FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 3, 1914

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Farmers are busy cutting their wheat and rye.

The first ripe peaches grown in the mountains in the vicinity of Smithsburg were shipped last Saturday.

Hoods Mill was visited by a heavy hail and rain storm on Sunday night. Corn was beaten down, fencing and trees leveled and wheat shocks scattered all over the fields.

The platform of the Western Maryland Railway station was torn up for 30 feet by the bursting of a sewer pipe underneath, caused by the pressure of water passing through it.

Two car loads of foreigners arrived in this city on the milk train on Monday afternoon. They will be employed by the B. F. Shriver Co., in its canning factory, and to pick beans.

The passengers on the Owl train last Saturday night had to walk from Mr. Theodore F. Englar's farm to this city on account of a caboose's jumping the track. The train was delayed for some time.

During one of the storms last week a bolt of lightning entered the window of Dr. J. Edward Myers' home in New Windsor and struck a gun, splintering the stock of the gun. The gun belonged to the colored boy employed by Dr. Myers. No damage was done to the house or its occupants.

The Western Maryland Railway Company Saturday settled with Mrs. Mary Stuart, widow of William St. Clair Stuart, who was killed in the company's yards in Hagerstown last spring. Mrs. Stuart was paid $2,000 and the children, William St. Clair and Richard St. Clair, $1,000 each.

A fine program has been arranged for the annual picnic of the Grand Lodges of Maryland and Virginia, Good Templars, to be held at Mount Airy August 1. Dr. T. Alexander Cairns, of Newark, N. J., is the principal speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias N. Davis, Liberty street, are on a visit to relatives in Ohio. Mr. Davis writes us as follows from Ashtabud: "We are well and are having a good time. The country is beautiful. Have been on some 200-acre farms. On one of these farms I stood on the porch at the residence and could look over it and see other farms at the same time."

It is feared that State's Attorney Joseph L. Donovan of Howard county, who was seriously injured last week when a tree was blown across the automobile which he was driving, near Hanover, Pa., is suffering from internal injuries. Mr. Donovan has not yet improved in the manner it is believed he should and shows symptoms of injuries to the head and cuts and bruises on his body.

The high waters of the Patapsco river Sunday night washed out a portion of the ford recently constructed between Baltimore and Howard counties at Ellicott City. As a consequence traffic Monday was diverted to Ichester and Hollifields. The heavy rainstorm which passed over Woodstock and Sykesville about 9 o'clock Sunday night caused the river to rise four feet in 20 minutes.

Overcome by the heat Saturday afternoon, Benjamin F. Harris, 81 years old, one of the oldest residents in the vicinity of Glenelg, died before a doctor could be summoned. Mr. Harris was a farmer and was in the fields superintending some work. He was taken ill and some of his employees carried him to his house. A physician was called, but Mr. Harris was dead before he arrived. He is survived by a widow and several children.

A. J. Koonitz, the well known umbrella expert, of Hagerstown, spent a week at Fountain Valley, his native health, picking cherries. Mr. Koonitz, who is 73 years old, proved himself to be a champion cherry picker. He picked more cherries in a day than younger persons picked in two days. He challenges any other man of his age to the same amount of work. Besides being an expert in this line, Mr. Koonitz is accomplished in the art of imitating and can sing through a horn any song he hears either in English or German, French or Italian dialect.

Rev. George H. Enfield, who is a graduate of the Western Maryland College and has for the last few years been preaching as a Methodist Protestant minister, was ordained this week as pastor of the Hawley Memorial Congregational Church, at Monterey, on Tuesday. The sixty-fifth meeting of the Washington Association of Congregational Churches was held there in connection with the ordinary ceremony. The delegates were guests of the members of the church. Rev. Dr. Oliver Huckel, Rev. Mark Wells, Rev. W. J. Richards and J. Henry Baker, a layman, all of Baltimore, took part in the services.

