Boarding house proprietors and people who spend the summer in their cottages at Pen Mar say that so far this has been the dullest year. Pen Mar has known for a long time. Although he was an excellent swimmer, Charles Arrington, 15 years old, of Baltimore, was drowned late Sunday afternoon when he dived off the pier at River View. His cousin refused to go into the water and remarked that he was going back to the city after bidding his cousin good-by.

Hard Lines.

"You look as if you'd lost the best friend you had in the world," remarked the man from Patchogue. "What seems to be the trouble?" "My boss just notified me that the office will close at noon on Saturdays during the summer months," replied the Sponck commuter.

"I don't see why you should feel so gloom about that."

"You don't, eh? Do you know what that order means to me? It means that I'll have to walk with every member of the family with every member of the family will enjoy."

DEMOCRATS TALK IT OVER.

Supporters of Harrington and Lee Equally Convicted of Victory in Primary Fight.

The meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee Wednesday at the Rennett, Baltimore, was pleasantly brief and perfunctory. The selection of September 14 as the date of the primary was ratified; Chairman Murray Vandiver was authorized to name the date of the State convention, and the number of delegates to the convention from each of the counties and legislative districts was ordered to be equal to the delegation of each unit in the Legislature. Afterward, there was the usual luncheon.

The real business of the party people was to ascertain the conditions in the gubernatorial fight between Senator Blair Lee and Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington.

After it was all over, most of them probably knew as little as before. The Smith-Harrington people were absolutely sure that the fight was over; that they had from 85 votes to 90 votes outside of Baltimore and that they would carry at least two districts in Baltimore; the Lee-Pryon people were absolutely sure that they had 70 votes outside of Baltimore.

Singularly, there was much less than the usual bluff about the assertions of the respective sides. There seems to be no doubt that the leaders of each element really believe that they will win decisively.

The Smith-Harrington people were jubilant over the evidence that there is a strong anti-Lee movement in Baltimore. And the truth is that there were more city men about the Rennett lobby opposed to the city organization and able to make their opposition count than has been usual. It looked, too, as if the city organization leaders realized that they had more of a fight than ordinarily.

The Lend-A-Hand Book Club.

"Now haying commence, and when its good weather. Sweet fragrance and odors that wait in the breeze, Mingle such pleasure with labor together. As makes even labor itself for to please."

Haying, wheat cutting, or threshing did not keep the members of the book club from attending the last meeting for the summer, at the home of the president, Mrs. J. C. Wallis, of Plum Tree Farm. Instead of a "cold bite" the husbands were promised an extra good supper if the wives arrived home late.

The meeting opened with the usual order of business. The vice-president, Mrs. A. N. Zentz, presiding. The Club is growing. Twenty members, one new one added at this meeting, Mrs. Pardew, wife of Rev. Pardew, of Mechanicsville. The good work goes on, community work, a reaching out to help where the need is greatest.

The inception of the local W. C. T. U. began in this club, and was organized at one of the meetings. From the desire to be a help to every life in which the members come in contact, the impulse to widen the field goes on. Money was sent to the Sun of Baltimore, for the relief of the babies in purchasing milk and ice. Still another donation of money was sent to an orphan asylum in North Carolina, under the care of the M. P. Church. A sample was left in the treasury to begin the fall work.

A delightful program followed. An instrumental duet, by the Misses Zentz; a reading, "The Harvest," by Mrs. Knox; vocal solo, "A Perfect Day," Miss Grace Pardew, Miss Caroline Parkhurst, of Ohio, who has been at Blue Ridge College, New Windsor, as musical instructress, executed in a finished technique; "Spring Showers," by Fink, "Twilight Evening Bell," by Well, and "Song of the Bathers," by Wache. Miss Eurieth Zentz, rendered "To Spring" by Greig.

A number of visitors were present who contributed to the money sent to the babies and orphans. The social half hour was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Geo. Knox, in a gracious manner, gave the toast to the hostess, and in turn to the hostess' mother, Mrs. Segafosse. The quotations, given by the members of the club, were unusually pretty. The next meeting will be held in September at "Flag Meadow Farm," the home of the vice president, Mrs. A. N. Zentz, Deer Park road.

Pollyanna Grows Up.

The Second Glad Book by Eleanor H. Porter.

Hundreds of thousands of readers of The Philadelphia Record know Pollyanna, the delightful little girl who brings sunshine into every home she enters. They made her acquaintance when Eleanor H. Porter's "Pollyanna" "The Glad Book" was published serially in The Philadelphia Sunday Record.

Many readers have pronounced this the most entertaining story ever published in The Record and it has been praised everywhere by critics as being full of throbbing life and its realities and a strikingly good example of genuine literature.

Now another "Pollyanna" story is about to begin in this same newspaper. The Sunday Record has succeeded in securing the rights to publish serially the new book "Pollyanna Grows Up," by the same versatile author. It will be found as fascinating as the original success and fully up to its quality. It deals with later and more mature experiences of the same charming heroine and her friends. It is a story that will bring a sure and swift response in the hearts of young and old. It is a real "sunshine book"—one which every member of the family will enjoy.

