Geologists Folios Sold at 5 Cents a Copy

The United States Geological Survey is having a great sale of its geological folios which were reduced in price on account of the recent fire in the Survey building. About 200,000 folios were stored in the basement in which the fire occurred, and many of these were destroyed, but about 150,000 copies were only slightly damaged by smoke and water. On this account, however, the regular prices were reduced by the Government from 25 cents and 50 cents to 5 cents a copy.

The Survey has just issued a circular describing the folios individually—the location and size of areas they cover, the mineral resources described, their economic importance, etc. The opportunity is thus presented to procure information of great local value at a merely nominal cost. The topographic map alone which is included in each folio is sold separately at 10 cents a copy, and as a rule these and the other maps in the folios are in almost perfect condition.

The circular describing the 150 folios available under this Government "fire sale" will be sent free of charge upon application to the Director of the Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

DULL OF COMPREHENSION.

BURNED TO DEATH.

THREE YEAR OLD SON OF MR. AND MRS. ALBERT M. ROBERTS, NEAR MT. AIRY.

Barn and Three Horses Also Lost.

Burning to death their three-year-old son, Thomas Hickley, a destructive blaze laid in ruins the barn and adjoining buildings on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Roberts, near Mt. Airy, Saturday afternoon, adding another to the list of fires that have destroyed barns in this section recently. Besides the contents, including the wheat, considerable hay, and farm machinery, a horse and two colts were lost in the flames. The financial loss is estimated at about $4,000.

It was about 2:30 o'clock that Mrs. Roberts, who was in the front yard, saw smoke issuing from the barn yard. Recently the wheat had been threshed and the straw stack being dry was soon a mass of blaze. Mr. Roberts was in the field at the time the fire was started. The alarm was quickly sounded and those about the place summoned.

At first the mother did not know that the son was in the barn yard. She rushed to the barn. The flames were then leaping about the stack and dense smoke filled the place. From the barn yard the mother was terrified to hear the call, "Mamma, Mamma, Mamma." It came from under the overshoot, and she realized that her little boy had been trapped in a fiery furnace. The fire was burning fiercely and it was impossible to enter the barn yard where the flames were rapidly spreading over the barn.

The mother was frantic and those who stood by were powerless to save the child from death. No other sound was heard from the blazing mass and the little fellow was no doubt burned out in a very short time.

When the father left the house little Hickley was asleep and he did not know when he found the barn ablaze that his son was in any danger. The boy was thought to be in the barn, and he went out to the field to see his father. It is thought that the youngster went to the barn yard to play with a kitten, a pet which had strayed to the farm a short time ago.

The boy had climbed over the gate and it is supposed that when the fire started he tried to escape, but he was trapped, perishing in the flames.

A horse and two colts were the only live stock in the barn. They were burned to death. There were 100 bushels of threshed wheat and 25 acres of straw in the barn, besides between 20 and 35 tons of hay, bran, barley and oats. Various farm machinery was destroyed, including a lime spreader, milk wagon, corn sheller, wheat fan, plows, sleigh, wagon bed and different other material and articles.

Neighbors were summoned by telephone from Mt. Airy where a picnic was being held, and surrounding country and many persons came. The Roberts farm is situated about 2 1-2 miles northeast of Mt. Airy on the Westminster road. Buckets, milk cans and other vessels were pressed into service in fighting the flames. The workers were handicapped by the lack of water. Two wells near the house were pumped dry.

Neighbors hauled water from Mr. William Selby's, about a half mile away, and used it. For a time the house was in danger, but the water worked hard and prevented the spread of the flames to the building. The hog house, hen house and corn house, which contained 30 or 35 barrels of corn, were all destroyed.

After the fire had died down a search for the remains of the little Hickley was made and his bones were found in the barn yard near where he had been playing.

The parents of the boy are nearly prostrated with grief over the loss of their son. Mr. Roberts has been in a weakened condition, just recently having returned from a hospital in Baltimore where she was under treatment.

Mr. Roberts stated that the property destroyed is insured for about one-half of the value. The barn will be rebuilt. The burned barn was 40 by 60 feet, 20 feet to the square.

The cause of the fire cannot be given. Mr. Roberts is always most careful around the barn.

DESTRUCTIVE STORM.