On Saturday night, June 20, Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., No. 30, of Day, Md., held a rally at Pickett's Hall, where Brother W. L. Seabrook, state vice president, and Brother A. L. Davis, sheriff of Carroll county, a member of Washington Camp, No. 68, of Smallwood, made stirring addresses. Vice-president Seabrook has been untiring in his efforts and has visited a great many camps throughout the state during his administration; he has attended also every function of importance held in Baltimore city and several on the Eastern Shore. The rally at Camp No. 30 was one of the most successful that he has attended. The camp has 80 members, 50 of whom were present, besides a large delegation from Washington Camp, No. 15, of Winfield. After the close of the business session, an open meeting was held, and members and friends of the order were invited to be present, and the hall was packed to its capacity.

Remember to keep the Fourth sane. The Westminster Chautauqua will begin Friday, August 28.

Keep on swatting the fly and we'll soon put him completely out of business.

The Advocate is printed a day earlier this week on account of the glorious Fourth.

There were enough bridal smiles in Carroll county during June to supply sunshine for the entire season.

The Western Maryland Railway Company made a reduction in the section employees to four on Wednesday.

An exchange says, "It's pretty safe to judge a man by the condition of his back-yard. It shows how many of his could pass that board of censorship?"

St. John's, Leister's Sunday school will hold its annual picnic on August 22 in the grove adjoining the church. The Alesia Band will furnish music.

Mosquitoes are bothering residents of certain sections in this city. This is due to the local breeding places—stagnant water. Measures should be taken toward destroying such breeding places.

Cardinal Gibbons on Tuesday celebrated the fifty-third anniversary of his priesthood and the twenty-eighth of his cardinalate. He is now in England but will soon prepare to sail for this country.

Mr. J. M. Wolford, manager of the National Auction Company, of Washington, D. C., has purchased 20 acres of the Emanuel Shaeffer property on Fairground Hill, and is busy grading and developing the land which he will divide into lots and offer for sale at auction.

A notice published in this week's Advocate by the Mayor and Council states that ordinance 44, prohibiting the use of firecrackers, pistols or any explosives on the streets of Westminster since the Fourth of July, will be rigidly enforced.

The Twombly car, a neat little automobile, built for two passengers only, is on exhibition at W. H. Davis & Co.'s show rooms, John street. The car is not built like other automobiles which carry passengers. The car is narrow with one seat back of the other.

Mr. Philip D. Laird has sent to Governor Goldsborough his resignation as chairman of the Public Service Commission, to be effective on August 1. He will not sit in any hearings before the commission after July 15. Mr. Laird's feeble health is said to be the cause of his resignation. It is not known who will be his successor.

The following names were sent in to the State Tax Commissioner, one of which will be chosen as Supervisor of Assessments for Carroll county. These gentlemen are: George W. Brown, Frank E. Beaman, Mordcaie B. Stockdale, Orestus R. Koonitz and Charles Brillhart, were recommended by the Board of County Commissioners for the appointments.

Mr. W. H. Koonitz, of Hanover, Pa., who won his bride, Miss Barbara Smith, by inserting an advertisement in the Frederick "News" asking those interested in matrimony to correspond with him, is very happy and says he can recommend this method of obtaining a wife to any other young man. Mr. Koonitz lives in Westminster at the time he advertised.

The Westminster base-ball team has arranged two good games for the Fourth of July to be played on Athletic field with the Alco Athletic Club, of Baltimore, as opponents. The first game will be played at 10 o'clock in the morning and the second at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The Alco Athletic Club is one of the best amateur teams of the State, having three no-hit, no-run games to its credit this season.

Stanley Knock, of Woodbine, who was given a hearing several days ago at the Canton Police Station, Baltimore, charged with having failed to stop his car after running over a boy, and who proved an excellent alibi and was exonerated, was the chauffeur of Louis A. Dockman, who did not figure in the accident. Mr. Knock states that he only has a doctor's license and is not Mr. Dockman's chauffeur.

The special feature at the Opera House this week is the Dougherty Sisters who will appear Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights with a fine repertoire of songs, monologues and variety dances. On Friday night in addition to the above attraction the "Lucille Love" picture series will be continued, with the usual thrilling scenes and events participated in by the "girl of mystery." Saturday night there will be a three-ree Gaumont "The Opium Smugglers."

