The Usual Way.

The Limited Express was tumbled along through midnight darkness. Suddenly the alert engineer sprang to the lever and set the brakes. The sparks flew from the rails as the locked wheels slid along with a cry of pain. The lights were extinguished as a car after car toppled from the rails. Then came a shuddering silence more terrible than the harsh grating of iron on steel.

Some passengers made torches from fragments of wreckage, and searched for dead and injured. A sound singularly like a snore issued from a pile of debris. Hastily removing several piles of twisted iron they dragged forth a slumbering porter. "Great heavens!" they exclaimed. "Didn't you know there had been a wreck?"

"Well, gennum, I sho' felt somethin', but I done thought we was couplin' on the 'dink' cah at Jackson."—"The Youth's Companion."

Do You Train For Your Business? In the May American Magazine Elmer E. Ferris, writing a story entitled "Billy Thomas Reorganizes," presents a character who talks, as follows, about the advantages of physical training:

"A fellow wants to get fit for something besides being fat. It is his work that he wants to aim at. You take it from me physical culture gives a man a crotch-hold on his day's work; but most men won't take the trouble to go through it. I met Jack Pfister a few days ago—You know he pitches in the National League. He was telling me about their spring training trip. Those fellows get so lame and sore that they can hardly roll out of bed in the morning. What do they do that for? Why to get fit to play league ball. Just suppose a man would go to it like that to get fit for business?"

"I had my fortune told the other day," said one woman. "What a waste of money!" said the other. "Not at all. I gave the woman 50 cents and she informed me that I am to inherit a hundred thousand dollars. Wasn't that a good bargain?"—"Washington Star."
