Knapp's Successor.

John L. Geiger, the Democratic nominee for Representative, to succeed Frank W. Knapp, who died just before the Legislature convened, was elected on Tuesday last by about 1,000 majority—500 in Defiance and 500 in Paulding. The vote was tight on account of the horrible roads.

The Marietta Times, one of the popular and influential Democratic papers of Southern Ohio, comes to us this week enlarged in size and in a new dress as handsome and becoming as the uniform of Quartermaster General Vance, of the Gallipoli Bulletin. We compliment and congratulate Brother McMillen upon his Times, and bespeak a continued time of prosperity.

We are glad to learn from the Vinton Record that Charles Foster Barlow and John Sherman Barlow, triplets of Tony, have got well from the grip and are able to tackle in any encounter. Green, of the Sentinel, and Purcell of the Republican Gazette. It is our further information that on hearing this Commodore O'Green launched his flotilla and took to the high seas, and Purcell run to the woods and climbed a tree. Col. Homer Jones has been retained by the Hockingites to fight or run a foot race.

It is thought that the storms of last week were productive of great loss of life. Incoming vessels report the ocean covered with wreckage. The captain of the Cunard steamer Gallia, who has been on the sea for thirty-five years, says he never before experienced such rough weather. One wave thought to be over one hundred feet high struck the Gallia and carried away the upper part of the steamer. It is thought the steamer Erie, with a crew of eighty persons but no passengers, has gone to the bottom.

Small-pox has put in an appearance at Columbus. A yellow flag is out in front of the boarding house of Mrs. Lizze Conklin, 113 East Rich street, announcing that a case of the dread disease exists there.

One thousand employes of the Birmingham (Ala.) Rolling Mill went on a strike on Monday. An effort to force the mill into the amalgamated association caused the strike. It promises to be a long and bitter fight.

A frightful railroad accident occurred on the Chicago road, sixteen miles west of Indianapolis, Monday morning last, by which six persons were killed and a large number wounded. It was caused by spreading rails, and four coaches went over into a creek, when fire added to the horror.

Iowa furnishes the biggest fish story of the season. The fish in question, a wall-eyed pike, must have traveled through the famous Conemaugh River, in Pennsylvania, into the Allegheny, down the latter into the Ohio, down the Ohio into the Mississippi, and up the Father of Waters into the Iowa River, where it was caught two weeks ago by four Iowa men, who have made affidavits to the effect that the story they tell is a true one. John Webster, a man named Games and two brothers named Buchanan, residents of Eldorado, Iowa, went fishing near Hardin City, Iowa. Cutting a hole in the ice, they speared a pike, and bringing it to the surface, noticed that it seemed distended. When opened, a pocket-book was found inside containing $65 in gold, $15 in silver, $75 in greenbacks, ten thousand dollars in bonds, and a certificate of deposit for $25 on a bank of Johnstown, Penn. A piece of paper in the pocket-book had a statement to the effect that the book and contents were the property of John J. Jones, of Johnstown, Penn.

The Cincinnati Enquirer goes occasionally on tangents. Its latest deflection was the offer of $100 to all mothers of triplets, a week being given for the list to be made up. Gen. McLean and his chief staff, Erik Sands, were analyzed in a day with photographs of fourteen pound mothers and their triplets. It is said that when the checks for four thousand dollars went out, McLean hid his mustache and Sands laughed in his sleeve. Now let the enemies of the Enquirer induce McLean to offer a reward for twins and Logan will go far towards breaking him up.

Cheaper School Books.