Mrs. Lottie Stambaugh, wife of Henry Stambaugh, of Thurmont, employed as a laborer upon the state road at $1.75 per day, Wednesday filed a bill in court at Frederick asking for a divorce upon the grounds of cruel conduct. She asked $25 counsel fees and $25 a month alimony pending the suit, both of which were granted, and she also asked for an injunction restraining her husband from selling a property, valued at about $1,200, and from drawing $600 from a Thurmont bank.

The Fourth will be the first big day at Emory Grove this summer. There will be base ball and other games and a patriotic celebration. A special Independence Day dinner will be served in the hotel by the new manager, Mrs. J. M. Gemmill. In the evening a concert will be given by the Floyd Featherstone Musical Company, of Washington, and "safe and sane" fireworks will be displayed. The day is generally one in which there are many family reunions at the hotel and in the tents and cottages.

The big motor bus, traveling between Westminster and Reisterstown, made its first trip last Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, conveying ten passengers from here to Reisterstown. The trip was made in 45 minutes. The bus is operated by Mr. William H. Bowers, who expects to make a trip every two hours. The fares last Monday amounted to $86, and since then the bus has been liberally patronized. It is said that if the travel between the two places is sufficient to make it "practical" the trolley line will be extended from Reisterstown to Westminster, and eventually perhaps on through to Gettysburg. The round trip fare from here to Baltimore by way of the bus is $1.00 while the Western Maryland Railway ticket costs $1.70. It is said that an express train to the car will be put on at Reisterstown to meet the bus and convey passengers straight through to Baltimore.

The postoffice will close at 9.30 a. m., on the Fourth of July and will not open until Monday.

Postmaster Millard Weer, of Sykesville, has appointed Mr. Nathan Hobbs as assistant postmaster.

Formwalt & Phillips have formed a co-partnership and will deal in cattle. They will open a stable in this city.

Saturday, being the Fourth of July, is a legal holiday. This office will be closed, as well as the court house, banks and barbershops.

St. Benjamin's (Kriders') Lutheran Sunday school will hold its annual picnic Saturday, July 25, in Andrew Reese's grove. A band of music will be present.

The postmaster at Woodbine will receive an increase of $100 in his salary according to an announcement by the postoffice department. The salary will be $1,100.

Providence Methodist Protestant Sunday school will hold its annual picnic on Saturday, July 18, beginning at 10 a. m. A band of music will be on hand during the day.

This morning the 9.35 train, going west, ran into a herd of cattle between Patapsco and the tank, and four cows were killed. It is not known to whom the cows belonged. The engine came very near leaving the tracks.

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Rinker and daughter, Miss Eva Rinker, have moved from the residence which they had occupied for many years, and will make their home with their eldest daughter, Mrs. George Mather. Mr. Edward Helwig will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Rinker's family.

State Comptroller Harrington has made public the annual apportionment of the funds for the several purposes for Baltimore city and the several counties of the State, amounting to $50,457.95. These funds are derived from dividends on stocks and bonds and surplus revenue in the hands of the State. The distribution also included $2,000 for the indigent blind. The amount apportioned Carroll county is $1,876.18.

A hail storm which was almost unprecedented for the wide area covered and for the size of the hailstones precipitated, swept a large portion of Frederick county and other sections of the State Monday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock and wrought considerable minor damage everywhere. Few places escaped some little destruction by the pelting of the immense hailstones, which for a time were driven by a strong wind and threatened to do untold damage to the crops, garden produce and property.

Mr. L. Earle Simpson is spending several weeks with his mother, Mrs. S. Simpson, Willis street. By will of Edgar McCauley, left for probate Wednesday in the office of Register of Wills William J. Peach at Towson, he leaves his property to his first wife, Mrs. Mary S. McCauley, who was divorced from him, and her children, and nothing to his second wife, who shot and killed him at Arlington June 23. This means that his widow will be deprived of all except dower rights to his property.

The will was executed January 3, 1911, before the divorce and second marriage. His daughter, Miss Catherine R. McCauley, is left $100 and the rest of the property is given to his first wife and son, Edgar E. McCauley, equally.

