The September revenue of the nation fell off $6,000,000, a shortage in customs of $9,500,000 being partially offset by an increase of internal revenue. But this change is not an accident due to the war; it is the end aimed at by the Underwood tariff.

Duties were reduced and it was intended that the customs revenue should not be made so large as it was under the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which was in force a year ago. Undoubtedly the war has seriously affected the revenue, but the greatest effect was in the first few weeks.

Commerce is nearly normal now, and such decreases of customs revenue as were suffered in August and September are not to be expected in succeeding months.—Philadelphia Record.

James Brightwell, colored, chief trouble chaser for D. S. Gehr's hardware store, had the experience of his life on Tuesday with a loaded cigar. Jim asked a hardware drummer for a cigar, and the drummer had in stock just the smoothest and mildest cigar that was ever put on the market.

James thought he was getting a real 25c smoker. He accepted the cigar with the greatest of dignity and lit it, while the store clerks waited for the bang. James exclaimed how good it was, and shot it into his mouth, when the powder in the cigar went zip, zing. Jim gave a yell that could be heard a mile. He will not accept another cigar. When the fun started Charles Johnson, the colored bootblack left out a yell that made the tin pans and iron pots tinkle on the shelves in the store.

Be a little careful of your face powder, girls, for it is getting more expensive every day to keep that shine off. Imported complexion subduers, it was learned today, have begun to raise in price. It formerly was possible to purchase a box of French whiteners for 85 cents. Now this same beauty aid costs $1.15.

"I will not punish any honest man who, while in search of work, is caught riding unauthorized on trains," Justice Schirm in the South-Western Police Court, Baltimore, Monday morning when Leonard Scofield and William Brady, both of New York, and Harry Miller, of Philadelphia, were arraigned before him. The men were taken off a Baltimore and Ohio freight train Sunday night by Special Officer Thomas Holland. Scofield and Brady said they were left in Westminster by a circus and were on their way to Baltimore in search of work. They met Miller on the train. In disposing of the case Justice Schirm said he would assist the railroad in bringing rid of tramps who commit depredations on cars, but when men without money are in search of work he will help them rather than send them to the House of Correction.

With a crash that could have been heard for miles the steam dome of a locomotive No. 250 which was undergoing repairs in the Western Maryland round-house, at Hanover, Pa., on Tuesday afternoon, exploded and the top of the dome weighing several hundred pounds crashed through the two-inch plank roof of the building. The force was so terrific that a hole nearly 25 feet square was torn out of the roof. The top of the dome was hurled probably 50 feet above the building and as it came down it crashed through another part of the roof landing on the concrete floor, not over 40 feet from where the engine stood. Along with the dome, like the tail of a kite, went a large portion of the sheet iron covering of the boiler. This was broken loose from the main piece of iron and pieces were found at each end of the round house.

Supplementing the notice issued recently by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to its employees, urging them to render every assistance in putting out fires in property adjoining the railroad as well as along the right of way, blanks are being furnished to trainmen in order that they may notify trackmen of the existence of slight fires which might result in heavy loss of property unless checked. Under the new arrangements when a trainman discovers a small blaze in the grass along the right of way which is not sufficiently dangerous to justify stopping the train, he is instructed to fill out a printed form, locating the blaze, and throw it off to the first track gang or track-walker or station agent passed. The blank is labeled conspicuously "Blaze and Put Out Fire. The blanks are to be used only in case of fire at the side of the right of way, and only where it is felt that there is no immediate danger, in cases where bridges or buildings are in danger trains are stopped.