The school book tax is very onerous. Although it is not levied directly, for every child in the public schools is required to have specified books and stationery supplies. The burden is so heavy that the subject of cheaper books is being agitated throughout the union and various plans of relief are suggested. As the matter is likely to engage the attention of the Ohio general assembly this winter a word of caution may be spoken. It should be borne in mind that an inferior text book is dear at any price and that only adequate experience and superior talent can produce a book suitable for study by the youth. Not much that is worthy could be expected from a state commission hastily organized to prepare books. In considering the argument of state uniformity it would be well in the first place to ascertain the opinion of practical educators whether such uniformity is desirable and, in the second place, to remember that it is the specious plea under which the Standard book company of St. Louis has wheeled Indiana and Minnesota and perhaps other states into buying its publications without knowing it. Perhaps the wisest plan would be to have a commission selected from competent teachers to determine which arithmetics, geographies, readers, etc. are the most desirable and then to negotiate with the publishers to supply needed quantities of text books and stationery to school boards, which should either sell them or furnish them free to scholars, according as it shall be determined by the legislature. The St. Louis board of education has just voted to furnish books free to all scholars and it is estimated that the expense will be between $30,000 and $40,000 a year. Previously the board had been giving books to poor children but now it has abolished the line of distinction and decided to provide books for all children.—(Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The greatest humbug of these later days is the "National Non-Partisan Woman's Christian Temperance Union," which has been doing the press with turgid and inconsequential reports of its gestation and birth at Cleveland. Instead of being non-partisan the inception of the movement—which is simply a bolt against the W. C. T. U.—was due to partisan influences, to a pensioner of the Republican national committee, who took the stump in temperance organizations for Quay and Harrison in 1888, and sought to disorganize and divide where she could not control. This was Mrs. Ellen J. Foster, of Iowa, a right smart lady, who has a keen relish for official cupboards for herself and family. We would not discourage any temperance organization, but the N. N. P. W. C. T. U. (its plenitude of initials should suppress it as a crime against the alphabet.) is of all things partisan—it is formed for underhand partisan purposes—and the loud acclaim with which it received the appeals to stand by the G. O. P. simply illustrated the veiled intent. Just as the emergencies of the Republican party demand, the new organization is ready for licensure or for the most radical prohibition statutes.—Pittsburg Post.

Governor Campbell issued his first pardon on the 21st. The recipient was Angus Bratt, the life prisoner, sent up from Columbus County five years ago for murdering the man who had repaid his hospitality by making a criminal assault on Bratt's fourteen-year old daughter. The pardon was unanimously recommended by the State board. The petitions were numerous signed and very urgent.

Fathers have no right to open their daughter's love letters. Mr. Alkire, a wealthy farmer of Pickaway County, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hagerty at Columbus, recently, charged with opening a letter addressed to his daughter. It seems that the old gentleman discovered that his daughter was corresponding with one Ed Mantel against his wishes and he resorted to this means of putting an end to it. He was required to give bond in $300.

The Cincinnati Enquirer of Wednesday last, has the following good advice: There is a mournful tendency among our public men to die. It seems to be fashionable just now.

Possibly the game is being played beyond the limit. It ought not to be a bad year. Strong man should not quit unless there is occasion. Did you ever note how small a thing may sometimes save a valuable life? Worry kills most of them. If the mind is mixed the body is in sore danger. Keep cool. Fight it out. The old and the young die of "grippe." Mrs. Polly Osgood, aged one hundred years, died at Amesbury, Mass., last week.

Dread Pneumonia.

What our fathers and mothers used to call "lung fever" is not, under advantageous conditions of age and bodily vigor, classed among the most dangerous diseases. Between the ages of 6 and 45, with a healthy constitution and with no "complications," the patient ordinarily worried through under the rude treatment of the day. It is curious to note that the leading feature of that treatment, phlebotomy (bleeding), is again being resorted to, though with greater care and discrimination. But the disease itself has greatly changed since the period to which the foregoing paragraph relates. Not only is it far more frequent, but much more virulent. It is often epidemic, and sweeps through the land like a grim destroyer, seeming sometimes to single out the strongest and most vigorous for its ghastly grip. Such an epidemic is now afflicting both Europe and America.

