FASHIONS AT SARATOGA.

July 11, 1906.
Saratoga bids fair to be itself again this season, and 250 groups are gathering on verandas listening to charming music, and young and old are ready for the flirtations which are an epidemic in this celebrated resort. Linen is the scarlet part of excellence of half the fashions of the season, and it may take the form of the simple little pony coat and skirt, or be built of linen fine as gossamer and embroidered all over like frost work and set with lace until it represents the value of an ordinary woman's whole year's dress allowance.
The extra coat of linen and little fancy capes of linen and lace, or coat of all over lace with lace-trimmings, are in evidence everywhere that fashionables assemble; at the lake, or at afternoon teas at the cottages, as well as on the hotel piazzas, one sees linen wraps with enormous sleeves and shawl and cape shaped wraps.
The styles in sleeves are in endless variety, but as a rule they are short, ending at the elbow or just below. Tailored linens often have the long coat sleeve, and half long coat and long sleeves are predicted for the Fall, but for the present the short sleeve and long glove hold the "blue ribbon."
Thanks are due the McCall Company, makers and designers of fashion, for handsome illustration accompanying this article.
Flower trimmed hats of leghorn or fine straw are first choice with young girls, while older women wear hats trimmed with aigrettes to a considerable extent. Embroidered linen hats are the newest arrival and suitable for any and everybody. The use of black velvet ribbon on such hats is a confirmation of the coming popularity of black velvet ribbon. A beautiful hat is worn by a lovely blonde, had a trim folded against the crown, with a light draping and fluffy bow of blue tulle, with two handsome blue ostrich plumes waving above and below the brim. Lilies are fashionable, but violets have disappeared completely. Soft made plumes of white or pale yellow is a favorite garniture, and tulle continues to be worn in hat trimmings and fluffy neckerches.
For gowns that go to all sorts of places, "Mill or Meeting," nothing is better than black velvet with silk trimmings, finished with tailor stitchings. These, with gumples and sleeves of washable linens, look cool and serviceable, and will last far and are seen here on the few who are ahead in style. They ought to be tailor-made to look right, hence are not for home construction.
May S. V.—A dry shampoo is easily managed. Powder the hair with any good absorbent powder. Powdered rice is excellent. Let it stay for a few moments and brush out thoroughly. The oil will come with it, and leave the hair clean and fluffy.
Dolly S.—Try Sarsaparilla. It is pleasant to use, leaves a sweet clean taste, and is the best preparation I know of to keep the mouth pure and the teeth white. The paste in the tube form is especially nice for traveling.
Mrs. V. T.—Trim your taffets with velvet ribbon, half-inch width, put on in "Greek Key" pattern. Velvet ribbon will be very modish the coming season.
LEWY CARTER.

Farm News.

Renovating a Horse.

Farm horses generally have a hard spring, as arrears of work have to be caught up hurriedly, and the soil is exceptionally heavy to work. The horses will, undoubtedly, enjoy and benefit by a rest or less work, and being out at the grass is a great asset in many ways. The buggy or riding horse on the farm is not usually overworked, and unless on extra duty the grass alone should keep it in condition. Any partial cripples that have been made as much use of as possible—and an old horse or two are often very useful on the farm—should be given a complete rest on the grass to recoup against hayting time. When there is a milk run, the milk cart horse is the one which has as much hard work to do as any on the farm. He is at it daily, Sunday included, which sooner or later generates weakness, mostly in the legs, and a rest on the grass is not only well merited, but highly advantageous, especially if given in time, and before the horse has become a chronic cripple.
When these horses are put out and rested a month or so, and this is none too long—they should have their shoes taken off and run barefooted. Hacks which have been much employed during the winter, but are now not so much used, should never be kept in the stable, as a run at grass is much the better way of either rest or improving condition. The winter work has been hard and the horses are down, the sooner the rest and grass cure is begun the better. To run them on till the fall will only increase their ailments, while a rest in time will often quite cure deficiencies, which, if let go or aggravated by further cause, may end in serious loss or permanent lameness. A horse that really needs a rest should have nothing short of one month. Two would be better in many cases, while three months will rejuvenate most animals in satisfactory manner.
If possessed of any ailments which no veterinarian can relieve or remove, this attention should be given when grazing begins, or grazing should follow the treatment closely, if it cannot be accomplished when on grass and out. The most favorable land for recruiting horses is that of a marshy character.
Leg and foot ailments are the most common, and soft ground is not so readily reedy, but it should always be associated with good grass. A good water supply should invariably be a condition of horse grazing fields, which should be absolutely free of barbed wire, broken rails, or sharp projections, which are likely to enter either foot or body. Shade is not so readily enjoyed, and if not sufficiently supplied by trees, an open shed should be erected. In that case rough, strong posts and any kind of cool roof answer the purpose perfectly.

