PRISONER OF HER FATHER 12 YEARS.

GRACE MARSHALL, OF TALBOT, VICTIM OF INHUMAN CRUELTY—LOCKED UP AT 16 TO END ROMANCE.

Victim of treatment the inhumanity of which finds no parallel in the history of Maryland, Grace Marshall is the topic of conversation for all Easton today, for she has just been liberated from a tiny, foul room in the home of her father, Frank Marshall, a farmer, of near St. Michaels, where she was held prisoner for 12 years.

The facts of the case became known Saturday and, although doubt is expressed whether there is a law to punish Marshall and his wife, who is the young woman's stepmother, Talbot county is seething with indignation against them.

Through the efforts of Miss Emma Davis, local agent for the Children's Aid Society of Maryland, Miss Marshall gained her liberty, and is now at the home of her aunt, Mrs. M. H. Jones, at Easton. Miss Marshall is 28 years old. She weighs 57 pounds, and the thread of life is worn almost to the breaking point, for, it is declared, she was given barely enough food for the period of her incarceration upon which to subsist. And the cause of her punishment was that she, when a schoolgirl of 16 years, went with a youth of whom her father and stepmother did not approve. Her prison since that time has been a room about 8 by 10 feet in dimensions, having one small window the shutters of which were kept closed and the door always locked.

Marshall, when examined before the Circuit Court, gave no reason for his treatment of his daughter, except to say that he was too poor to send her to a hospital.

One day soon after being imprisoned Miss Marshall escaped from the room and jumped from a second story porch to the ground below breaking her leg. She was picked up and carried into the house and the limb reset, but not properly, leaving one leg about four inches shorter than the other. After she recovered she was never allowed to leave the room. Her stepmother, it is said, carried the key in her pocket, and no one was allowed to see her.

Marshall had other children, but on the death of his first wife they were distributed among her relatives to be cared for. One of these, a girl, was placed on Kent Island and about seven or eight years ago, it is said, this child died, and was brought from Kent Island in a motorboat to Mr. Marshall's home, whence the funeral and burial took place. It is said that the rumor was circulated and was never contradicted by the Marshalls that this was Grace, the reported invalid daughter.

All of Grace's relatives and friends believed her dead until several weeks ago, when her uncle, John Hancock, of Wilmington, Del., came down to Mr. Marshall's on a visit. When he was ushered up to bed that night he by chance was assigned to a room adjoining the one in which his niece was confined. During the night, he said, he heard such unearthly groans coming from the room adjoining he could not sleep. The sounds continued all night. When light came he got up, sauntered out on the second story of the porch and, still hearing the groans, he started an investigation. The shutters to the Grace room were fastened, but peering through the cracks, he said he saw a woman clad in underclothing crawling around the floor, seemingly picking up crumbs and eating them.

He went to Easton and reported the case to Miss Davies, who began an investigation. She went to Mr. Marshall's residence to see what was the matter and if she could be of any assistance. She asked to see Grace, but was told that no one was allowed to see her. She then went back to Easton and through the assistance of Attorney J. Fletcher Clark got out a writ of habeas corpus before the Circuit Court for Talbot county.

Armed with this, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff James A. Gannon, they procured Orlando Horsey's automobile and went to Mr. Marshall's and brought the woman back with them. Miss Davies was compelled to get clothing for her, such as shoes, stockings—in fact, everything except underclothing—as she had nothing to wear.

The small room had only one window and the shutters to that were closed. Under these conditions, and practically unclothed, Miss Marshall had been compelled to spend the last years of her life like an animal in its den in the winter without any fire and in the summer with hardly any air. It was further learned that she was given two very scanty meals a day, which her condition plainly shows was not sufficient for her.

SENATOR-ELECT WARFIELD

WILL PROTECT THE INTERESTS OF THE TAXPAYERS OF THE STATE.

Senator-Elect Wade H. D. Warfield was in Westminster on Wednesday and during an interview with a representative of the Advocate he stated: "Upon the record of the next few years the Democratic party in the State of Maryland either stands or falls." He said: "I had a most satisfactory conference with Governor-elect Harrington last week and I am thoroughly impressed that he means to redeem every pledge of the party's platform—I was especially interested in his attitude in reference to economy, as you know, economy, efficiency and business methods in public service was my personal plea to our people here in Carroll county, during my campaign.

"It is the duty of every Senator and every member of the House to support these measures as they are of vital importance to every taxpayer.

I hope the commission that was appointed by the State Convention to consider economies and the re-organization of the State machinery, and of which one of our fellow-countians, Mr. Park, is a member, will make their recommendations as early as possible and will give them wide publicity, so they can be thoroughly discussed before the Legislature convenes,—this will enable early intelligent action.

"I look upon the State of Maryland as a large business corporation with the Governor at the head and the members of the Legislature the stockholders—and certainly when the last Legislature appropriated a million and a half dollars more than was available, and voted over two hundred thousand dollars for their own running expenses for less than eighty days of actual work, it was undoubtedly against the interest of the taxpayers.

"The salary of each Senator and member of the House averaged about $500 and the overhead charges for each member was nearly $2,000, four times the actual salary. Could any corporation remain solvent under such conditions? The stockholders must necessarily be assessed and they were assessed by an advanced tax rate.

"Although the 1916 session of the Legislature promises to be an extraordinary session, probably it will be the most important one since the close of the Civil war, at the same time, the expenses should not under any conditions exceed $150,000 and if the Senate and House work in full sympathy with the Governor, this can be easily accomplished.

"I shall support the Governor steadfastly in redeeming every pledge of the party, and shall use my best efforts to eliminate all unnecessary expenses, and shall advocate economy and business methods not only in the Legislature but in every branch of the State government.

"Without administrative affairs on a solid business foundation, together with our varied natural advantages, we will place ourselves in the foremost rank of all the progressive States.

"I find the best thinking people, who find the State at heart, irrespective of party affiliation, are already looking to the Democratic party for relief and I feel they will not be disappointed."

Very Much in Wrong "Both."

Smythe's mistake, which is described in an English contemporary, must have been disconcerting, to say the least.

"You'll find your bath in the outhouse."

Thus he had been directed the night before at a little inn where he was stopping, and that is why he was now, in his dressing gown, pushing open the outhouse door. It was dark, but there was the tub, and it would do. He hopped in. In the middle of his ablutions the red-faced landlord thrust his head in at the door. In the dim light he failed to see the man in the tub.

"Water quite nicely warm, thanks," observed Smythe, "but it's a trifle muddy."

"Muddy he hanged!" roared the landlord, bursting in suddenly. "Your tub's in the next place. Get out of it, you biltherin' idiot! Not a word of this in the 'ouse, mind! Not a word of this in the 'ouse! That's my 'ome-brewed ale you're a-washin' in!"

Mr. J. L. Hooper, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in this city yesterday.

Miss Pauline Driscoll, John street, spent Thanksgiving in Baltimore.

Mr. John Coppers and friend, of Baltimore, are guests of Mr. Charles Zentz, of Statewood.
