COLLEGES CELEBRATE 51ST BASE BALL GAME.

Williams and Amherst Observe First Meeting, which the Latter Won by 73 to 32.

Amherst, Mass.—The Williams-Amherst baseball game last week marked the fifty-first anniversary of the first game between the two teams, and incidentally the same anniversary of inter-collegiate baseball.

Extracts from a newspaper of July 1, 1859, give a rather whimsical account of the game and the causes which led to it. The game took place at Pittsfield on July 1, and was won by Amherst by the overwhelming score of 73 to 32.

The two balls used in the game are at the present time in the trophy room. This is how it came about:—At a meeting of the college, directly after chapel, a motion was made that "Amherst challenge Williams to a friendly game of ball to be played at some intermediate spot on or before July 4," which was passed by a strong majority.

A challenge was immediately sent and accepted for thirteen picked men of each college to meet June 27. The rules and regulations stated that each party should use its own ball, and it must always be caught on the fly, sixty-five runs to be the limit of the game. The Pittsfield Baseball Club offered its grounds for the game, and July 1 was appointed as the date.

It is interesting to note the manner of selecting the men for the game. The men were "chosen by ballot from the students at large."

There was some attempt at uniformity of dress, as "the Williams team was all dressed alike," and wore belts marked "Williams," but the appearance of the Amherst team was decidedly undress. The only attempt at uniform was the blue ribbon which each man had pinned on his breast.

It seems that the question of professionalism entered even into the first game, as it was "rumored that the Amherst thrower was the professional blacksmith, who had been hired for the occasion."

The Amherst ball weighed two and a half ounces and was about six inches in circumference. The Williams ball was about seven inches in circumference, weighed about two ounces and was "covered with light colored leather, so as to make it seen with difficulty by the batters."

About eleven o'clock the game was started, with Amherst having the first inning, and at the end of the second inning the score stood:—Amherst, 1; Williams, 9. Amherst grew desperate, and at the end of the fourth Amherst led, and continued to do so until the end of the game, sometimes having three tallies to one for Williams.

After four hours of steady playing, in which twenty-six rounds had been played with unabated interest on the part of the spectators, the game was decided finished and Amherst was declared a winner by a score of 73 to 32.

No gloves of any sort were worn at this time, nor was there any thought of masks, breast protector or any of the baseball paraphernalia which is used now.

It is often remarked nowadays that the players in times past used to play each for himself, without any regard for team work, but the following extract proves that this was not so:—"The throwing of the two parties was about equal, the catching of Amherst superior, but the pivot on which the whole game turned was the drill. Every Amherst player had bound himself to obey all the commands of the captain, let the result be what it might, trusting to his oversight. The game was a silent one, no unnecessary conversation was carried on and every man played as if the score of the college rested on his getting a tally. All this drill, however, was not attained by frequent meetings of the club, but by placing one man at the head."

The news of the game reached Amherst about eleven o'clock that night by a special messenger, who went through the streets shouting, "Amherst wins, 73 to 32!" The students, who had tired of waiting for a report, had gone to bed, but they were soon aroused and sent a special embassy to President Stearns, asking for permission for a general celebration. The president was absent, but permission was given by Miss Stearns for such an important event as this, so bells were rung, bonfires lighted and the night spent in cheering for the victorious players.

Of the Amherst men who played in that first game but two are now living besides the Amherst umpire, F. E. Tower, '60, is now a clergyman in Fougheepsee, N. Y.; Marshall B. Fishman, '61, can be found at the Patent Office in Washington, D. C., and the umpire, L. R. Smith, '59, is now a United States Senator.

Transportation.

A Texas evangelist says: "Persons who speculate on the stock market or bet on horse races are bound for hell in a racing automobile." But the experience of an observer is that those who speculate on horse races or bet on the stock market usually arrive there as pedestrians.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Cheapest Catarrh Cure.

Judson M. Perry, an attorney, of Detroit, has just completed a fast of 25 days "for his health." He said that he thought fasting the cure for all ills. The particular ill for which he made the fast was nasal catarrh, and he thinks he has cured it. For the first 26 days of his fast he was in his office daily, but he grew weak after that and spent the last nine days in bed. His weight was reduced from 140 pounds to 95.

"Nothing but water passed my lips during the 25 days," said Mr. Perry. "My theory is that nothing nutritious should be taken, not even fruit juices. After the first few days I felt no pang of hunger. The body becomes accustomed to the fast."

Slides in Lumber Flume.

Globe, Ariz.—Thomas Gardner, a five-year-old boy of Thatcher, ran a mile a minute down a seven mile lumber flume and arrived at the end of his thrilling journey unharmed.

Tommy was playing at the head of the flume in the Graham Mountains. He slipped and fell into the water and was carried at the speed of an express train down the flume, which in places is almost perpendicular. He was scratched slightly about the face and arms.

HOLDS FIRST PLACE IN WORLD OF TRAMPS.

"A No. 1" Has Been Three Times Around the World and Covered Nearly 472,000 Miles.

