

Look in your mirror today. Take a last look at your gray hair. It surely may be the last if you want it so; you needn't keep your gray hair a week longer than you wish. There's no guesswork about this; it's sure every time.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

After using it for two or three weeks you will notice how much younger you appear, ten years younger at least.

Ayer's Hair Vigor also cures dandruff, prevents falling of the hair, makes hair grow, and is a splendid hair dressing. It cannot help but do these things, for it's a hair-food. When the hair is well fed, it cannot help but grow.

It makes the scalp healthy and this cures the disease that causes dandruff.

BOSSSES ARE VERY SAD

ROOSEVELT NOT IN FAVOR WITH ADMINISTRATION FORCES.

McKinley Obligated to Run with the Man Who Derided Him—"Teddy" Likewise is Sore Because He Can Already See His Political Finish.

Washington correspondence.

The administration forces came back to Washington, looking very, very sad, not to say disgusted. They all deserted their posts and went over to the Philadelphia Republican convention with a notion that it was to be an administration circus from start to finish. Of course, some of the quite know who Mark Hanna had picked for Vice-President, but nobody objected to a little mystery. It helped to give the affair some semblance of life and interest.

McKinley and Roosevelt. Even now they can hardly realize it. A row of the party bosses, and Hanna forced to accept the man he hated. McKinley obliged to run on a ticket with the man who derisively speaks of the President as "chocolate éclair backbone." And to cap the climax, Roosevelt is angry and sore at the fate which finishes him politically by putting him on the Vice-Presidential ticket. One of Roosevelt's most ardent friends, the Republican Presidential candidate in 1904, shattered his aspirations to wreck the Platt machine by having himself re-elected governor of New York State.

It was a queer political comedy. Everybody—except Platt and Quay—was disappointed. These two gentlemen evened up some private and personal scores and taught the bumpkins Mr. Hanna that there are a few finer and more astute bosses than he.

Platt, as the instrument of the trusts, did not want Roosevelt for governor of New York another term. Neither did he propose to be pestered with that erratic gentleman's Presidential aspirations for 1904. To unload Roosevelt on Hanna as McKinley's running mate was a temptation too strong to be resisted. Quay helped the deal, because he was sore at Hanna's vote to deny him a seat in the Senate.

Incidentally, a good many of the delegates came to Philadelphia favoring Roosevelt, but if Hanna had only the delegates to handle he would have shown them in short order that his choice didn't make any difference in his decision as to the Vice-Presidential candidate. But Platt, of New York, was too wily for the administration and for Roosevelt. Probably no man could have been selected who is more distasteful to McKinley and Hanna and the trust interests than Roosevelt.

It is not that Roosevelt is such a "pure and spiritual unadorned person," as Kipling would say, but that he is erratic and obstinate and badly balanced. Roosevelt is like the bucking broncho of the plains, while McKinley is well broken to the harness, and can be depended upon to do in a refined and dignified manner whatever his masters desire.

The administration follows on their return to Washington hardly tried to conceal their distaste for Roosevelt. The campaign began with dissension and scorn among the Republican leaders. Hanna is not only sore because he has received an unpalatable lesson in the art of political bossism, but he knows that the nomination of Roosevelt will make it very difficult for him to collect his campaign fund.

There is some faint and half-hearted attempt to make it appear that Hanna and McKinley acquiesce "in the will of the majority of the convention," but it is a very sorry bit of acting, and the delegates themselves have gone home impressed profoundly with the conviction that even those who wanted to nominate Roosevelt would not have been permitted to have their way only that that happened to be the outcome of the war between the bosses.

Roosevelt, after four days of recalcitrance, accepted the nomination for Vice-President with very bad grace. He is not a good actor. He didn't want to be politically jostled yet and he showed his grief plainly when the bosses wished he had to assist at his own political funeral, even to the extent of seconding the nomination of McKinley.

As soon as Hanna and the administration leaders recover from their dismay they will begin to shout loudly that they were right. Roosevelt has been permitted to have their way only that that happened to be the outcome of the war between the bosses.

WORKING THE GOVERNMENT.

The Republicans have made a new departure in having their campaign text books for this fall prepared in a government office and at government expense.

