The Trained Nurse

Trained Nurses are needed every day—in time of disaster or pestilence they are a God-send to the community. They are respected and honored. Theirs is a service that all may envy. And the trained nurse through this service is assured of independence and comfort. Her profession furnishes her income. The characteristics of the best type of nurses are those which our American heritage has given us—loyalty, devotion, health, interest and self-sacrifice where necessity demands. Perhaps nursing appeals to you. Communicate with the superintendent either in person or by mail and your questions will be answered. It is a three years' course of study and hospital work, with quarters and board furnished by the hospital, and pay for your time while you are learning.

We could guarantee our batteries for three years, for many last twice that age, but when you buy a battery from us you don't buy a guarantee or a promise. It's a staple product which in percentage equips 80% of all cars with storage battery equipment.

A battery is an electrical chemical product and cannot be guaranteed when in the hands of other persons.

A guarantee is merely a selling point.

There is one thing we can do, and that is, fill your battery with distilled water twice each month; this with a little other care will make your battery last long and well.