Little is known as to the predisposing causes. Exposure to cold is popularly cited as the main one, but the cases where no such exposure can be traced are even more frequent than where it can. Intemperance is urged by many as the great producer; but, while it is clear that the constitution, weakened by intemperance, falls a ready prey to the disease, there is no evidence at all that intemperance is a cause. Dr. Robert Bartholow, formerly of this city, and now of Philadelphia—justly one of the most famous physicians of the land—finds the origin in a microbe, which floats in the air, and enters the lungs, breeding there and causing all the mischief. This is a very taking idea in a time of epidemic. But how shall we, under it, explain the sporadic cases, where one shall die, and not another for miles around, or for months after, be effected? Dr. Bartholow points out the singular and wholly unexplained fact that in the majority of cases it is the right lung only which is attacked; and other famous observers go even further in the same direction than he does. Andral's investigations showed pneumonia more than twice as common on the right side as on the left, while Grissolle gives the proportion in his experience as 11 to 6. Dr. Bartholow divides the disease into two classes, the croupous and the catarrhal, the latter being far the more dangerous—50% being fatal. Perhaps this does not materially from the old classification of three stages: First, the engorgement; second, the hepatization; and, third, the purulent infiltration. Recovery from the first two stages are to be expected. It is not known that any one has recovered from the third stage.

The symptoms—the diagnosis—are unmistakable. The sharp lancinating pain in the side—(often over the pectora); the cough; the distinctive rust colored expectoration, and the equally distinctive increase in the rate of respiration over that of the pulse, leave no room for the intelligent physician to err. In the healthy man, the lungs act about once to every four beats of the pulse. With pneumonia the ratio is often one or two, or even one to one and a half; and this change is sometimes the very first symptom of the disease, preceding both the lancinating pains and the rusty expectoration.

Of treatment a newspaper article can not safely speak. If you have pneumonia, get your doctor as quickly as possible, and get the best one within your reach, and then thank God when you are able to discharge him. Meanwhile, take care of yourself, remembering it is far better to keep well than it is to get well.—Cin. Enquirer.

The House Committee on Elections has by a strict party vote decided to report to the House of Representatives in favor of unseating Judge Jackson, of the Fourth West Virginia Congressional District and seating Charles B. Smith, the Republican contestant.

The oldest lawsuit on record is now being tried in the highest Russian Court at St. Petersburg. It was brought 500 years ago against the city of Kamenez-Podolsk by the heirs of a dead nobleman to recover many thousands and acres of his estate which has been confiscated by the municipal authority.

George Lonsberry, cashier of the New York post office, committed suicide on Friday last, by a defaulter to the extent of $30,000. He was given a position in the office by Postmaster James in 1873. In 1880 he was appointed cashier, which office he had retained up to the time of his suicide. A boy only twelve years of age has been sentenced to imprisonment for life at Des Moines, Iowa, for the murder of his father and mother last July.

General Passenger Agent Falkenbach.

We copy below from the Marion Mirror: A short time since there was much speculation in railroad circles as to the probable truth of the rumor that the popular passenger agent of the Hocking Valley railroad, Mr. H. J. Falkenbach, would resign. The rumor was one of general local interest to the business men of Marion and the travelers from this place, and much chagrin was manifested even at a mention of the probable change without its confirmation. Mr. Falkenbach is well and favorably known by many people in this town and such is the case in all the other important towns along the line. His personality frequently secures business for the road which otherwise would go into other channels, and inasmuch as the Buckeye route depends largely upon its local trade for its earnings, this fact is one which should not be considered too lightly. A general protest from towns along the line would be the result of the acceptance of Mr. Falkenbach's resignation, it matters not what influence brought it about.

The people of Logan and the Hocking Valley are glad to know that Mr. Falkenbach will continue in his position. He is a gentleman, serviceable to the road and accommodating to its patrons. By his judgment, his spirit of enterprise and accommodation he has won popular distinction for the Hocking Valley lines, and secured a travel by excursions and other accommodations that make his lines the most popular with the people of any road in the State. Men may come and men may go, but we want Falkenbach to stay where he is.

Came to Logan for Repair.