Mr. O. P. Austin, chief of the bureau of statistics, has immediate charge of the work, and is devoting time to the preparation of the figures and to the writing of other matter. Mr. Austin's salary as chief of bureau is a very lucrative one, and the bureau is supposed to be devoted to the preparation of impartial and non-partisan statistics. The campaign text book, on the other hand, is well understood to present information of a decidedly prejudiced character. While the statements printed therein purport to be and are generally more or less correct, they are, in fact, and do not show the other side of the argument. The Republican text book contains some 400 or 500 pages, and it is not fully made up and printed till some time after the national convention. It is the guide of the thousands of speakers and spell-binders who work for the success of the Republican ticket. Within its covers they find a skeleton for their arguments on almost every topic under the sun that can enter into political discussion on the part of the Republicans. Frankly admit that Mr. Austin is preparing the book and is using the government clerks to help him compile it, but excuse the fact by saying that his name will appear in connection with it. As usual, the book will be put forth as the production of the national committee. Mr. Austin is deservedly respected, and it is therefore that he is doing this work only at the behest of his superiors in the treasury department and the White House. But he discloses anew the old Republican game of working the government for all it is worth.—Lawrence (Mass.) News.

SHADES OF WEBSTER AND CALHOUN.

Senator Thurston of Nebraska has discovered that Mark Hanna is an orator. This is very kind of Mr. Thurston, who will not succeed himself in the Senate, and who would probably not object to some recognition of the hands of another Hanna-McKinley administration. How the Nebraska Senator could have seen anything in Hanna's address at Philadelphia more than vulgar, arrogant, bullying self-assertion, it is hard to understand. Hanna's oratorical powers were those of a man, mentally bleated with the idea of his own self-importance, and the only creditable thing about them was that they were evidently original. No secretary worthy of the place would have framed such a composition. It was Hanna throughout, dictating, dictating, egotistical, the incarnation of vulgar plutocracy, the fitting master and multipiece of the trusts whose motto is money, and who will tolerate scholarship only in so far as it is their tool and their slave.

Hanna an orator! Shades of Daniel Webster, of Clay, of Calhoun, Sumner, and Lincoln! To such base cynicism has the Republican party come at last under the rule of the trust juggernaut of which Hanna is the fitting symbol.—New York News.

THREE YEARS OF MCKINLEY.

President McKinley has occupied the White House more than three years. For the same period of time the Government has been run by the nation's plutocrats of the White House syndicate. The hump-backed taxpayer—other than the man with the hoe—can now take stock and ascertain his condition. Three years of McKinley's rule have given this patient man with a lump a Government that costs about $250,000,000 a year, nearly $200,000,000 a day, more than $40,000,000 a week, all $150,000,000 a month, in the neighborhood of $2,000,000,000 a year—and yet the patient man with eyes like an ox is not wholly satisfied.—New York Verdict.

In Illinois.

It is evident that the steering committee of the Republican party in Illinois is alarmed over the attitude of the members of this committee do not hesitate to say that the German and Irish vote is going to be Democratic. There are many reasons for this, but one of the strongest of them is the anti-Boer attitude of the Republicans. The Germans and the Irish are lovers of liberty, and believe in fair play. They have no love for England and they sympathize with the Boers. The Democratic party has defended the principles of a free government, and therefore the German and Irish vote is going to be cast for the Democratic candidate in Illinois.

WOLCOTT'S VARIEGATED VIEWS

"We have made advances enough (to other nations). This country can better afford than any other to enter upon the contest for commercial supremacy with gold as its standard, and for us the time has come to give fair notice to the world that we, too, make gold our standard and redoubt our obligations in that metal. For twelve years the platforms of the party have declared in favor of the use of gold and silver as money. The logic of recent events, together with the attempt of Democracy to drag down the question from its international character, to associate it with every vagary of Populism and socialism, and to drive this country to an alliance with Mexico and China, as an exclusively silver-using country, has impelled our people to this settlement of this problem, and the settlement, in the hands of Congress, has eliminated the danger which its further agitation menaced.

"May I, a Western man, add another word? The passage of this bill, which received the vote of every Western Republican in Congress, marked the settlement, forever final, of every sort of different, heterodox, and un-American and the East and the West growing out of currency problems. Even if the stern logic of events had not convinced us, our deep and abiding loyalty to the principles of the party, our belief that the judgment of a majority should prevail, and our sense of duty to our constituents.—Senator Wolcott at the Republican national convention, June 19, 1900.

"No sectional horizon obscures our view. If the contest for the people is to be won, it must be because against the selfish action of a few, a majority has rallied the united votes of the South and West. The fertile acres of your section wait for the plow of the husbandman; so do ours. You need capital for the development of your great resources; so do we. Both sections need fair prices for the products of the farm and a stable and sufficient currency.

