Old Song.

One of our regular subscribers, who has a strong love for old songs, wrote to a Canadian paper, which was collecting and publishing the words and melodies of old songs, to try to secure the words of the following song. The paper failed to find the words, so could not publish. We casually ran on to the words and publish them for the subscriber referred to, thinking it may also be satisfactory to others.

JAMIE'S ON THE STORMY SEA.

Ere the twilight bat was fitting,
In the sunset at her knitting,
Sang a lonely maiden, sitting
Underneath her threshold tree.
And ere daylight died before us,
And the vesper stars shone o'er us,
Fifful rose her tender chorus,
"Jamie's on the stormy sea!"

Curfew bells, remotely ringing,
Mingled with that sweet voice singing,
And the last red ray went clinging
Lingeringly to tower and tree.
Nearer as I came, and nearer,
Fainter rose the notes, and clearer;
Oh, 'twas heaven itself to hear her
"Jamie's on the stormy sea!"

How could I but list, but linger,
To the song and near the singer,
Sweetly wooing Heaven to bring her
Jamie from the stormy sea.
And while yet her lips did name me,
Forth I sprang, my heart o'ercome me,
Grieve no more, sweet, I am Jamie
Home returned to love and thee.

The written instructions Judge Hughes gave his (?) investigating committee seems to be a secret, too. Would their publication do any harm?
