HIS "DEAREST."

It Took More Than Coaxing to Make Johnny Use the Term.

Shortly after Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's book, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," appeared she went with her two little boys to a seaside hotel. The story had made a great sensation, and there had ensued a regular epidemic of Fauntleroy curls, Fauntleroy suits and Fauntleroy youngsters. In the room next to that occupied by Mrs. Burnett was a dashing, rather overdressed widow, with a red haired, bullet headed son of about seven, who was the terror of the hotel. Anticipating the arrival of the famous author, the mother had purchased a complete and elaborate Fauntleroy outfit, with which she proceeded to deck out her unappreciative and rebellious offspring.

Not content with this outward seeming, the woman desired to complete the caricature by compelling her precious child to address her as "dearest," after the manner of the hero of the book, instead of "mommer" or, more frequently, merely "say," as had been his previous custom.

Mrs. Burnett arrived no sooner than she had been expected, but apparently before little Johnny had entirely completed his course of instruction in filial courtesy, as was evident by the sounds which penetrated the thin lath and plaster partition between the rooms. "This is what Mrs. Burnett heard:

"Johnny!" Silence. "Johnny, do you hear me?" Silence. "Call me 'Dearest!'" Silence. "Will you call me 'Dearest,' or shall I make you?" "Yer can't make me." "Yes, I can. Call me 'Dearest!'" "Go ter blazes!" "That's no way to speak to me." "It's a good sight better'n you want me to say." "It isn't. Call me 'Dearest!'" Silence. "Do you want me to use the trunk strap? Call me 'Dearest!'" Silence. "Call me 'Dearest!'" Silence. "Biff! Biff! Biff! Biff! 'Call me 'Dearest!'" "I won't! Biff! 'I won't! Biff!"

Vulgarity.
At a mountain hunting resort a richly dressed, florid looking woman, bedecked with jewels in the daytime, remarked to one of her family party in a loud, confident tone, "They're the same crowd; I seen them people at the station in New York." The tone, the atrocious mangling of the English language, the dress and manner, elicited the comment from an old gentleman, "How utterly coarse, common and vulgar!"

The guides and native hunters violate all the rules of grammar in their speech. They say, "Hank, I han't got no torbacker in this coat," and the like, and yet their rude and uncouth speech does not strike any one used to the words as "vulgar." Rough and ungrammatical speech from the lips of rough and unlettered men seems rather natural, but there is a violent inharmonious and inappropriateness in common and hideous language from the mouths of men at work, who, from their wealth, opportunities, dress and way of life, may be expected to pay some attention to the refinements and elegancies of life.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Relics.
A tooth alleged to have been drawn from Napoleon's head at St. Helena was sold for $37.50. For Kant's wig only $40 could be obtained, but Sterne's wig was valued at $1,000. Two hundred dollars is said to have been given for Descartes' skull, whereas $3,400 was given for one of Sir Isaac Newton's teeth, and $20,000 was offered for one of the teeth of Heloise at the time when her body was exhumed. The waistcoat worn by Rousseaue has been priced at $190, his watch at $100. Not all the relics, however, in which there has been traffic have been genuine. Voltaire cannot have owned more than a fraction of the walking sticks that have been sold as his, and a tradesman in France used to boast that he had disposed of 132 "last walking sticks" carried by Jean Jacques Rousseau. A Paris tradesman for a long time did an equally lucrative business in "the last pair of trousers worn by Victor Hugo."

Bryan to Iowa Legislature.
Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 13.—William J. Bryan was given an ovation by the state legislature, that is overwhelmingly Republican. He appeared on invitation before the two houses of the Iowa general assembly and made an address in which he discussed the entire range of political issues, and which was accepted by the Democrats of the legislature as a tentative platform for the presidential campaign for 1908. Mr. Bryan argued strongly for the popular election of United States senators, and declared himself in favor of a direct primary. "The people will soon get together," said Mr. Bryan, "Eliminate the large special interests that have their representatives about every legislative body, and Democrats and Republicans and members of all parties could agree upon necessary legislation."