"It is for us, standing together on this great question, to save our common country from greater suffering and impoverishment than even the horrors of war could inflict; and by our united action, to set a standard of both gold and silver coinage by centuries of usage, but to maintain, as well, the standard of American manhood."—From Wolcott's speech in the Senate, Aug. 31, 1903.

The administration assured us that it looked forward with ardent and hopeful anticipation to the time when gold and silver would go hand in hand, the sure defense of national credit. This was for Western consumption. One little qualification was added—that it would first be necessary to secure the consent of other nations, England included; a consent we are apt to secure under existing conditions and with the methods employed as we are to catch larks when the heavens fall. As if Great Britain, which demonstrated itself seventy-five years ago, and has since that time been the standard of American manhood, ever since, would be apt to change her policy until we had demonstrated our intention to adopt the double standard.

"It makes but little difference who has strangled silver coinage. It has been strangled in the hands of the trust, and each party as to this measure has become what Disraeli once charged the Tory party with having become, 'an organized hypocrisy.' But, before long, unless all signs fail, each side will be anxious enough to unload the responsibility upon the other, for some day the people will have a ringing—"Wolcott's speech in the Senate, April 6, 1892.

East Is a Factor.

Owing to the issues which have sprung up during the last four years under the Republican administration the East is going to be an important factor in the Presidential campaign.

It is evident that the Democrats have gained greatly in strength at the East, says the Chicago Democrat, and New York and New Jersey may be considered as reasonably certain to go Democratic next November.

In 1896 New York gave McKinley 208,000 votes over Bryan, and that was not the only reason why the Democrats to that Democrats were fully justified in calling the Empire State "the enemy of the party." But in 1898 there was a marvelous slump in the Republican majority which sank to the slender total of 18,000 majority for Roosevelt. Since then Democracy has been gaining steadily, and it will be surprising if the small Republican majority is not wiped out this year.

New York has 36 electoral votes, and these, added to the 20 expected from Kentucky and Maryland, would make 56 and put the Democrats in a position of exceeding opulence as to votes. As for New Jersey, that State gave McKinley 88,000 of the advantage of Bryan in 1896, but in 1898 the slump from Republican majorities showed that the grand party's majority had fallen to less than 10,000.

Now, with New York, New Jersey, Maryland and Kentucky properly swung over, the McKinley electoral majority of 95 would be converted into a Bryan lead of 37. Democrats can no longer say that the East is "the enemy of the party."

SENSATIONALITIES BECOME DULLED.

Spain the killing of a single American in Cuba shook the nations from ocean to ocean. Now when a list of fifty deaths comes in from the Philippines it attracts no more attention than a patent office report. It is wonderful how the military can be so indifferent to sensibilities.—Bloomington Bulletin.

The Difference.

Bryan is the man of the people, of the constitution and of popular liberty. McKinley is the man of the great corporations, of classes that would be greater than the constitution and of special privileges to the wealthy few, which are gradually destroying popular liberties and open opportunities for all.—Danville (Ill.) Press.

Imperialism in China.

Too Much for It.

The New York World, which in 1896 bitterly opposed Mr. Bryan, will this year support him for the presidency. McKinleyism and its attendant evils are too much for even its hardened stomach to digest.—Ellicott (Md.) Democrat.

SURE SIGN OF INTOXICATION.

Yonks Wife's Experiment and the Proof that Followed.

They had only been married three short months, but one day she made a fearful discovery. On a particular evening when he came home she was completely started when she fancied she detected the odor of liquor upon him. At first she held her breath, she was so frightened. But at length it slowly but irrefutably dawned upon her. She was almost dazed. Still, and when all indications pointed that way, she refused to believe, and as a last straw she asked him if he had not been to the barbers. He replied that he had not. Therefore, at last even her mad heart had to be given up. She did not even think of leaving him at that evening. She trusted him ever so much, and she thought how ungrateful she would feel and how shocked and offended he would be if she should prove on her suspicions and they should turn out to be wholly inaccurate. She resolved to wait, but in the meantime she set about devising a plan whereby she could establish upon any future occasion, beyond cavil, just what the truth was.

