AFTER THE ELECTION.

It is to the credit of the American people, that they can go through with a political campaign of the greatest excitement, in which hot words are used, fiery speeches are delivered, and when the election is over and the result known, everybody acquiesces, the excitement calms down, and inside of two weeks after the election, one would hardly know that anything unusual had happened.

We say this is creditable to the American people. It shows their high respect for the fundamental principles upon which our institutions rest, to wit—the rule of the majority. In many countries of the old world where the people are not so intelligent and patriotic as they are in this country, the high excitement of some of our Presidential campaigns would result in a revolution. But not so in America.

When the people speak through the silent, yet powerful agency of the ballot, every good citizen bows his acquiescence and submits, whether it suits him politically or not.

The American people must stand by this vital principle of the rule of the majority. It is the cornerstone upon which our republic rests, and if our people should ever be so foolish as to drift from it, they would find themselves in a state of anarchy. "Vox populi, vox Dei."

HON. ARTHUR P. GORMAN.

Although defeated for the Governorship, Mr. Gorman is one of the most popular men in Maryland today, with the rank and file of the Democratic party.

His recent campaign through the State was a most remarkable one; remarkable in the fact that notwithstanding his candidacy was handicapped as the candidacy of no other person who ever ran for Governor in this State was burdened; by his personality and his discreet and manly bearing, and his wise words, he won for himself a popular vote, equal if not greater than that of his running mates, and was only defeated because the Republican party centered its effort upon its candidate for Governor, leaving the other State candidates to take care of themselves. This was particularly so in the "black belt" where the negroes were instructed to vote for Governor and let the balance of the ticket go. This explains Mr. Gorman's defeat, and also explains the unusual condition, such as never occurred before in this State, of the election of one of the State candidates with the other two left out in the cold.

Mr. Gorman is a young man with splendid qualifications for public service, and has before him a promising future in the public affairs of our State.

THE ELECTIONS AS OMENS FOR 1912.

Democrats can find much encouragement in the elections throughout the country last week as indicating the trend of sentiment for 1912.

In Massachusetts, Ohio and Kentucky, where the campaign was fought on straight party lines on national issues, the Democrats were successful everywhere. Especially in Massachusetts was the fight made on the tariff issue, Governor Foss being a staunch advocate of a lower tariff, and his fight was made solely on national issues. He won out by a handsome majority over the combined forces of protection in his State, headed by Senator Lodge, the apostle of high protection.

Democratic leaders of national reputation consider the result of Tuesday's election as indicating a landslide for the Democratic party in the election next year, when a president will be elected. Gov. Harmon, of Ohio, in summing up the result, said: "The results of the election have pleased me very much, and I consider them a forecast of what is to come next year. It is the strongest endorsement of Democracy that has been tendered by voters in recent years. . . . Signs of victory for the Democratic party are evident everywhere. Next year I predict that this party will win the national offices, including the Presidency."

Democrats everywhere, can, we say, take courage over the results last week, and enter the fight next year with every prospect of success. And Maryland, in spite of the slight setback this year, will be found in the Democratic column with a substantial majority for the Democratic Presidential nominee.—"Wicomico News."

The common law running back for centuries gives the crossings to the pedestrian. It is the vehicle and not the person on foot, which must slow down, and even come to a dead halt where the pedestrian is involved. It's a wise rule. In the big cities the police at intervals clear the crossings for those on foot. "The man before the law" is the Bryan slogan. The man before the vehicle is law.—Annapolis "Capital."

WINTER.

A touch of winter has been felt over practically the entire country this week. And we are ready for it. Who does not love the brisk walk on the crisp, cold winter evening, the happy sleighing party in the cold moonlight, the lads and lassies coasting down long, white hills, the open fireplace with nuts, apples and popcorn to add pleasure to a jolly evening, and the beautiful winter landscapes and wonderful sunsets?

Notwithstanding the many predictions for and signs of an early winter this year—the thickness of the bark of young trees, the squirrel's and chipmunk's early storing up of their food supply, and the large crop of nuts—winter has not set in as soon as it did last year. During the Aero-plane Meet, which occurred at Halethorpe, near Baltimore, early in November of last year, we had a deep snow-fall and a furious blizzard, which blew down the hangars and considerably disarranged the plans for the Meet.

Much is always said about the beauty of spring with its balmy breezes, its song-birds, its blossoms and its green meadows; and, indeed, there is no season more beautiful; but a clear, cold winter day rouses all one's ambition, energy and vigor. It is a glorious thing to battle with the tremendous force of a blizzard, to measure strength with fierce winds, or to come victoriously through blinding snowstorms.