We take the following pleasant notice from Bro. Barlow's Vinton Record: Last Saturday, while we were working off our outside on our splendid new Hoe cylinder press, two cogs suddenly broke on the small wheel that connects the power wheel with the universal joint. This disabled the press. We immediately repaired to Logan, with the injured wheel and went to the Motherwell Iron and Steel Works, where a new wheel was made off the pattern of the old one. The new wheel was not evolved until Thursday night when it came to hand, and was immediately put on the machine, and it worked like a charm. We instinctively shouted for joy, as though we had gained a great Republican victory. The Motherwell Iron and Steel Works is a great institution and we can confidently recommend them for anything in their line. On account of the mishap stated we are late this week. We hope no one will "cuss" us for something we could not possibly avoid. Our press is now in better condition than ever and the Record is one of the best equipped country offices in Southern Ohio.

They Are Afraid of the Consequences.

The citizens of Laurelville are very indignant over the manner in which the railroad men are filling the bed of Laurel creek with piling, preceding the erection of a bridge. The railroad bridge is to cross Laurel creek about 75 yards south of the county bridge. Piling is driven into the bed about every six feet. The citizens say that in case of a freshet, the piling or piers will so dam up the creek, catching all the drift and throw the volume of water directly into the town of Laurelville, which will cause incalculable damage to property and probably loss of life.

There was to be a meeting of the citizens last Tuesday evening to protest against the work, but those present were not unanimous as to the manner in which they should proceed, and nothing was done. An enterprising business man of the town offers to bear one third of the expense in condemning the nuisance. Understand them rightly they have no ill will against the railroad, but they do believe that a safer and more substantial bridge can be built in another manner and with the use of less piling, thereby avoiding the calamity that a freshet would otherwise bring upon the town.

The intelligence of the Republican members of Congress from Ohio is not complimented by the instructions which the Republican members of the Ohio legislature are continually trying to give them. This is another argument in favor of correcting the Republican gerrymander, which according to this Republican evidence has produced a lot of Republican incompetents.

News from Washington contain the gratifying intelligence that the health of Mr. Randall is improving, and that he will before long be able to take his seat in the House.

The sudden death at Washington of Gen. Thomas' widow, recalls the manner of that soldier's end. He died while sitting at the table, and before any one knew that he had been taken ill. In the same way his widow has met death without a moment's warning.

The Columbus Horror.

EXPLOSION OF NATURAL GAS AND GASOLINE.

Two Houses Blown Up, Killing Six and Horribly Mangling Fifty Others.

Columbus Post.

A horrible calamity came upon this city last Friday evening in the shape of a fire and explosion combined. At 5:30 o'clock the fire department was called to the corner of Wall st. and Cherry alley, to extinguish a fire in a frame house occupied by a widow lady named Mrs. John Marriot. A large crowd of spectators gathered to the scene when a report and a shock told that a barrel of gasoline had exploded. Mrs. Marriot was blown out of the house, and a man named Goulding was hurled across the street. The injured woman was taken into the house opposite her own, Dr. Wissinger was called and a number of neighbors rushed into the house.

Within ten minutes a second explosion occurred, shaking the earth for squares around and sending people and debris flying in all directions. Strong men trembled with fear, and in the short, awful suspense that followed, seemed powerless to act. It was but a moment, however, and the multitude rushed as one man to the ruins. Guided by the cries and moans of the mangled and dying, men groped about in the darkness, pulling out a dead body here, and a burned, mangled, but still living body there.

The second explosion occurred in Mrs. James' house, which was full of people at the time. Mr. James, wife and child were among the first rescued. They were all three badly bruised and burned. Mr. James had thrown open his house, and Mrs. Marriot who was injured by the first explosion was being attended there. That was the last seen of her. Her body has not been found. The other occupants of the house were more or less badly injured. One woman was seen struggling with a baby in her arms; her clothing was on fire. A fireman turned a small hose on her, and other men ran to save her. She was taken out and relieved of her precious charge—the baby was dead.

