At the appointed time about 150 brother Odd Fellows had assembled in the lodge room and held a regular meeting before the degree was given.

About 9:30 the Grand Lodge officers arrived in two automobiles, being delayed about one hour by one of the machines getting cranky and refusing to run.

A number of addresses were made by members during the evening, and each speaker was heartily applauded. At the adjournment of the session an invitation was extended to all to return to the drill room of the armory where two tables were supplied with sandwiches, coffee, cake and ice cream.

After enjoying the refreshments and from a previous invitation by Mr. Peter Samios, of the firm of Reese & Samios, proprietors of the Opera House, all were asked to adjourn to the play house where they were entertained by five reel pictures entitled "The Port of Missing Men." The Revival of Church of God.

On Sunday night the Church of God revival commenced. The hall proved not large enough the first night to accommodate the crowd that had gathered. The crowds all week have been very large, so far there have been five conversions, and one night 19 held up their hands for prayer. Every effort is being put forth by the church to make the meeting a great success. The church has pledged themselves to pray morning, noon and night for the meeting, and each night a ten minute prayer-meeting is held before the preaching service begins. On last Monday a committee of men tagged the town, a very neatly printed tag was hung on the doors announcing the meeting, also at the same time asking questions of all those who would read the same, and on Wednesday a committee of men distributed small tracts hoping that they would do some good.

The public is welcomed at these meetings. The pastor in charge extends an invitation to all the ministers of the town, and begs an interest in the prayers of all God's people.
