

PASSING OF NOTED THEATRICAL HOTEL

RENDEZVOUS OF SPORTING WORLD IN BALTIMORE TO BE WELFARE CENTER.

SALVATIONISTS GET IT.

Will Convert It Into Hotel For Working Girls And Maryland Headquarters.

"Soup, soup and salvation," instead of lobster and chorus girl will be the order of the day hereafter at "Joe" Tipman's hotel, known all over the country as the Baltimore headquarters of the Salvation Army...

For a quarter of a century, when it was known as Rielly's Hotel, the four story building has been the gathering place of the motels which flitted and fluttered in Baltimore's "white flight" district...

In a way the passing of the hotel is a tragedy in the life of "Joe" Tipman. It was his ambition, when he bought the hotel last August, to make it the clearing house for the sporting world...

But "Joe" fell foul of the prohibition law. Last November he was sentenced to four months in the City Jail, a punishment which his friends say he took because he was too good a sport to throw responsibility on others...

Through the good offices of Warden Lee, the real estate men who negotiated the sale were admitted to "Joe's" cell and the bill of sale was signed.

Down from the walls have come the pictures of celebrities. The glass case containing the boxing gloves "Joe" wore when he fought "Battling Nelson," Tommy Feltz, Joe Gans, "Terrible Teddy" McGovern, "Packey" McFarland, "Young" Corbett, Dixon, the colored fighter, and those who were in the ring in England, has been removed from its place of honor in the barroom...

Out from the vault where it has been safely guarded has gone the book of autographs containing the signatures of men and women known to the stage of today and of the past. Sarah Bernhardt, the "Divine Sarah," wrote her name in it and not many pages away are the signatures of the Dolly Sisters. Robert Mantell's name is inscribed in the little book...

Already the word has gone out in theatrical circles that no longer will accommodations be available at "Joe's." The news is being received with regret for the hotel was known as a "decent" place where disorder of any kind was not permitted and where cleanliness was the rule rather than the exception...

On the first floor will be an auditorium seating 500 persons. This will be the "James Potts Auditorium," named after the first Baltimore boy who fell in the great war. On the same floor will be offices and committee rooms, while the upper floors will be given over to rooms where, for the modest sum of $3 a week working girls may find comfortable, safe quarters, with baths and showers.

Early in April the Salvationists will take possession of the building. Their lease on their present quarters in the Hoffman Building expires then. In May the formal dedication of the building will take place and high dignitaries of the church will officiate.

Appropriate services will mark the passing of another old Baltimore landmark and prominent officers of the Salvation Army will be present.

The Lead-A-Hand Book Club of Mechanicsville did not miss one meeting during the winter. Bad roads did not deter the members of visitors from meeting. In January the meeting was held at Deer Park Farm, the home of Mrs. Dave Leister. In February the ladies journeyed to Silver Maple Farms, the home of Mrs. A. B. Coleman. On March 19 Mrs. Carroll Haines was hostess. A large and enthusiastic meeting was held. Two new members were admitted. Election of officers followed. Mrs. Palmer was re-elected president, Mrs. G. P. Beasman, vice president...

Mrs. J. C. Wallis, secretary and Mrs. Coleman treasurer. All business was finished in good time to hear the retiring vice president read an account of her recent trip to Indiana. Mrs. Phillips read a short poem "Be the Boy Your Mother Thinks You Are." Mrs. Haines threw open the dining room at the close of the program and the supper awaited the guests, served on dainty dishes. There is good cheer in a home-like supper-table—the members ate salads, eggs, sweets, stirred sugar in their coffee with a complacency to shame H. C. L. The health of the out going officers, and the officers elect were offered as toasts again and again, over all reigns of harmony and great good will. Two visitors were present, Mrs. Ella Shipley and Mrs. Eliza Vingling. The club has Madonnas, Angels of the Kitchen and now it has among the members a St. Cecilia. Adjourned to meet April 15th at Mrs. Geo. P. Beasman's.