The neighboring business houses and residences were turned into hospitals, and as fast as they were taken out from the debris the dead and injured were carried to them. A general panic followed and considerable damage followed by runaway teams. Two belonging to the fire department ran away, demolishing a chemical engine and a hose cart. It was some time before the police could get the crowd away so that a systematic search of the ruins could be made.

There were counted thirty persons taken out of the ruins who were very seriously and some fatally injured. Four are known to have been killed outright.

A young lady living in the house where the first explosion occurred, ran to the second house that exploded, and after the blowing up of the latter she was seen with her hair burned off and clothes on fire, and ran out three herself into the snow.

Mr. Tresenrider, who saw her, came to her rescue and put out the fire on her garments. The lady in her fright was unable to tell her name.

The head of this house was brought in with his head out open, and the young lady snatched a curtain from one of the windows and disappeared into the street. Her name was unknown and it is feared her reason has departed. Mr. Tresenrider was horribly burned in his arms.

The young lady mentioned above was a member of the second family living with the Marriots in the first house. Six persons are known to be dead and the injured will exceed 50, not many of whom are thought to be fatally hurt.

NELLIE BLY MAKES THE CIRCUIT OF THE EARTH

In Less Time Than Was Given Her by the Projectors of the Enterprise.

New York, Jan 25th.—Nellie Bly, the New York World's globe circuiter, stepped from the train in the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania railroad this afternoon. Her actual time in making the circuit of the world, as computed by three official time takers and verified by the Worlds announcement this evening, 72 days, 6 hours and eleven minutes. A number of ladies and gentlemen, mostly newspaper people, met Miss Bly at Philadelphia and formed a party of escort to this city. The station in Jersey City was crowded with people long before the train was due, and Mayor Cleveland and other officials were there to receive Miss Bly. When the lady alighted she found herself in the midst of an enthusiastic crowd which the police had hard work to separate. Mayor Cleveland tried to make an address of welcome, but the crowd kept pressing so closely that it was postponed. The cheering was continued until Miss Bly had taken passage for New York over the 'Garden street ferry. This was accomplished only by two of her escort carrying her the length of the platform. On the trip across to New York every tug boat and steam craft saluted the ferry boat. At Cortland street another tremendous crowd had gathered and Miss Bly's way to the World office was one of cheers and flowers. At the World office Miss Bly held a short reception. She is in good health and spirits.

Great Relief to Anxious Mothers.

The traveler cannot have failed to notice the trouble which young America causes her parents or guardians while traveling by rail in the ordinary coaches on account of his determination to go upon the platform every time the door is opened. The through trains to Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia & New York via the B. & O. R. R., are now vestibuled from baggage car to sleeper, and heated by steam drawn from the locomotive. A child can pass from car to car on these trains as safely as through the rooms at home. Special Pullman Sleeper leaves Columbus daily at 3:50 p. m. and Sleeping Car connection at 11:30 p. m. Pullman space reserved in advance by addressing O. P. McCarty, Assistant General Passenger Agent, Columbus, Ohio.

In Hamburg a malignant type of typhus follows in the wake of influenza, attacking the enervated systems of the victims of the latter disease. Typhus, typhoid and malarial fevers are likely to follow in this country as well, unless convalescents take particularly good care of themselves until their systems are fully restored and recuperated. The pneumonia which is attended with so many fatalities is really a development of the influenza.

Morsels of Gastronomy.

Oysters taste this winter as if they had really reached the "blue point." Bostonians affect to be offended by any reference to pork and beans. There is nothing so good for the ruination of potato salad as bad oil. Southern shad and other fish are already here considerably ahead of time. There are no bullets quite as big as the size of the canned peas hotels use. Celery has suffered from insufficient brittleness and crispness all through the winter. As long as the mince meat holds out a pie of that material is seasonable. Old-fashioned New England cooking is now almost entirely out of date. What is known as "sweet potato pie" may be all well and good enough under certain conditions, but it is an acquired taste.