St. Louis, Mo.—"A No. 1," who says he is the world's champion tramp, and who "hoofed it" many a mile with Jack London during the hobo days of the novelist, was in St. Louis recently on his fifty-seventh transcontinental journey.

His arrival from Chicago completed his 471,875th mile since he ran away from home in 1883, at the age of eleven years, to avoid a trouncing which he knew to be in store for him. He has been on the road ever since, and has never told any man his real name. He has been around the world three times, he says, at a total expense of $7.61.

He remembers the names of thousands of acquaintances in all quarters of the earth, and speaks four languages—English, French, German and Spanish. He has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce of Cambridge Springs, Pa., since 1907, and is registered as "A No. 1."

He wears a gold medal given to him by Richard K. Fox in 1894 as the champion tramp of the world, having "beaten" his way from New York to San Francisco in eleven days and six hours, covering 3,250 miles.

Last fall he was guest of Jack London at his home near San Francisco, and while there became acquainted with Luther Burbank, the horticultural wizard, whose picture he carries with him. He also enjoys the friendship of Thomas A. Edison.

"A No. 1" is a living proof that it is not necessary for a hobo to go dirty. He has on a suit of clothes he has worn eight months and it is hardly soiled. He wears low cut shoes and fancy socks, and with him he carries a box of blackening, two tooth brushes, a box of tooth powder, a comb, a brush and a dictionary, to say nothing of a gold watch and chain.

This remarkable tramp has papers to show that he has been the cause of preventing more than twenty railroad wrecks. Among his indorsers is San Allender, of St. Louis, chief of the detective department of the Frisco Railroad.

"A No. 1" is the head of a publishing company which publishes a book entitled "The Life and Adventures of A No. 1." It is sold extensively on railroad trains, and has the documents to prove that dealers have ordered thousands of copies at a time.

On his way to St. Louis this time this noted rambler met with his first injury. He came down on the Alton Limited, riding underneath a coach, on the rods and next to the wheels, as usual. The freeman dumped a mass of red hot coals on the track and they flew up, burning him on the face and neck. One left a red mark as big around as a dollar immediately under his right eye.

"A No. 1" is on his way to California. He expects to spend next Christmas at Palm Beach, Fla.

Odd Fellows Reunion, August 4.

From the Daily Record, Waynesboro, Pa., of June 8.

Representatives from various neighboring lodges of Odd Fellows met in Spangler & Co.'s rooms, June 7, and discussed plans for the proposed Odd Fellows reunion to be held at Pen Mar.

The date for the reunion was fixed for Thursday, August 4, which will be a week later than the last of the church reunions.

The grand masters of Pennsylvania and Maryland will be invited to be present and make addresses. Rev. Dr. H. Hart, Harrisburg, past grandmaster, is expected there.

The railroad companies will be asked to run special trains for the excursionists on that day.

A program will be arranged and it is likely a noted band will be engaged for that day.

The lodges in this vicinity heartily favor the reunion and the Baltimore lodges, although they were not represented at the joint meeting, yesterday evening, have already signified their willingness to take active part.

The reunion is to be on a large scale. The committee, yesterday evening, made plans for a big event and it put the work of preparation in competent hands.

There will be made the effort to have present representatives from all the lodges between Baltimore and Cumberland and Harrisburg and Winchester. Everything is to be on an elaborate scale and the committee believes this is justified by the interest shown by many of the lodges.

Baltimore lodges have arranged for a reunion this summer and, as chairman of the executive committee has announced that one of these will be combined with the Pen Mar reunion.

York Odd Fellows have written that they will be in attendance with a very large contingent.

The territory to be drawn from is about as large as that included in the church reunions and it is the hope of the Odd Fellows to make their gathering as large as those of the religious denominations.

Dogs Trained for Warfare.

In the presence of military doctors and officers Captain Tolet recently exhibited in the Forest of Fontaine-luxembourg dogs trained to search for wounded on the battlefield. Captain Tolet, dressed by himself, accompanied the spectators by the sure and speedy manner in which they found soldiers hidden in the brushwood and playing the part of wounded in action. As the result of the conclusive experiment the Minister of War is about to take into consideration the formation of squads of bearers each provided with one or two "sanitary" dogs.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memoriam of Grace Virginia Orendorff, who departed this life 5 years ago, June 15th, 1907.

How sadly we counted the hours Since they laid 'neath a mantle of flowers The one that we loved so dear.

Our hearts have been crushed and wounded. Our lives have been lonely and sad. While only the presence of her dear face Could ever again make glad.

When we sit at home sad and lonely. We think of the silent tomb. That she was torn from the hearts that loved her so well.

No words will ever be so sweet: As the words she used to say: "Near will ever be to me, As the hour she passed away."

By HER MOTHER, ANNA KORGAN, AND FAMILY.

Proper Punishment.

It has been proposed that riflemen who shoot at balloons be taken up about a mile and then be allowed to find their way home alone.