THE LARGE BARN OF WESLEY M. GEIMAN BURNED WITH CONTENTS.

Corn Fields Ruined by Hail—Trees and Fences Levelled—S. O. Roser's Silo and Wagon Shed and Silo of Harry Englar and Hamilton Fritz Were Blown Down—Other Damage.

Lightning from the Wednesday afternoon heavy thunder storm struck the bank barn on the farm of Wesley M. Geiman, near Stonersville, and about 2 miles from this city, burning it to the ground with contents, consisting of 50 acres of wheat in the straw. One cow was killed by the bolt; wagon, drill, churning mill and horsepower, were also destroyed.

The barn burned is the one nearest to the pike and it was struck about 2:15 o'clock, the bolt striking under the overshoot, and in no time the barn was a mass of flames. All stock was gotten out of the barn.

The house caught fire from the barn, but was soon put out by the neighbors who gathered to do what they could. The loss on the barn and contents will be $3,000 which is partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Geiman stated that not only was his barn gone, but that his corn crop was about destroyed by the heavy hail which accompanied the storm.

Mr. Geiman wishes to extend thanks to all his neighbors and friends for the aid they willingly gave during the destruction of his barn.

Other Loss.
The hail storm cut to pieces the corn field of Mr. Charles Reese, near Mount Pleasant, and that but half a crop will be realized.

Reports came from the vicinity of Tanney of fences and trees being blown down, corn fields being damaged and window panes being broken by the hail storm. A boy was in bathing in a stream near Tanney, when the storm came up and was struck on the head with a large hail stone and rendered unconscious.

This city suffered very little from the effects of the storm.

On Monday evening during the heavy thunder storm, lightning struck into the house of Nelson Yarratt, at Miller's Md., and damaged the weatherboarding of the house on one corner. The telephone was put out of commission.

Correspondent from Medford reports as follows: On Wednesday afternoon quite a terrific rain, hail and wind storm struck this vicinity, doing a lot of damage to all growing crops, blowing buildings down, uprooted trees, etc. S. A. Roser suffered the greatest loss, which blew down his silo, wagon shed, and three buggies and a spring wagon which was in the shed were demolished, also part of the house roof was blown off, and carried some distance. A silo and corn crib were blown down by Harry Englar, and Hamilton Fritz's silo how much damage was done to the corn crop will be seen later. This vicinity had no such experience for about 15 years we are told.

Correspondent from Wakefield writes: Corn fields in some places are out to the ground from Wednesday's hail and wind storm, leaving not one half standing, but what is standing looks like bean poles, with nothing on it. The loss cannot be estimated. The trees were uprooted, silos smashed to pieces and some roofs are also reported to have been blown off, with a heavy rain following, which came down in torrents, causing fields and roads to wash and streams to overflow their banks. Fences were washed away.

Hoods Mills.
During the storm of Wednesday afternoon lightning struck a large hay stack on the farm of W. L. Hammond, at Hoods Mills, Md., and before the fire could be extinguished 250 tons of hay and 125 tons of straw, stacked near the hay, were destroyed.

The report that lightning had struck Mr. Hammond's haystack soon spread around the adjoining county and the farmers hurried to the scene and formed a bucket brigade.

They turned their attention to the large barn, which was also near by, and succeeded in saving it.

The fire burned all night, but the blaze was finally extinguished this morning when one and one-half tons of salt were thrown upon it.

Owing to the scarcity of hay and straw this season and the high prices, Mr. Hammond said that his loss is very severe.

The barn on the farm of John Riggs was struck and destroyed, together with a considerable quantity of hay, wheat, corn, farming implements, harness and some of his stock which could not be gotten out before the flames drove the workers out of the building.

The barn on the farm of Nathan Himmler was struck and destroyed, together with his entire crop of wheat and hay and a large quantity of corn, harness and farming implements.

A wind and hail storm of cyclonic proportions, accompanied by a deluge of rain, swept over Washington Wednesday afternoon and left in its wake three dead twelve injured, 150 wrecked and unroofed houses, 5,000 uprooted shade trees, 500 broken plate-glass windows, thousands of broken windows and hundreds of smashed store signs. The damage will reach $150,000. The White House grounds, the Capitol grounds, the Pension Building, the Judiciary Square, Lafayette Park and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing suffered heavily.
