Chicago Skyscrapers Falling Into Illinois Tunnel.

Chicago, March 3.—Chicago is gradually dropping into the bore under the streets, known as the Illinois Telephone Tunnel. The big Marshall Field store started down to-day and smashed the glass in two big show windows. The Reliance skyscraper across the street has settled until tenants are becoming frightened. The Pullman building has gone down so far that it is split from basement to turret. The Marshall Field wholesale structure on Adams street has been sinking for months and is still going down. At twelve different street intersections there are depressions in the streets.

It is held possible by engineers that a short drop, such as might easily come beneath the corner of a steel bodied structure at any time, would result in so great a strain on the frame of the building, as to cause it to fall. Serious consequences are feared should such an accident come with the building crowded with shoppers and employees.

The ordinance requires the tunnel to be 27 feet under the streets. The intervening 27 feet is mostly
