whom were Irish.

Mr. Crump is understood to have the opinion that the Knox-Schoen mill was a fake fight.

Who says the South lacks enterprise? In Texas they are fattening English sparrows on boll worms and then putting them on the market as reed birds.

If this thing keeps up Mr. Hanna will have to arbitrate the differences between the coal barons and the coal burners.

A negro who is to be hanged in Baltimore next Tuesday was married in the jail yesterday. No lottery business about that marriage.

"What has become of the old-fashioned little girl who was known as 'Tomboy'?" asks an exchange whose editor must be blind. She is out in the orchard climbing fruit trees.

Combines are getting so fashionable that a number of Christian denominations are thinking of doubling up. This will not be a trust, however.

It took a Richmond boy to make the trip around the world on thirty cents and he bore no resemblance on his return to the expense account.

The arder of Santos-Dumont has been slightly chilled by the lack of American appreciation of his effort to gull the public with his toy balloon.

Those Chicago scientists who have discovered that mosquitoes show certain colors overlooked the fact that the festive bugs get in the worst ticks at night.

The honorable Edward Shephard's presidential boomlet will not last long enough to be utilized for a Christmas toy.

Miss Rives' newspaper was a one-day stand attraction and therefore it came high.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN AND ABOUT THE HOUSEHOLD

(Edited by MARION HARLAND.)

PRETTY HAT FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Facts of Interest For the Housewife.

All communications addressed to this department must be written in ink and accompanied by name and address. Both will be held confidential.

Correspondents will please write the names of their places of residence in full. Letters go astray daily because the address is given vaguely as "City." There are forty-five of these United States and many cities in each State.

The next problem laid before us has also to do with the work-questing: "I am a stenographer, and at present hold a very nice position in the heart of this city. I do not have a great deal to do, and sometimes I am not kept at all busy, and I often thought that if I could only get some outside work to do from various ones who are in the habit of giving out such work—and I am under the impression that there are such ones that do it—I could make many an extra cent, and besides that, I could make use of my idle moments which hang like hours."

"Perhaps you may know of some one who had his or her typewriter done out, and could thereby give me some assistance in that way. Or, if not, perhaps you could give me some advice. I think advertising is often a useless way of obtaining a goal. I am very anxious to get something of this kind to do, and would be willing to do the work at a reasonable rate, and to call for the same, and deliver it when finished. From my little letter to you I hope you can detect a tinge of neatness which I always try to have, as I abhor anything slovenly, or the like."

"ONE OF YOUR DAILY READERS." In the millennium which is to be brought about all the crooks in human living, the marriage of supply and demand will be as natural as the merging into one of two water-drops. Now I assert it in the teeth of "Daily Reader's" disbelief in advertising—nothing but advertising is some form of bringing them together. Our correspondent's work is all that she claims for it; she is willing and anxious to do much more. There are many who would be glad to secure her services and pay her "reasonable rates." Where is the machinery (except advertising) warranted to bring them together?

"I am a young stenographer, and am engaged to a young professional man. Much to my chagrin I find myself at times, when we are discussing matters of history, etc., unable to converse as I should like to. My friend is extremely bright, having taken the highest honors in his class at the University, and it seems to me that he improves daily. I myself am a graduate of the Girl's High School, but am afraid I have forgotten much that I learned while here."

"What I desire to ask of you, Mrs. Harland, is whether you will not be so good as to recommend some books for me to read, that you think will improve my mind and conversational powers, as well as give me a good knowledge of history. I belong to the Philadelphia Public Library and am very fond of reading."

Why not ask your betrothed to sketch a plan of study for you, and pursue it faithfully? Or, if you would rather not do this, write to the superintendent of Chautauque Summer School, Chautauque, N. Y., for a schedule of home-reading. When you get it, set yourself steadily to work as if you were again at school, and do not be satisfied with skimming the books designated. It is a wholesome sign that you have so detected the disparity between your mental endowments and those of the man you are to marry, and that you are anxious to raise yourself to his level. For more of the happiness of wedded life depends upon intellectual sympathy than love stories and match-makers would have us believe.

And still the would-be workers come! Here is another commentary upon the disheartening truth that supply does not invade demand, nor demand hypnotize supply:

"I am a young man of good education and understand book-keeping and accounting thoroughly. If possible, I would like to work evenings at writing, posting books or anything of that sort. It is usual to do this, and, if so, what would be the best way to secure work of this kind? I work during the daytime, but would like to utilize my spare time for that purpose. Can you offer any suggestion?" "E. W. B."

Of one thing I can assure you: You will not get work by sitting with crossed hands and wishing for it. Look for what you want. Inquire among friends and business acquaintances who are likely to want books posted and accounts kept out of business hours. Write to them. Somebody wants you somewhere? Do not rest until you find him. Providence
