

1,345,075 PEOPLE IN MARYLAND

This is the Latest United States Census Report.

Baltimore has added 21,105 people to its population, which is now 579,590, and the State of Maryland has shown an increase of 45,729 inhabitants during the last four years since the 1910 census was taken, and now has 1,345,075, according to a statement issued Monday by the Bureau of Census.

The population of the United States and its possessions according to the census enumerators, was 101,748,269. The census estimates give the American nation today a population of 109,000,000.

Of the American cities New York shows a tremendous gain during the last four years. She has leaped from a city of 4,766,833 to one of 5,335,537, and is now fast approaching the population of London, the largest city in the world.

Cleveland strengthened its hold on sixth place in the population race among the American municipalities. She is given a population of 639,431, a gain of 75,000 during the last four years.

According to the census estimates, Baltimore has half a million more people within its corporate limits than has Richmond, Va., the municipality which was recognized as the financial capital of Fifth Banking district over Baltimore.

New York's Typewriter Parade. "Typewriter parade" is a recent addition to the interest of downtown boom-tar in New York, as a writer in the Evening Post of that city tells us.

It is hard to over-estimate the value of well-bred seed. I used to read of the great difference in yield of the different varieties of corn and cotton, stories generally written by the seedsmen, and think, Oh, it's all in the attention he gives his pet patches.

When Flannigan Was Fired. Pat Flannigan, who worked in the Boston Navy Yard, broke the rules of that establishment every day by sneaking off to a retired spot and smoking his pipe after lunch.

Lower Education. Of a certain bishop the following anecdote is told: While presiding over a conference a speaker began a tirade against the universities and education, expressing thankfulness that he had never been corrupted by contact with a college.

Why is snow more easy to understand than any other kind of weather? "Well, yes," was the answer: "you can put it that way if you like."

Senator Vest's Famous Tribute.

One of the most eloquent tributes ever paid to the dog was delivered by Senator Vest of Missouri, some years ago. The distinguished Senator was attending court in a country town, and while waiting for the trial of a case in which he was interested, was urged by the attorneys in a dog case to help them.

NEGRO WELFARE TO BE DISCUSSED.

Sixth Annual Meeting of National Association for Advancement of This People To Be Held—Many Speakers.

The sixth annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will be held in Baltimore on May 3, 4 and 5 and the program announced promises to hold much of interest to thoughtful Americans who are aware of the implications of the "race problem."

Both white and negro speakers are announced, and the subjects to be discussed range from the care of the negro child and the negro delinquent woman up to such problems of statecraft as the "future of the civil war amendments" and the possible scope of the "race abolitionism" for which the association stands.

The opening session takes place on the afternoon of May 3, with Moorfield Storey of Boston in the chair. Mrs. Robert La Follette, wife of the Senator from Wisconsin, will discuss the problems confronting the negro woman.

The closing of the conference will be marked by addresses from Charles J. Bonaparte, formerly attorney-general of the United States, who speaks on "Economic and Legal Equality"; Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the New York Evening Post on "The New Abolition"; Miss Adeline Moffat on "The Southern Renaissance"; Butler E. Wilson of Boston, W. Ashbie Hawkins of Baltimore, and others.

As at previous conference, the morning sessions will be reserved for the members of the association, who will receive and discuss the reports from the various branches and the consideration of plans for the future.

The organization has done effective work in bringing about co-operation between the races for general uplift. The association publishes from its headquarters at 70 Fifth avenue, New York city, a monthly review of the race problem known as the Crisis and edited by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois.

Among the directors of the association are Miss Jane Addams, the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Charles W. Chestnutt, Walter E. Sachs, Moorfield Storey of Boston, Mrs. Florence Kelley, John E. Milbrand, the Rev. E. Hutchins C. Bishop, the Rev. W. H. Brooks and Oswald Garrison Villard.

Moral Courage. The world owes much to its men and women of courage. We do not mean physical courage in which man is at least equalled by the bull-dog; nor is the bulldog considered the wisest of his species. The courage that displays itself in silent effort and endeavor—that dares to endure all and suffer all for truth and duty—is more truly heroic than the achievements of physical valor, which are rewarded by honors and titles.

When Animals Sleep. Elephants sleep standing up. When in a herd a certain number will always stand watch while the others sleep, for the big, powerful beast are timid and cautious at night and will not go to sleep unguarded.

Bats sleep head downward, hanging by their hind claws. Birds with few exceptions, sleep with their heads turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust beneath the wing.

Storks, gulls and other long-legged birds sleep standing on one leg. Ducks sleep on open water. To avoid drifting ashore, they keep paddling with one foot, thus making them move in a circle.

Foxes and wolves sleep curled up, their noses and the soles of their feet close together and blanketed by their bushy tail. Lions, tigers and cat animals stretch themselves out flat upon the side. Their muscles twitch and throb, indicating that they are light and restless sleepers.

Owls, in addition to their eyelids, have a screen that they draw sideways across their eyes to shut out the light, for they sleep in the daytime.

Some Cat. Robert France, of Oella, Baltimore county, near Ellicott City, states that he has the greatest curiosity in the shape of a cat in Maryland, and his home has been visited by a large number of persons since Saturday last, when the kitten was born.

The Titanic's Successor. The White Star Atlantic liner Britannic, launched last week, is intended to take the place of the lost Titanic. The makers claim that the new steamship will be "the last word" for safety in ocean travel. It has a double hull, and water-tight compartments both lengthwise and crosswise.