Mr. John M. Roberts, of this city, and Col. Joseph L. Wickes, of Baltimore, deputy collectors of income tax, began work Wednesday. They took the oath of office before Collector Hanna. Mr. Roberts is a field deputy and Col. Wickes is an office deputy. Approximately $1,500,000 in Federal income taxes was collected from individuals and corporations in the Maryland district, composed of the States of Maryland and the District of Columbia. Mr. Hanna announced that the collections from taxes on tobacco, liquor and other sources during the month of June aggregated $2,014,243.61 and for the year $3,516,566.33. Income tax payments are still pouring into Mr. Hanna's office. The 5 per cent. penalty will not be imposed upon these belated returns, the Treasury Department having allowed 10 days of grace. There are, however, but a small per cent. of delinquents, compared to the total.

SECOND SPRAY FOR CODLING MOTHS.

T. B. SYMONS, Maryland Agricultural College.

The second brood of the codling moth appears about July 1st. Unless the first spraying, when the bloom fell, was exceedingly thorough, a spraying with arsenate of lead should be applied at this time.

More important than the arsenate of lead treatment for the codling moth is the application of Bordeaux mixture to prevent Bitter Rot and other diseases developing when the fruit is maturing.

The combination spray recommended for this time is: Bordeaux Mixture and Arsenate of Lead: Copper Sulphate, 4 lbs. Lime (Burned), 5 lbs. Water, 50 gal. Arsenate of lead, 2 lbs. The spray solution is cheap, and it only requires a little extra pains to secure a good crop of clean fruit.

TIME TO SEPARATE.

Do you know that all things being equal the smaller your flock of growing chickens the better the individual birds will grow and develop? Have you stopped to think that you can reduce the size of your flock of pullets approximately one half by taking out the males? The earlier they are removed the better the pullets will be developed, and the stronger and harder the pullets are, the better will be their egg production during the winter. Sell off the cockerels as soon as they get a little size for as a rule prices are higher earlier in the season. However, if you have some exceptional birds and can sell some of the cockerels for breeders in the fall pick out the best and pen them up by themselves, being sure to give them the best of care and attention. It is just as important to have the male birds healthy and vigorous as the breeding hens.

The Man Who Was Dead.

Perhaps more than one man has wondered if he might find a half, quite distinct from the first, and have the chance to begin his life all over again, with none of the ties of his former existence and with a "clean slate." The case has lately come up of one man who had this opportunity, but did not avail himself of it. For thirty-five years he was separated from his wife and son, while they believed him to be dead; and yet throughout all that period his search for them was tireless.

The New York Standard and Herald story has called its hero an Enoch Arden, but in view of the actual events this is somewhat of a misnomer, for Alfred Welland did not on his return find himself an outcast and forgotten. The bond of the family, through a generation and a half, hangs still. The news story presents an admirable picture of the reunion of husband and wife.

A gay-haired man of prosperous appearance rapped timidly upon a door on the third floor of the house at 87 South Fourth street, in Williamsburg. He was in a nervous manner that of one who seemed to dread the outcome of what was about to happen.

The door opened. Confronting the man was a woman of about his age, gray-haired, too. Sunken under his eyes, she stood as he walked in, telling him her hands nervously upon her apron.

"For a moment or two he struggled for speech, then he regained self-control. "Mary!" he cried, holding out both hands to the woman. "Don't you know me? Don't you know your husband? They told me you were dead. I've hunted all over the world for you and just found you were living."

The woman's face was as gray as her hair. For a moment she stood as one dazed. Then she threw herself into his arms and called his name as her husband, and his name as her husband, and his name as her husband.

The door closed upon them, while neighbors ran to spread the tidings through the house.

More than thirty-five years ago Alfred Welland, then a prosperous British resident of Cairo, Egypt, had married a young Egyptian girl, a Turkish politician. He was intimate with Osman Pasha, the Turkish General, and enlisted in the Turkish Army at the outbreak of the Turko-Russian War. Osman made him an officer and he marched away with his command after saying good-by to his wife and her infant son, named for his father.

For some months the wife and her little boy remained in Cairo waiting for some news of Welland. At intervals came letters—now a brief line hastily scrawled, now a longer epistle telling of the campaign, of the husband's safety, and of a further promotion that he had received. But after a time the letters ceased and there was no news of Welland or of the command with which he marched. There ensued a period of aching waiting, and then, continues the wife, came the news that seemed to confirm the dread of the long days preceding.