The first installment will be printed in the magazine section of the Philadelphia Record on Sunday, August 1st. Your local newsdealer will fill your order for delivery.

Good Templars to Meet.

Plans are being made for the annual reunion of the Independent Order of Good Templars, which will be held at Wildwood Park, near Mt. Airy, under the direction of the Grand Lodges of Maryland and Virginia August 7.

Delegates from the various lodges of the two States will be received at the station. Later a line of march will be formed at the Presbyterian Church and a parade will be made in the interest of the temperance movement and the following speakers will make addresses:

Prof. William J. Heaps, president of Milton University, Baltimore, and State secretary of the Patriotic Sons of America; Dr. Thomas Hare, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, and Daniel A. Poling, of Boston. The latter is 20 years old and is associate editor of the Christian Endeavor World. Vocalists from Philadelphia will be present.

Few realize the great number of articles that enter into the construction of a house, and the various sources from which they are derived. To assemble these various materials and have them ready for distribution at the point of delivery at the proper time, requires great system and business tact.

A representative of this paper had a very interesting talk with Wade H. D. Warfield, president of the Sykesville Lumber Coal & Grain Co., a few days ago and was much impressed when he learned that in a house which they had recently furnished the various material had come from the following seventeen states and British Columbia:

Stone and brick from Maryland, lime from West Virginia, framing from North Carolina, flooring from Georgia, floor joists from Alabama, maple flooring from Minnesota, sash and doors from Wisconsin, asbestos shingles from New Hampshire, cement from Pennsylvania, plaster from Ohio, columns from Washington, cypress from Louisiana, neponset roofing from Massachusetts, locks from Connecticut, hardware from Illinois, poplar from Tennessee, red cedar shingles from British Columbia.

Sykesville's reputation for having the largest building material distributing house in Central Maryland is well sustained by the foregoing.

What sleep can do, when sleep comes so To lay thy finger, soft and slow Upon the eyes that looked in ours Way-off somewhere in lands of flowers That memory still keeps fresh and dear!

What sleep can do! That it should fall Upon such eyes as his at all! But, falling, ah! may all his sweet Unto his dreamless soul repeat The grace, the fondness and the praise, That memory whispers through life's tear, When we think of the old "Bob" Nelson days!

Good cohorts of the old machine Ere motor cars came on the scene, And cyclists out in Sunday hordes Made that dear day which is the Lord's A day of pilgrimage a wheel Up hill and down and over fords To Ridgeville, where with hearts athrob, They knew they'd dine with "Uncle Bob!"

Ah, messmates of that table groaning With ash the food in life worth owning Take with me in this hour's sad spell The comfort of a last farewell! What sleep can do! Ah, birds, sing on, To cheer him to blue heavens of dawn! Not bread, but kindness, his staff! What sunshine is his wholesome laugh!

What generous spirit in his heart— A hat who stood unmatched, apart, Just taking for his share of things— The thought that he had pleased a king's Content in sharing all he had To make the friends be made feel glad! Oh, comrade of the long-lasts, Not yours the ears to hear this praise, But ours the lips to sing it ere The dusty shades of memory fall, As from each scorching eye a tear! Oh sleep! but not beyond recall To those who still down all our ways Dream of the old "Bob" Nelson days! By the Bentztown Bard.

Mr. Austin Yingling, this city, and four other gentlemen, two from Delaware, one from New York and one from New Jersey, narrowly escaped death on Wednesday, August 26 miles out from Rochester, N. Y., when the automobile in which they were riding ran into a ditch. The car struck a large stone in the ditch which threw it and the occupants against the opposite bank.

The accident was caused by making a sharp curve on too great a speed. Mr. Yingling and the other gentlemen were visiting and inspecting other canning factories, having been invited by the American Can Co.

The chauffeur was killed. Mr. Yingling's injuries consist of a scarred face, finger out of place and a general shaking up. The gentleman from New Jersey and one from Delaware are improving in a hospital.

A meeting of the Chautauqua committee was held last week to arrange some of the details for the Westminister Chautauqua which begins Friday, August 27.

Wm. Hyser, a representative of the Association at Swarthmore, was present and gave some valuable suggestions and stated that the program this year was the strongest one they have ever given. Chairmen of the following committees were appointed with authority to appoint the other members of the committees. Mrs. Scott Roop, ticket selling committee, Miss Mary Shellman, hospitality committee; Miss Eva Herr, decoration committee; Miss Isabelle Roop, Junior Chautauqua committee; Geo. R. Grumble, advertising committee; Oscar D. Gilbert, parade committee and J. Pearre Wantz, reception committee.

A physician started a modern insane asylum, says the New York Sun, and set aside one ward especially for the crazy motorists and chauffeurs. Taking a friend through the building he pointed out with particular pride the automobile ward and called attention to its elegant furnishings and equipment.

"But," said the friend, "the place is empty; I don't see any of our numerous patients."

"Oh, they are all under the coats fixing the stats," smilingly explained the physician.
