Is Tobacco Market and Cantrill Says Tobacco Trust Is Again Twisting Growers' Necks

Trust Agents Deny Charge, But Prices Don't Lie

(Lexington Leader.)

Congressman J. Campbell Cantrill was in the tobacco district nearly all day yesterday and before he left for Washington last night gave out a sensational interview in regard to the tobacco situation, alleging that the 'trust' is in action again.

An official of the American Tobacco Company who refused to allow his name used for publication, was interviewed in regard to the Cantrill interview by a Leader representative this morning and said:

'I disagree with Mr. Cantrill in his interview given out this morning, and consider that yesterday's trading on the Lexington market was very good indeed. When you consider the class of the crops that have been brought to city, the quality of the tobacco and its condition, I consider that the opening day's prices were all the growers could want.'

'Much of the tobacco this fall is wet and the damp weather is making the condition worse. Many of the baskets on the market are rough and black, not good for plug or smoking manufacture. Most of the tobacco so far offered has been taken from the bottom of the barns and is the poorest part of the crop.'

'The receipts on the Lexington market up to date are not a fair representative of the class of stuff that has been raised in Fayette and surrounding counties this year. Likewise the price has not yet settled. Mr. Cantrill nor any one else can say on the opening day whether the price is good or bad, and predict whether the prices will run high or low for the rest of the term.'

'When the market becomes settled and the best of the local crop is brought to the market, then will be the time to judge whether the scale of prices is low or high. I believe that the best of the crop this year will bring a price that will compare favorably with last year, in two or three weeks when Lexington loose floors are running at full speed.'

'There has certainly been no combination to force down prices among buyers. There is more competition this winter than was the case last season. The buyers of the 'Big Four' are actively engaged in bidding every day and I have never seen the contest as full of fight.'

'The farmers have had no stripping weather as yet, but when reasonable conditions descend and the crops can be moved I believe that prices will take a level that will be satisfactory to most of the raisers. The market opened yesterday at an average of nine and a fraction cents, and that is fair enough for the class of tobacco that was shown.'

'I disagree absolutely with Mr. Cantrill as to the size of the Burley crop this year, and I am satisfied that the production will greatly exceed that of last year. This increase is variously estimated by buyers in touch with the conditions at from 5,000,000 to 20,000,000 pounds.'