In 1877 the rumor swept through Egypt that a terrible battle had been fought at Plevna, and that thousands had been killed and wounded. Official dispatches confirmed this, and the list of the dead contained the name of Capt. Alfred Welland.

The wife was broken-hearted. She was fairly well-to-do and had no cause to worry on that account, but the loss of her husband made her very ill for a long time. When she recovered she sought to trace her husband's body, but learned that he had been buried in an unnamed grave.

After a year Mrs. Welland sold her home in Cairo and with her young son left the country. She went first to Australia, traveled there for a while, and finally came to the United States, settling in New York. Her son grew up, and some years ago he married and went to live in Boston, where business called him. His mother continued to make her home here, and for some time has had an apartment in Williamsburg. She had for years been firm in the belief that her husband was dead, and had given up the search for information about him.

Thus the long period of separation began. Beyond a certain time the wife could not keep up her hope, and with her removal from the East nearly all trace was lost by which one who had returned from the dead might find her. To her it seemed impossible that she would ever hear from her husband; and yet, back in Cairo, the impossible was beginning to happen. "Two years after the battle of Plevna," says the writer, "there came faintly back to that city a worn, emaciated veteran of the war."

The story continues: It was Alfred Welland, who had been left for dead upon the battlefield and had fallen a prisoner to the enemy. When the Turkish relief corps went over the scene later they found a body that, though mutilated by shot, was identified as that of Welland. So his name passed from the rolls.

The war ended and the Russian prisoners gave up their captives. Among them was Welland. Slowly he made his way to his home. It was in strange circumstances that his wife and child had disappeared. Friends told him they had gone to Australia. He followed and heard finally that they had gone to America.

Again he took up the search, but in this country it was in vain. He was told that a woman and a boy answering to the description he gave had died of a fever epidemic. From New York he went to Canada and settled in Montreal, starting in business as a furniture manufacturer. The years brought him success, but not all happiness. He never married again, and for a long time followed many false clues to his family.

Two years ago he came back to New York on business. Then his hopes were revived at a report that a Mrs. Welland was living there. But search failed to reveal her and he returned to Montreal. Ten days ago he received from friends information that he believed they had really found his wife.

Last night Mrs. Welland's old home was closed. She and her husband who was found after many years were on their way to Boston until this morning that he has a father living.—Literary Digest.

RURAL MINISTERS CONFERENCE AT AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Will Meet Early in August For the Discussion of Country Life Problems.

B. H. DARROW, Maryland Agricultural College.

The country church is continually under fire by critics who declare that it is not fulfilling its function, that it does not stand for something vital to the needs of the average man and woman. If this be true, it is a serious condition indeed.

That there is some truth in the statement is now admitted by any minister who has studied the problem, but the fact remains that the rural church has done a wonderful work in the past and should be sparingly criticised except where criticism may bring about constructive effort toward betterment. Country life has changed, rural institutions have weakened and some have disappeared entirely. Here and there we find a flourishing country church, alive to the needs of its neighbor house and recognized as the most necessary organization in the community. However, in many places may be found "churches" which are but names, buildings, "shells"—which if not abandoned utterly have but little influence on the people in their neighborhood. The country minister of Maryland is aware as is demonstrated by the Rural Life Conference for Ministers which will be held at the Maryland Agricultural College, August 4, 5, 6. Every minister in the State is being urged to attend and should receive a program of this conference.

THE CABBAGE WORMS.—Three or four species of moth or butterfly larvae are annual pests of cabbages, but their ravages are easily controlled by a thorough spraying with arsenate of lead, 2 lbs. to a barrel of soap suds made with one pound of laundry soap to 50 gallons of water. Use a nozzle that will give a fine mist.

Country boys need rotation of experience as fields need rotation of crops.

When a fellow is always spilling for a fight it is generally because he is too fresh.

Keeping the Talk-Tracks Clear

The telephone you see before you is a very small part of the telephone system—one of the finger tips, as it were. More than 60% of the telephone plant is located outside of the central office and the subscriber's premises. Thousands of dollars in telephone plant is hidden under the city streets and strung out along the country road. When you talk over a telephone line, you have thousands of dollars worth of equipment at your exclusive service. It is the unseen telephone plant which enables you to send your voice where you will.
