

Announcement.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT-SENTINEL:—I hereby announce my name for the nomination of Infrmary Director of Hocking County at the Democratic primary election.

MARION NUTTER

W. J. BRYAN The Next President of the United States

Bryan is Here in Spirit.

By a sudden and very striking political refraction William J. Bryan, though on the other side of the earth, appears to have arrived.

What was called, only a little while ago, in contempt or derision "Bryanism" has become sane, but progressive conservatism, if not a providence.

What has happened is that the people have learned to understand Mr. Bryan while he has learned also to understand himself. Bryanism was never wild.

It saw the huge, yellow peril of the money-power truly but vaguely and made the bad mistake of supposing that the strength of the Caliban law in the yellow metal of his shield.

Bryan was a great leader. Young; brave to the point of recklessness; enthusiastic; to the level of inspiration; superlatively eloquent; single-purposed, to the point of devotion, with staying-power like the bull-tirelessness of the forest kings; and he fooled himself, but not the people. They gloried in him, but would not follow him on the great issue of requiring a double standard for the manipulated currency.

The people lead in this country. They are timid, slow to think, and slow to act, but when they move, the road is a right line, and they are getting under way. What they want is honest money and a fair chance to earn it; honest administration and a fair chance to participate in it; honest returns for capital and an honest share for labor; honest public works and a fair distribution of them; honest servants and a fair chance to direct and control them, etc.—honesty is what the people are out for with their Diogenes lantern. They want a business manager and Mr. Bryan seems not only eligible but also a hot favorite with the Democrats.

A reorganization of the Democratic party under Mr. Bryan's leadership, on a platform embracing tariff reform; government control of public service corporations; wide-open publicity as to all corporations; postal savings banks; parcel post; limitation of the internal revenue law, concerning the liquor dealers' special tax, to states where the liquor traffic is lawful; prohibition of common carriers engaged in interstate commerce, carrying alcoholic liquors into Prohibition States contrary to the laws of such states; and the prohibition of the liquor traffic in the District of Columbia and all territory under federal control would carry the country with a shout, in 1908.

There is nothing left of the Republican party, from the standpoint of popular affection, but an old habit, a lot of prejudices and some candidates. The habit is weakening. The prejudices are dissipating. Roosevelt is impossible because "he himself has said it." Fairbanks is impossible because the day for men of his type has passed. Root is impossible because of the Boss Tweed school of law and politics he hails from. Taft is impossible because he has no record, to speak of, and Cannon is—simply impossible.

The New Scheme of the Bosses.

It appears that the triumvirate now controlling Athens county politics and dictating Athens county nominations of the Republican party have concluded to waive any application to the voters of Athens county to either endorse or disapprove of their conduct of Republican affairs, and so they propose not to disturb the County Central Committee, and leave them at home and perpetuate their own power for a long year. In doing this they only express their own genuine opinion that they are better capable of managing the forces of the party in Athens county than the Committee is. Therefore, they will suggest that they be retained as "bosses" for another year at least. It is reported that there is some question whether they will not suggest that their lease of domination be extended for five years as it would save a good deal of expense and trouble and work out precisely the same result in the long run.

Their control of politics in Athens county apparently reduced the majority for the Republican ticket between 1904 and 1905 a little matter of thirty odd hundred, but they confidently believe, if power is continued in their hands and the Central Committee will keep still and pay no attention to the matter and not interfere to have something to say, that they can at least elect the county ticket this fall and, perhaps, give a small majority to the State ticket, and in the meantime they will have the control of the patronage, can name the county officers and be in a condition at some future time to re-elect themselves in case the Committee should become unruly and suggest that an election ought to be had. So far as we know there is no disposition on the part of the rank and file of the county to force a primary and it is said they will content themselves with voting as they see fit on the various propositions held out to them by their bosses.

George Cox in his best days would have halted and sneered at the thought of such a piece of monstrous usurpation.

We are glad to see this going on, and hail the proposition as a significant and joyous one that three men, products of Athens county training in politics, have the ability to take the five thousands Republicans of Athens county by the throat and demand their subservience—Athens Journal.

The triumvirs of Athens are not to be out-done by the Boss of Hocking and his partners in political infamy. It is now only necessary for little Vinton, Ross and Meigs to follow suit by perpetrating and form a close political corporation. Everyone has heard of the proverbial calf which got enough rope—the above is a parallel instance.

