"Or his wife should. Oh, these women, they are at the bottom of all man's troubles!"

And they laughed. Oh, how could they? I had yet to learn how easy it is, in this world, to bear other people's troubles.

I rose hurriedly up, my heart beating tumultuously beneath the pink azaleas, and went back to the lighted saloon. Mr. Albany Moore was waiting to claim my hand for the next dance.

"Are you ill, Mrs. Glen? How pale you look!"

"I—I am not very well. I wish you would have my carriage called, Mr. Moore."

"For I saw felt that home was the proper place for me.

Hurried by some unaccountable impulse, I sprang out the moment the carriage wheels touched the curbstone, and rushed up to my husband's room. The door was locked; but I could see a light shining faintly under the threshold. I knocked faintly and persistently.

"Gerald, dear Gerald, for heaven's sake let me in!"

Select Poetry.

MOTHER. No one word of human diction Is more eloquently dear, Than that word, in every household, So familiar to the ear; 'Tis a title taught by angels, As they journey to and fro, To express a tie of kindred Heaven hallowed here below.

Often hath my spirit striven, Since its earthsome task began To revive its child-emotions, In the bosom of the man; But life's cold, unfriendly shadows Seemed to chill the old delight, Till my mother's voice awoke the As in boyhood's morning bright.

As I gaze along the vista Of the ceaseless march of years I behold her love-light beaming, Through each day of joy or fears; And yet when I am the accident, Tones of her can soothe the pain, Gentle mother, dear and patient, May thy influence long remain!

Mates of thine are growing aged, But thou art not old to me; Every winsome charm remaineth, That I knew in infancy; Thy airy shapes that sometimes hover Round my pillow while I rest, Bear thy features, darling mother, And my sleep is fully blest.

Select Story.

My Husband's Second Wife. My husband came tenderly to my side.

"Are you going out this evening my love?"

"Of course I am."

I looked down complacently at my dress of pink crape, dew-dropped over with chrysal, and the trails of pink azaleas, that caught up its folds here and there. A diamond bracelet encircled one round white arm and a little cross blazed fitfully at my throat, I had never looked better, and I felt a sort of girlish pride as my eye met the fair reflection in the mirror.

"Come, Gerah! make haste! Why you haven't begun to dress yet!"

Where were my wif