She thought over a great many ideas and ways and means, but came across nothing satisfactory. Just at this juncture she read in the paper, one day, after a great deal of preliminary cautioning, she revealed the awfulness of her situation. The very dear friend sympathized heartily and fervently with her in the terrible calamity, but she suggested that it would be a good plan to get the first case of the medicine. She perfectly positive before confounding him with his guilt. On being interrogated as to a plan, she replied that she had always heard it said, and she believed she was to quite the case, that a man even slightly intoxicated could pronounce words in any language. Her friend was immensely gratified at this idea, which she also averred to have often heard and to retain perfect faith in. Thereupon it was agreed that the bride of a few months should make a list of words and keep them always at hand, ready for use in an emergency.

As soon as her friend had gone she got down an unabridged dictionary and made out a list that she thought would give the matter a fair trial. At last, one day, when she was in the kitchen again, she found that her husband did not seem just exactly as he generally did. She made an attempt to contain herself any longer, but immediately asked him to read the words she had collected. Her friend happened to be on the next day. The young wife was in a state of great agitation and collapse.

"Yes, yes," she sobbed hysterically, "it was just as I thought."

Here a fresh flood of tears choked her utterance. Presently she was able to say, "I gave him this list," she continued. Here she handed it over to her friend. It ran: Phthisis, phylactery, photochromy, hypochondriasis, malubier, paroxysm, phaniascope, pleiosaurus, peccotantism, diatessaron, anti-phosphen, pneumothorax.

"And," she went on while the friend was reading it, "he missed nearly half."—New York Sun.

War His Preference.

When Charles Dudley Warner was editor of the Hartford Press, back in the '60s, arousing the patriotism of the States by his energetic appeals, one of his most brilliant and successful newspaper-room one day, and, facing Mr. Warner, said: "Mr. Warner, I've decided to enlist in the army." With mingled emotions of pride and responsibility Mr. Warner replied that it pleased him that the man felt the call to duty. "Oh, it isn't that," said the truthful compositing, "but I'd rather be shot than set your copy."—Hartford Courant.

Would We Never Seek Divorce.

The man who drifted into the publication office had a disappointed and hungry look.

"I am," remarked to the clerk, "I want to put an ad. in your paper. Make it: 'Wanted—A situation; any old job.'"

"Shall I add, 'Money no object?'"

"No; make it 'object matrimony.'"

"That sounds rather queer."

"Does it? Well, that's the way I feel. I could make the acquaintance of a good, decent job if I were only willing to marry it for life."—Philadelphia Press.

Parlor Magic.

A feat which any one can perform with little or no practice is that of placing fourteen matches upon a table and lifting them all up upon one of the matches. This is how it is done: Pick out one match—the one that has the flattest surface—and then place six of the other matches about one-fourth each across the first one, and the six being parallel to each other and the thickness of a match distant from each other. Next place six other matches one-fourth each across the first match, but from the other side, all parallel and in the spaces left by the arrangement of the six matches. Now take the fourteenth match, lay it over the twelve matches where they intersect, and by carefully lifting match No. 14 and holding match No. 14 in place you will accomplish without difficulty the feat.—Woman's Home Companion.

TO WOMEN WHO DOUBT.

Every Suffering Woman Should Read This Letter and be Convinced that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Cure Female Weakness.

"I have been troubled with female weakness in its worst form for about ten years. I had leucorrhoea and was so weak that I could not do my housework. I also had falling of the womb and ovaries and all manner of nervous troubles. At times my back would ache very hard. I could not lift anything or do any heavy work; was not able to stand on my feet. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for doctors but they did me no good. After a time I concluded to try your medicine and I can truly say it does all that you claim for it to do.

Ten bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and seven packages of Sensitive Wash made a new woman of me. I have had no more trouble since taking the fifth bottle. I weigh more than I have in years; can do all my own housework, sleep well, have a good appetite and now feel that life is worth living. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I feel that it has saved my life and would not be without it for anything. I am always glad to recommend your medicine to all my sex. For I know if they follow your directions, they will be cured."—Mrs. ANNE THOMPSON, South Hot Springs, Ark.

Vast Fortunes of Austrian Nobility.

An incident that recently occurred in Austria, in which the principal parties are the Archduke Frederic and a Hungarian colonel, has had the effect of attracting general attention to the question of the enormous fortunes that exist in Austria. One thing that became evident by the episode was that the Archduke Frederic, heir of the old Archduke Albert, is richer than the Emperor. In fact, in point of worldly possessions, Francis Joseph ranks only third in his empire. The Archduke Frederic is the second. The richest of all is a Rothschild. The death of the Baron Hirsch advanced both members of the imperial family one grade. The illustrious philanthropist was not so rich as the head of the Austrian Rothschilds, but he was far in advance of both imperial millionaires.