Bryan to Go Again—Perhaps.

Representative Garber, of Ohio, gives out the information that in Washington, William J. Bryan is looked upon as an ideal candidate and his nomination and election predicted by friends and foes alike. He says that the Ohio convention will start the boom by a unanimous endorsement of the great Nebraskan.

Mr. Garber is probably correct in his prediction, and the fact is very significant of the spirit of the times. The people are on the lookout for character, and that is what Mr. Bryan has above all to offer in his candidacy.

Some of his political propositions did not stand the test, but it is all but universally recognized that what he had in the bottom of his mind was right and near the bottom of the matter—that the money power is a sneak and a traitor.

But from his first appearance at the center of the stage he has not failed at all in point of character.

On the contrary he has grown visibly and grandly in the estimation of all sorts and conditions of men. His foreign tour has reflected more credit on American manhood than any similar event in recent years. In Japan, China and the Philippines, "Bryan" is but another word for Christian gentleman.—The New Voice.

To His Long Home.

After a long period of public sympathy and apprehension, and a brave and rugged struggle for a life that belonged to the people of his state rather than to him, Governor M. Pattison has crossed the mysterious river. To him the transition was less of an adventure than it has been to the average of mankind preceding him, or than it will be to the myriads who will follow with no definite confidences as to what eternity has in store for them. He sincerely embraced a faith that taught that what we call death was merely a change of condition after the swift march across the worldly world. He was pre-eminently alert and devoted to his duties in this life, and his sincerity and devoutness must have given him an ever-present comfort in the expectation which he now realizes. He was a striking combination of the serious, practical man of the world and the highest idealist in religious consideration. In his public as well as in his private life he employed all the human instrumentalities that were proper to advance himself, his fellow citizens and his country; but the moral law and the golden rule were his guiding lines. He was not a prude, and was the furthest from hypocrisy. Men of all moral conditions had faith in him. He stood for all, without restraining his emotions or opinions in any direction.

The last political campaign in Ohio was one of the most remarkable in the history of the state. Mr. Pattison was a regular party nominee for Governor, with his views on all public questions written in his career and achievements. They were not uniform in party alignment. He was elected by a majority which the opposition would have been glad to have accepted as equal to the advantage on their side. All the rest of his ticket fell by the usual arithmetic of disaster. The triumph was perspicuously personal, though at the same time a high testimonial to the electorate of the state, who knew they had found a man who could be relied on to cross the party lines at the right places and be responsible to the whole community at a time when independence seemed almost positively necessary. Mr. Pattison was a brave and direct man. He was skilled in the legitimate strategy of politics, but he was not a trickster or a dodger. He was a candidate for an emergency, and served the purpose faithfully and well. Whatever able and strong men may have had against the course of politics in 1905 everybody knew that John M. Pattison had no secrets, and everybody knew where to find him. Nobody could spring a surprise on him. His life was open for all to read, and he calmly but defiantly stood by the whole of it. Nobody will ever be able now to tell what the general outcome of his administration as Governor might have been had he lived out his term; but it may be set down with the certainty of a fixed star that it would have been approved by the conscience of John M. Pattison.

The biography of Governor Pattison, written in fairness and with strict adaptation to the truth, will be one that his family and friends may always be proud of. He was a man of high morals and education, and a useful and faithful public servant. He was successful in business, but shared his prosperity, to the extent possible under the laws of trade, with those surrounding him and with whom he dealt. His success in life was a part of the legitimate success of the communities in which he lived and worked, and in his state, and in the country. Good men differed from him sometimes, but all respected him, for all his contentions were in the open field. He did not fight in concealed armor or behind breast-works.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Baresford Anecdote.

An amusing reminiscence is given in Black and White of Lord Charles Baresford. He once created a disturbance in the house by a practical joke, for which the victim never forgave him. There was a certain member at the time who used to seek refuge in an empty bench behind the speaker's chair whenever a long winded debate was in progress. Here he would take off his boots and go to sleep until the division bell rang. On the day in question Baresford crept up to him and, taking one of the boots, hid it under a bench. Just then the division bell rang, and the sleepy member hunted high and low for his boot; but, unable to find it, he was hustled out by the tellers, and the humorous spectacle was witnessed of a staid member holding up one leg and showing a big hole in his sock.

The First Occasion.

