GIRL HIDES IN SHIP CASK.

PRETTY FRENCH MISS, SMUGGLED ABOARD BY DANE LOVER, WEDS HIM AT SEA.

The marriage at sea of a stowaway bride, who had been hidden in a cask in the hold of his ship for forty-five days, was a story brought to Philadelphia by Capt. John Forsyth, master of a Philadelphia schooner, which has just returned to an American port from France.

"After several days of waiting," said the skipper, "I obtained the services of young Olsen as a cook. Three days after Olsen came on the ship three French detectives came aboard. They accused me of having a French girl hidden aboard. They searched the schooner from keel to truck and left satisfied that they were mistaken.

"We were well out to sea when one morning I was surprised to see a pretty French girl strolling about the deck. I learned she was the girl for whom the detectives had been searching and had been aboard more than a month.

"It appears her parents had objected to her marrying Olsen, whom she had met only a few weeks before in Marseilles, where she lived. They decided to come to America and be married. Neither had money.

"She and Olsen made their way overland to Bordeaux where Olsen joined the vessel. He waited his time and smuggled the girl aboard and hid her away in a huge cask which had been stored in the lower hold of the vessel. Twice a day he brought her food, and at night he watched for her while she came on deck for exercise.

"I sent for Olsen and told him the immigration authorities would not allow the girl to land. They seemed dejected. I then happened to think that the laws of the United States invited me with the power to perform a marriage ceremony. I then announced to all of the crew that there would be a wedding aboard the ship within an hour.

"There was a loud cheer for the bride and then all of the crew busied themselves bunting to decorate the schooner. While the ship was hove to I made them man and wife. It was the first time that I had ever played parson."

Dudrow—Lindsay.
Miss Marie Emmaline Lindsay of Baltimore, formerly of this city, and William M. Dudrow were married Tuesday evening, April 8 at the English Lutheran parsonage by Rev. Luther F. Miller, pastor. The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Lindsay. Miss Agnes Dudrow, sister of the groom was bridesmaid and Sergt. Melvin D. Lindsay was best man. The bride was attired in a blue suit and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas, while the bridesmaid wore a blue suit and carried a bouquet of pink sweetpeas. Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudrow will make their home with the bride's parents at 1919 E. Jefferson street, Baltimore, Md. They received many handsome presents.

Teachers' Conference at Royer's.
Friday, April 11th, will long be remembered by the teachers of Maccheter district. It was an eventful day, as the heavy downpour of rain did not affect the coming together of nine-tenths of the rural teachers of the district, together with Superintendent Unger and his able assistant, Miss Jewell.

The morning session was taken up in demonstration work, consisting of two classes of pupils, one taught by Miss Adda Trump, of Old Fort school, the other by Miss Winifred Maschenheimer, of Royer's school. Both were very successfully conducted.

The afternoon session consisted of a general and intelligent discussion of methods actually used in the schools of the respective teachers present, every teacher taking part in the discussion. Hot lunches were discussed by those who have successfully tested the new plan the past winter.

Before adjourning, it was unanimously decided that the conference was a complete success.

Superintendent Unger added to the enthusiasm by assuring the teachers of a liberal increase in their salaries for next year, the County Board of Education having recently acted upon the matter.

Hobby, Secretary Forest & Stream Club received from the State Hatchery at Havre de Grace, last Friday a shipment of 600,000 Yellow Perch and they were put in Carroll county streams as follows: 100,000 at Starner's Dam on the Monocacy River, 50,000 at Double Pipe Creek, Detour and 50,000 on Big Pipe Creek near Taneytown. This is probably the first time yellow perch have been planted in our streams and we hope it will be a success.

This week we are carrying an advertisement representing one of the cars being handled by Blue Ridge Garage, New Windsor. Walter E. Cross, are the proprietors and in making this selection they have used their usual care and knowledge of the motor business to select something of high grade. This marks the beginning of an aggressive advertising campaign by this firm, and we have no doubt it will bring results. These young men have business capabilities and sufficient knowledge of the automobile business to make a success and judging from the beautiful garage and the up-to-date equipment in machinery and show rooms that they are erecting and installing, they will make New Windsor known for all that is best in the automobile industry. It is one of the members of this firm who before entering the service made a marked success with Delco-Light, the electric farm lighting system, which line this member, Edgar M. Frounfeiler, still represents in the usual first class way and upon his discharge from the service in the near future will devote his entire time and energy to the sale and service of this line.

SLEW SLACKER WHO ELOPED WITH WIFE.

LOS ANGELES SOLDIER RETURNED HOME AND SHOT INTERLOPER—FORGAVE THE WOMAN.

When James E. Robertson of Los Angeles, returned from service in the Army he found his wife had gone away with a slacker. He faced a problem, the possibility of which has worried perhaps more than one man away from home in the service of his country.

Robertson traced the couple from Los Angeles to San Francisco and then to Bakerville, Cal. One day he came upon the man who had broken up the Robertson home. He recognized the interloper at once as William Gilbert, whom he had known in Los Angeles. Robertson shot and killed Gilbert.

When the case was first heard it attracted considerable attention because it was believed that it might establish a precedent for other cases that seemed likely to follow. Robertson told a straightforward story of the wrecking of his home; his aged mother delivered a heartwring plea for her son; a wave of public sympathy was aroused in Bakerville and Los Angeles, and Robertson was acquitted.

The next logical step would seem to be the divorce court. Robertson turned in that direction. He filed a suit for divorce from his wife. He insisted that he be taken along when the wife was apprized of his suit. This was done and there followed an anti-climactic trial. Robertson's case was a greater sensation than the shooting of the slacker-interloper. Robertson found his old love for his wife rekindled.

A few days later he asked her to return to him and said he would dismiss the divorce suit. This step was taken against the advice of all his friends and against his mother's wishes.

"Man's love for his wife is the stronger call. No matter what shadows have crossed their lives, his duty is to cleave to her," declared the returned soldier.

The marriage of Robertson and the comely Lena Melvina Cotton, a widow, took place in 1915, after a romantic meeting at a Los Angeles hospital. They seemed very happy for two years; then came the war. Robertson, a former National Guard member, felt impelled to enlist. He had a good record as a soldier and was on board a transport two days out on American waters when the armistice was signed.

Robertson, the slain man, was a graduate of McGill University at Montreal, Quebec. He figured in a divorce action in Los Angeles two years ago, and on the day he was killed his former wife was married to a Pasadena business man. Gilbert, it was found, had employed Robertson's marriage certificate to obtain exemption from military service.

"Ten Nights in a Bar Room," which will be given in the Opera House on Monday, April 21 is more than a mere play. It is a powerful incentive for good, it's one objective being to teach a valuable lesson. It will in this respect it has gripped the hearts of the theatre-going public for so many years that, today, it stands out, pre-eminently, as the foremost play of American life.

The simple humor of its quaint lines, the laughable effort of the poor country swain Sample Switched to win the heart and hand of the romantic village belle Mehitable Jane Anne Cartwright for twenty years before he dares propose to her; the enjoyable scenes depicted in and around the little village of Cedarville, Maine, in which the characters live living realities; the heroic influence of the mysterious Roundeer who left Cedarville under a cloud when a mere boy but who returned to change the whole atmosphere of the town and befriended those who stood by him in his downward career—these and many more have served to make the play the huge success it is, and a large audience will attest the play's never-falling popularity on the night of its appearance here.