Kohlrabi for Stock.

This root is cultivated much in the same way as Swede turnips, but is somewhat more hardy—that is, bears a little more roughing it in a general way. Manure at the rate of sixteen tons of good farmyard dung to the acre, work the ground to a fine tilth, and drill on the flat as soon as the ground is ready. It is a characteristic of the crop that it may be raised in its time of sowing from early in April until after mid-summer. It is really of the cabbage family, and like the cabbage, may be transplanted, if it is found more convenient to rear the plants on nursery bed. Unlike the Swede, it flourishes on clay land. If sown in rows, the plants should be spaced twenty inches apart, four pounds of seed per acre, lightly rill to cover the seed and to leave a level surface to the ground. Top dress as soon as the plants appear with some active dressing—say, guano—at the rate of 400 pounds per acre, or it may be sown so as to be ready for cutting, or even with the seed. Single the plants out in due time. Store in precisely the same manner as mangel or Swedes, and serve to stock in a similar manner. It is claimed for kohlrabi that when served to dairy cows it does not make the butter strong.

Caught Napping.

From San Francisco Chronicle.
"It pays sometimes to have the right kind of a lawyer," remarked W. T. Purdy, a well-known mining man of the Northwest, at the Palace Hotel. "I was a witness in a case a few weeks ago in Seattle in which a colored man was seeking damages for permanent injury sustained in an accident in an elevator which he was running. The plaintiff claimed that he had been maimed for life, by being permanently deprived of the free use of his right arm. Although the accident had happened months before, his arm was still crippled, and he was unable to raise it above his waist. He explained all this with much feeling and earnestness during his direct examination. Then the attorney for the owner of the building took him in hand.
"Show us how high you can raise your arm," said the attorney.
"And the defendant feebly raised his arm a few inches.
"Now show us how high you could raise your arm before you were injured," pursued the attorney.
"And the defendant unhesitatingly and unthinkingly raised the crippled arm high above his head, thus knocking his damage claim skyward with one eloquent gesture."

Money in Horse Breeding.

Horse breeding, when judiciously carried on, has always been and is likely to be a reasonably profitable business for the American farmer. The great danger in the business is that at the present time, owing to the fact that horses are scarce, the price of no particular breed or class is commanding a high price, and many farmers are led to regard a horse of this kind as a profitable animal to produce. Such horses should not be bred, because, even when the greatest care and precaution are taken in breeding for definite types, there will always be a large number of the so-called misfits, which are the first class of horses to be affected by overproduction or any other thing that is likely to cause a depression in the market.
Heart Turned to Stone.
An extraordinary freak of disease has been revealed in a Berlin hospital, where a domestic servant woman, admitted with symptoms that defied diagnosis, was the other morning found dead in bed. Post-mortem examination then disclosed the mystery. A malignant tumor—a sarcoma—had spread itself over the entire wall of the cranium, and the heart, liver and lungs were partially petrified by a thick calcareous deposit. Further examination showed that the sarcoma had entirely decomposed and eaten away the bony structure of the cranium, and that its constituents had been carried by the blood into the principal organs. The heart had been literally choked until it could no longer perform its functions.
Alfalfa as a Hog Food.
At one of the Canadian institutes a speaker said that "in no way will alfalfa yield a larger return than as a pasture for hogs. A great many of the farmers are doing this, and are getting very large returns. I know one who kept ten head of hogs to the acre of alfalfa, and they were not able to keep it down, and he cut it for hay once and got a ton to the acre. It is possible to grow good large hogs on alfalfa without any other food, but the best results have been obtained from feeding a small amount of some other food along with it, such as corn. I would feed about two ears per day to hogs pastured on alfalfa."
It is a prudent farmer who is not a prodigal after a rich harvest.

EVERY truck farmer knows (or ought to know) that POTASH is indispensable for producing good-paying truck crops.

A liberal quantity of POTASH, along with ample amounts of phosphoric acid and nitrogen, is vital to successful truck growing.

"Truck Farming," an interesting book dealing with practical truck raising and valuable to every truck farmer, will be sent to farmers on request, free of any cost or obligation.

DOLLY A Good House

Leaving a good house unpointed is as imprudent as leaving greenbacks out in the rain. A house unprotected by good paint cracks and rots and is unsightly all the time. Whatever you do, paint! Whenever you paint, use pure white lead paint. You will have the best if it is Lewis Pure White Lead (Made by the Old Dutch Process) mixed with Lewis Lined Oil. It is accepted as the standard everywhere by those who know.

Learn all about paints in our handsomely illustrated free booklet, sent on application. Gives test for paint purity.