The caution of the Aberdonian in giving an answer to a direct question was well illustrated the other day when I asked an eastern friend of mine whose family was not noted for very active habits:

"Was not your father's death very sudden?"

Slowly drawing one hand from his pocket and pulling down his beard, the interrogated one cautiously replied: "Aye, it was unco' sudden for him. I ne'er kent o' ma feyther bein' in a hurry before."—London Tit-Bits.

He Won the Suit.

"The worst case of ignorance I can tell you of occurred in 1869 in a remote section of our country," said a western congressman. "There was a man who suddenly became rich and built an enormous house, with some statuary, and so he wrote to Italy for a copy of Venus de Milo. The copy in due time arrived. It was executed in Carrara marble very beautifully. But no sooner did he receive it than the millionaire sued the railroad for $2,000 for mutilation, and, what's more, he won the suit."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Mallucination.

It is related that a lady was introduced to Sir Morell Mackenzie at a London soiree as John Strange Winter, and when he incredulously repeated the name she replied, "Oh, yes, I'm Bootle's Baby." Whereupon the great physician drew a friend aside and confided to him that he had just met a poor demented lady who was introduced as a man and thought herself a baby.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

The History of This Wonderful and Impending Structure.

Washington monument is a wonderful structure and very imposing. Built of white marble, absolutely without ornamentation and capped by an aluminum pyramid, this immense needle rises to a height of over 555 feet.

It took thirty-six years to build, cost $1,250,000 and weighs close upon 100,000 tons. There is room enough in the interior of the monument to house an army of 12,000 men, for the landings will accommodate 7,675, the stairs 3,845, the upper and lower platforms 450 and the elevator 30. There are 900 steps. The weight of the capstone is 3,300 pounds, while the number of blocks of marble used in its construction reached 23,000.

The cornerstone of this gigantic monument was laid on July 4, 1848, and on the 6th of December, 1884, the topmost stone of the pyramid was set. Two months later the great shaft was dedicated. The immense structure rests on a foundation bed of fine sand two feet thick, which is laid on a stratum of boulders and gravel, and its stability is assured against all natural causes except earthquakes and the washing out of the sand beds beneath the monument.

The Washington monument stands on a site selected by George Washington in the year 1783. It is close by the banks of the Potomac, surrounded by forty acres of sloping mounds and terraces, and but a fractional distance from the Jeffersonian meridian, which passes due north and south through the center of the White House and due east and west through the center of the capitol.

The monument has thirty-one landings, the first one being 30 feet from the base and the last 330 feet. On the walls of each landing are various memorial inscriptions and tablets presented by different societies, persons and countries. The thirteenth platform is at a height of 150 feet, and it is here where the government began its work of finishing the monument in 1878. Altogether the monument contains 176 memorial tablets. There is one tablet which is totally decayed and illegible, so that no one knows where it came from or who gave it.

Many of the blocks of marble were sent by foreign countries as a tribute of admiration for the Father of His Country. All of these now form part of the monument with one exception. This was a block of African marble from the temple of Concord, Rome, sent as a gift from the pope. It bore the inscription, "Rome to America." In March, 1854, however, the lapidary, under whose the memorial blocks were kept, was forcibly entered, and this stone was taken and, it is supposed, was thrown into the Potomac. A reward for its return was offered, but the stone was never recovered, and its hiding place remains a secret to this day.

Going "Out" to Dinner.

A Philadelphia business man had as guest a friend from Toledo, an extremely busy individual, little familiar with the social graces. For the first evening of his stay a dinner party had been arranged. The hostess had provided a most attractive young woman for the Toledo man, and it was thought that he would take a desperate fancy to her, which, indeed, he did. When the guests had gathered and were ready to go out the host, with his politest bow, said, "Mr. Blank, will you please take Miss Dash out to dinner?" "Certainly," responded the Toledo man, with alacrity, "but I understood that we were to have dinner here in the house."—Argonaut.

Taking No Chances.

"Here's a good scheme," she said, looking up from the paper she had been reading. He seemed a trifle suspicious, but it was so evident that he was expected to answer that he made the inquiry.

"Why, it says that some wives shave their husbands and in that way save what they would ordinarily pay for a barber," she explained. "Mary," he said after a moment's thought, "you may get that gown you spoke about this morning. It won't be necessary for you to get at my throat with a razor."
