Who Was Liable?

In an opinion delivered by Judge Burke in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company against the County Commissioners of Howard county, appealed from the Circuit Court of Carroll county, the Court of Appeals has held that the railroad must compensate the county for a judgment paid by the county on account of the death of Alexander S. Hill, late of Baltimore county. A judgment of $6,000 was recovered by the deceased's widow on account of his death, due to the alleged negligence of the commissioners in the care of the public road. Suit was instituted by the county against the railroad company as the actual wrongdoer.

A judgment was secured but the Court of Appeals reversed it on account of the absence of essential evidence and awarded a new trial. A second judgment was obtained and this was upheld by the Court of Appeals.

The question hinged on whether or not the railroad company was responsible for the maintenance of the particular road where the accident occurred. The Court of Appeals held that there is evidence tending to show this sufficient to justify the verdict.

TO START WORK ON TROLLEY IN A FEW MONTHS.

It Will Pass Through Manchester and Hampstead.

From the Baltimore Sun, June 20.

Reports from Westminster say that the County Commissioners of Carroll county recently granted the right of way to the Baltimore and Pennsylvania Railway Company for the construction of its tracks along the Reisterstown and Hanover turnpike.

A charter was granted the company at the last session of the Legislature to build and operate an electric railway with Reisterstown as its southern terminal to a northern terminal in Pennsylvania.

At Reisterstown the road will connect with the United Railways Emory Grove line, and in Pennsylvania it will connect with the Hanover and York systems in that State at intersection, above Melrose. By the construction and operation of this road Washington, Baltimore, York and Hanover will be joined by a chain of electric railways.

Mr. John Pierce Burns, a well-known lawyer of this city, is the president of the company. He said yesterday that all the preliminary work on the plan for the road has about been finished and the actual construction will begin within the next few months.

It is estimated by Mr. Burns that the road will cost $600,000, and it has been capitalized at that amount. It is proposed to issue first mortgage 30-year 5 per cent. bonds to raise the necessary funds.

The contract for the construction of the road has been awarded to the Maryland Construction and Development Company, of which Mr. Howard Tebbis, of this city, is vice-president and financial agent. This company proposes to accept the bonds of the railway company in payment.

It is expected by the officials of the road that farm lands along the route will soon be selling by the front foot as building lots, since the altitude is high and the scenery attractive. Along the line there are a number of villages with churches, schools and stores.

Among the largest of these are Hampstead and Manchester. The former is an incorporated town 10 miles north of Reisterstown. Its chief industries are canning factories, flour mills and carriage works. It is the distributing point for all sorts of farming needs. Manchester is 14 miles north of Reisterstown. It is the seat of many cigar factories. It pays more taxes on the commodity, it is said, than any town or city in the State, with the exception of Baltimore. The town is three miles from a steam railroad and has been handicapped for want of proper railway facilities.

"With its push and energy," said Mr. Burns, "and the facilities which would be afforded by the new electric road, it should grow rapidly and it is in closer touch with the outer world."

It is conservatively estimated that the population along or contiguous to the route in Maryland is between 11,000 and 12,000. Mr. Burns said that with the population of Baltimore and York and their connected towns the road will bring in contact about 1,000,000 people.

By the construction of the Baltimore and Pennsylvania railroad, a new village from Baltimore would be to Hanover 42 miles, as against 55 by railroad at present. York would be reached in 58 miles and Gettysburg when connections are complete in 56 miles. The distance is 71 miles by the present route.

160TH ANNIVERSARY

Of St. Benjamin's Lutheran Church.

Interesting and appropriate services were held Sunday at St. Benjamin's Lutheran Church, of Salem charge, near this city, in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the congregation.

Of the former pastors, Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D., of Harrisburg, Pa.; Rev. John U. Asper, of Lemasters, Pa., and Rev. Samuel A. Diehl, of Hanover, Pa., were present and participated in the services, which were attended by congregations never exceeded in numbers in the history of the church.

At the service in the morning an appropriate discourse was delivered by Dr. Holloway, who was the pastor from 1864 till 1882, and at the service Sunday evening addresses were made by Revs. Asper and Diehl. Among the members and others present were descendants of Schaeffers, Heiser and others, who assisted in organizing the congregation 150 years ago.

About that time a congregation of the Reformed Church also was organized and united with the Lutheran congregation in erecting an edifice in which they worshipped alternately and which was subsequently converted into a sexton's house, part of which is still standing. Afterwards these congregations erected a more commodious structure jointly, and still later a substantial brick edifice in which they continued to worship until about 15 years ago. The site of these buildings and the church cemetery, with an outlet to the main highway between Westminster and Gettysburg, was donated by a man named Grider, a name which subsequently became corrupted to Krider, and both congregations are still sometimes called Krider's. They still jointly own this site, which is on a commanding eminence, overlooking a wide and beautiful landscape. About 15 years ago each of these congregations purchased ground adjoining the original Grider gift and erected its own place of worship. Additions have also been made to the cemetery, which is one of the most beautiful in Carroll county.
