GUARANTEE SHOULD GO TO THE CLUBS

(Portsmouth Times.)

"Next year if I am connected with the Ohio State League I will insist that the guarantee that each club puts up goes to the league when a team falls by the wayside and surrenders its charter, instead of the money being used to pay the player's salaries," said President Looney of the Lexington club Wednesday night.

"Of course, I want to see the players get their salaries, but I believe that the club owners should pay them out of their own pockets and that the $1,000 guarantee money should be divided equally among the teams that are game enough to stick it out. That is the object of this guarantee business," continued Mr. Looney, who is one of Lexington's most influential citizens.

"If this policy were rigidly pursued then there would not be so many changes in the complexion of our league. This method would have a tendency to keep down salaries where they belong as the club owners would have to pay them if the attendance fell off and it looked like the club would have to quit. I firmly believe that this arrangement would work out to the betterment of the players and to the league."
