

Vessels Quarantined. United States Vice Consul at Piraeus, Greece, under date October 19, informs the Department that a rigorous quarantine thus in reference to the following, except Cyprus, is relaxed to that passenger vessels coming are subjected to a quarantine of five days, while merchant vessels from Thrace, Somothrace, Im-

At a pianoforte warehouse in New York a weary young woman got into the box containing an upright piano, partly packed, and went to sleep on the straw. He was missed but not discovered, and the box cover was quietly screwed on. The weary young man was presently awakened by the rude shock occasioned by removing the box to the wagon in the street and found himself standing upon his head. After the lapse of some moments he made himself heard and was raised, but not until he was well nigh suffocated.

A GOOD SELECTION.—The resident has made a good selection in choosing the school at the Episcopal Institute, at Burlington, wherein to educate his son. But what will the radicals say to his putting his son under such influence as they pretend to think that of Bishop Hopkins is?—Montpelier Argus.

There's a difference in time you know, between this country and Europe," said a gentleman in New York to a newly-arrived Irishman. "For instance, your friends at Cork are in bed and fast asleep by this time, while we here are enjoying ourselves in the early evening." "That's always the way," exclaimed Pat, "Ireland never got justice yet."

Musket balls were used for money in Boston, Mass., in 1635, each one valued at a farthing.

A correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette suggests flogging by machinery. We understand that America intends to adopt the plan with a view to carrying out its long promise of whipping creation.—Punch.

A Chinese giant has come to England who is able to write his name easily upon a wall ten feet above the soles of his boots.

On the coast of England, recently, a codfish was caught, weighing twenty-one pounds, having in its stomach a pair of brass-framed spectacles. The owner had probably been digested, but his eyeglasses were too much for the fish.

Healthy resort for the blind.—The see-stile.

A gentleman in this city, upon being called a cabbage-head, declared that he would not stand such "garden sass." An exchange gives reasons for not publishing a poetic effusion, as follows: "The rhythm sounds like pumpkins rolling over a barn floor, while some lines appear to have been measured with a yard-stick, and others with a ten-foot pole."

If coal continues to go up, the rich can afford to follow the business of hod-carriers.

When a broker loses all his money, he is dead broke, but when he dies, he is dead broke.

Formerly the ladies set their caps at the men; now they set their waterfalls; and when a woman sets her waterfall at a fellow, it is only natural that he should be "over head and ears" immediately.

Linoleum or artificial India rubber is the subject of a new patent taken out in England. It is made from linseed oil converted by some chemical action into a jelly, quite like rubber, and is said to be impervious to acids and water.

"Well, Bridget, if I engage you I shall want you to stay at home whenever I shall wish to go out." "Well, ma'am, I have no objections, provided you do the same when I wish to go out."

...to mean their own, and children. At past 8 A. M., the battery. Just as she came to drive a whole broad cloud of dust. The but once, without any damage having been inflicted. steamer was now making for the Haytien fleet stationed opposite and quite close to the city. She was steaming at the rate of eight knots an hour, and heading directly for the Haytien gunboat (a captured blockade steamer.) When within a short distance she fired from her forward pivot (a 110 pound-rifled Armstrong,) striking her antagonist in the port bow and ripping the whole side out of her. A second shot raked her fore and aft, when it was observed that she was sinking rapidly, her crew jumping overboard in all directions. Whilst swimming for dear life the Englishmen stationed in the tops were shooting the Haytiens in the water. One of their armed schooners was also seen to be sinking. At this moment, when the batteries from the city commenced to open on the Bulldog, Captain Walker ordered his boats away to the relief of the drowning men, under the command of First Lieutenant Commanding Wm. Howell, who most nobly executed the task assigned him, at the imminent risk of his own life as well as of the boats' crews. A terrific fire was opened on the batteries ashore, several of their guns dismantled and silenced. One of their shot, however, struck the Bulldog and went through her boiler; two of her crew were killed and several wounded. The Bulldog was now seen reversing her engines, but all her efforts to move proved to us that she was hard and fast ashore. She remained in this way, firing away at the city, which was in flames in several places, when towards evening a boat from her was sent aboard of us, requesting that Captain Walker would give the assistance of his boat to get him out. But still he could not see the point, and refused to interfere in any way unless it was to save life. The English now sent off another loaded with their wounded, who were taken on board and tenderly cared for. All was now quiet until about 11 o'clock P. M., when a most terrific explosion took place on board of the British steamer, caused by her powder magazine going off. It was supposed that all hands were on board at the time. Our boats were lowered away and off to the unfortunate Bulldog immediately to render assistance, if required. Before they reached her a second and more fearful explosion was heard, throwing massive pieces of the vessel in all directions and in dangerous proximity to ourselves. As the fire now raged on board of her, shells, rockets, and loaded muskets were constantly firing off.

The scene from our decks at this moment was truly grand. Nothing was left standing but the smoke-stack and paddle boxes. Nothing whatever was seen of her crew, and as none of her boats were visible, it was concluded they had taken to them and went to Port Lemonade, after setting fire to the ship. You will observe that he gave us no intimation of his intention of blowing up his ship, whilst his doing so placed us in the greatest danger.

...a point of beauty of Tunis to be fleshy. quence they live well, and number of them are large. They never appear in public having their faces covered. young lady's first love-kiss has the effect on her as being electrified. is a great shock, but soon over.

A little girl being sent to a store to purchase some dye stuff, and forgetting the name of the article, said to the clerk,— "John, what do folks dye with?" "Die with? Why, cholera, sometimes," replied John.

"Well, I believe that's the name. I want to have three cents' worth."

A lady wrote to her lover, begging him to send her some money. She added, by way of postscript, "I am so ashamed of the request I have made in his letter, that I sent after the postman to get it back, but the servant could not overtake him."

To illustrate the vicious effects of fashion, the Wheeling (Virginia) Intelligencer, recommended buyers at the Government horse sale to try the horse's tail to see if it was a genuine article, or a waterfall, affixed by Spaulding's glue.

It is said that "waterfalls" are prohibited by the English game laws. The clause which applies to them runs as follows: "Netting the hare shall be punished by fine and imprisonment," etc., etc.

"My dear Nicholas," said Long Strangford, "I am very stupid this morning; my brains are going to the dogs." "Poor dogs!" replied his friend.

A man to speak his mind, must have one to speak.

A milkman has been arrested in Paris for adulterating the lacteal fluid. He excused himself by saying that the milk was too strong to be wholesome, and his regard for the health of his customers induced him to water it.

"Imparting pleasure is like putting money out at interest;" it benefits both the leader and borrower at once. No one can be really and truly happy unless others sympathize in and share that happiness. The purest friendship is the most unselfish in its nature. It will labor, aye, suffer, alone and uncomplainingly, to procure the happiness of the beloved one, "and verily it hath its reward"—its abundant reward.

"Our Mutual Friend"—Money.

EDITOR CHALLENGED BY A FE... The New York Times, a few ago, contained an editorial recommending the Irish in the "rural districts" not to send contributions to the Fenian organization in that city for the purpose of revolutionizing Ireland, as most of the money would be spent to support a set of idle men in New York. On the appearance of the article, B. D. Killian, on behalf of Col. Mahony, president of the Fenian organization, sent a note demanding of Mr. Raymond, the editor of the Times, retraction, so far as it personally referred to the managers of the Fenian organization. This Mr. Raymond refused to do, whereupon Col. O'Mahony challenged Mr. Raymond, through Mr. Killian, to mortal combat. Mr. Raymond also declined this proposition, and their ended with the publication of the correspondence.