It has truly been said that "there is something in the sluggish movements of human fancy that can be called forth by nothing so much as by the advent of winter."

OUR GREAT NAVAL SHOW.

The greatest show of naval strength that this country has ever seen, was the assembling of ninety-nine American warships in New York Harbor and the Hudson river week before last.

Americans pointed with pride a few years ago to the fleet that went around the world, but that was a small demonstration in comparison with this new display.

President Taft reviewed the splendid warships and then in a speech made another plea for peace by the arbitration method. He said that Europe and Asia are looking to us to lead the way to that far-off goal. For the present, however, the President considers it necessary for Congress to authorize each year, the building of at least two of the largest and most powerful dreadnoughts. He pointed out that after the Panama Canal is open the efficiency of our navy will be practically doubled, and thinks that then one new battleship a year ought to be enough.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

A marriage license was issued in Ellcott City on Tuesday to Ernest Gray, of Mt. Airy, and Helen Sheppard, of Howard county.

Last Saturday it was possible to write the date with 6 straight marks: —11-11-11—meaning November 11, 1911. It will be a century before this happens again.

The marriage of Charles Elliot, Jr., of Wrightsville, son of Charles Elliot, Sr., of Taneytown, to Miss Alice McCall, of Columbia, is announced to take place in the near future.

Luther Day services will be held at Trinity Lutheran Church, Deer Park Road, on Sunday morning. An exercise entitled "The New Crusaders" will be rendered by the Sunday School and congregation.

The World's Championship Baseball Series for 1911, which created a great deal of interest among our citizens, will be shown on the screen at the Pioneer Picture Parlor on Monday, November 20.

The Seniors of Western Maryland College, will give an elocution recital this evening at eight o'clock in Smith Hall Auditorium to which the public is invited. Next Friday evening, November 24, the advanced pupils in music will give a recital in Smith Hall at the same hour.

The company who owns the home-stand of the late Judge Roberts, on Court street, is having the property improved. It will be divided into two dwelling houses, each of which will be rented. The work was begun yesterday.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Rebecca Wolf who departed this life one year ago today November 16, 1910. You are not forgotten mother dear. For as long as life or memory lasts. We will remember thee.

Dearest mother, how I miss you Since from earth you passed away. And my heart is aching sorely. As I think of you each day.

The month of November once more is here. To us the saddest of all the year. Because it took from us away. The one we loved so dear one year ago today.

It was so sad to lose our Grandma. But God knew what was best. And we will be with her. In that sweet land of rest.

You have gone from us dear Grandma. To your Saviour good and true. Yet in our hearts you still are. Which is for each of us to do by her granddaughter's, Catherine and Annie Halton, and Elizabeth Wolf.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE JUBILANT.

Claims That Passage of Local Option Bill is Certain.

The Anti-Saloon League announces that it not only has a majority, but has a comfortable working margin in favor of local option in both houses of the next Legislature. The Republican city organization advised its candidates for the Legislature in the Second and Third Districts to keep quiet on local option. Of the twelve candidates for the House in the two districts five took the advice of the League and declared for local option. The League elected four of them. Of the seven who took the advice of the city organization and remained quiet, the politicians did not elect even one. The League supported one of the Democratic candidates in Baltimore City in the Second District and he was the highest man on the ticket.

The League won a notable victory in Washington County in defeating Dr. Miller, the author of the notorious "gas" bill introduced two years ago to kill the League movement by making it an offense to ask candidates where they stood on the temperance question. The League also elected the Republican Senator and four Delegates from Carroll County pledged to local option. In Harford county, Mr. Osborn, Democrat, endorsed by the League was hundreds of votes ahead of anybody else. The next candidates

The Old Folks Say

That from signs this promises to be a cold winter. Now don't let it catch you unprepared. You had better get that heating stove now. But before you get it you had better be sure that you are getting the best that can be had for your money. The kind that will keep your house warm, cozy and comfortable in zero weather. Well the RED CROSS is that stove. And we have the right price on them too.

We guarantee every stove we sell. If it is not right we will right it. Here are three essential features that all Red Cross Stoves possess:

Cheap in price.

Economy in the use of fuel.

Handsome in design.

Perfection Oil Heaters

Are just the thing to keep warm that room on the cold side of the house. They are essential in case of sickness, for they may be moved from one room to the other. Just a touch of a match and instantly you will have heat. Easy to operate, absolutely odorless and smokeless, they are not only a luxury but really a necessity.
