Gatch Brown and Aylette Fullerton were caught out in a terrible gale the other day. A Horrible Holocaust.

On Monday an awful calamity occurred at the World's Fair and the lives of nearly two score of Chicago's brave firemen were sacrificed. The Cold Storage warehouse, a structure 150 by 250 feet, containing several ice machines and a large quantity of oil, took fire. The flames appeared at the top of the cupola inclosing the smoke stack. Hardly had the firemen attacked it there until it broke out in fury beneath them, and they found themselves imprisoned. One man slid down a line of hose to the roof below, but before those who were following reached safety the hose was burned and they fell into the seething flames below. Captain Fitzpatrick in falling from the end of a burned rope lodged on the top of a ladder whence he was rescued by Marshal Murphy. Both of these men were so injured that their lives are despaired of. These were the only escapes. Fifty thousand people stood horrified and helpless in the presence of this awful scene.

City Council.

The City Council had barely a quorum Monday evening, but, with Mr. McGuire as Clerk and His Honor wielding the gavel, the session began. For an hour or more the melodious voice of the Secretary pro tem, hummed along like the happy sound of a grinding mill, as he read the minutes of the numerous meetings during the past month. At length the volume was ended, and with a sigh of relief he mopped his beaded brow.

Prof. Smith proceeded to read the report of the City Treasurer, which was duly received.

Some gasoline concern asked by letter to be given a chance to light the city, but the Council couldn't see it in that light.

Mr. Leopold, representing the Boughner Engineering Co., of Cincinnati, suggested that the company wanted to use the certified check for $1,250 left with the city as a guarantee that they would enter into contract, as per the bid, on the water works. As a bird in hand is worth more than one in the bush, the Council on suggestion of the Solicitor and Mr. Hire required a satisfactory bond of $1,500 in lieu of the $1,250 certified check.

A request from Mr. Landess for the opening of an alley through the square in which he resides was referred to the street committee.

The Superior Loan and Building Association is one of the most solid institutions of the State. It has made no loans but what are safe. The report that it had $4,000 loaned to one of our institutions on questionable security is an error. The loan referred to is for $2,100 and the security worth $50,000. There are no safer institutions than the Superior Loan and Building Association.

The Hillsboro High School Alumni will hold a banquet at the Walnut street building, Friday evening, July 28th. The assessment will be $1.00 per member and each member will be allowed one invitation for a friend. In our Fourth-of-July article, which was necessarily abbreviated and incomplete, because of the short time available before going to press, we feared there would be numerous inaccuracies, but, the only one we have heard of was the calling of the Hillsboro Lumber Co.'s magnificent float, a wagon. This company had one of the finest displays in the line, and we hasten to take off our hat. Gentlemen, what'll you have?

Wm. Grueber is suffering from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. On Sunday evening, about eight o'clock, while passing west on Main street on the sidewalk in front of the Citizens' National Bank, he suddenly fell headlong into and against the door. Several friends near at hand picked him up. He couldn't tell what was the matter, as he felt no pain. It was noticed that his tongue was thick and his right arm hung helplessly by his side. Dr. Brown was hastily summoned, and the discovery made that Mr. Grueber was paralyzed on the right side. He rallied considerably the next morning, and is now a great deal better. His host of warm friends are very anxious for his early and complete recovery.

Peter, Peter!

Peter Crissman, late of Brown county, like Peter the pumpkin eater, had a wife, it seems, and couldn't keep her. At any rate, he doesn't keep either his wife or the three children belonging to him. Some time last fall he came to this city and not long afterwards became domiciled at the home of poor Dan Williamson, a hard working man who has lost one hand. Crissman is a shrewd looking, keen-eyed, able-bodied fellow, with much more intelligence than the honest but ignorant Williamson. Peter promised to pay the rent and furnish provisions for the table in sufficient quantities to pay his board. However, he has furnished only a few chickens, a sack of wheat, which he swapped for flour, and a sack of potatoes, all of which were presumably stolen. In the mean time Peter's fascinating eyes had fallen with a snake like charm upon poor Dan's wife, and she went buggy riding with Peter day and night and swore she loved Peter and would go where Peter went. Poor Dan was bright enough to know that wasn't right, and told Peter to depart. When Dan's wife threatened to go, he told her to get up and skedaddle. If she liked Peter, she could have Peter, and be blessed. But Peter wouldn't go, and in a fit of desperation Dan started after him with an ax. Then Peter went for a little bit, till Mrs. Dan fell upon her husband and disarmed him, then Peter got an ax and stood his ground bravely. Dan laid the matter before Mayor Davis and Peter was soon in prison. He was not so fortunate, however, as Peter of old, for the only angel there was a frail and fallen one, and she couldn't open the doors. On trial Monday morning some very savory evidence was developed in substance as stated. Mayor Davis gave Peter and the wife of Dan a scathing reprimand and concluded by fining Peter $25 and costs, to be served out in the work house if not paid at once. The Mayor was exactly right in his announced purpose to break up the practice some people have indulged here of living in flagrant adultery.

Peter sold his horse and paid his fine and costs, amounting to $43.40. He announces his intentions of leaving this inhospitable community, and Mrs. Williamson will probably put on her best bib and tucker and accompany Peter.

Change of Firm.

Sam Hetherington and Lane Williams, of this city, have sold their grocery on Main street to Sam Hetherington, of New Vienna. J. M. HUGHEY,
By Irvin McD. Smith, his attorney.

No one will seriously dispute the orthodoxy of Secretary Carlisle's Democracy, but an incident serves to point a moral and adorn a tale. A prominent Cincinnati was presenting the good points of a candidate for the revenue collectorship of that city, and among other things said the candidate was a member of his (the Cincinnati's) Methodist Sunday school. The Secretary replied: "Well, that settles it; a Democratic politician who is brought up in a Methodist Sunday school is no good at all." It was a refreshing confession and who will say the Secretary was not eminently correct? —Ohio State Journal.
