W. M. C. TO ENLARGE T.JE. REV. DR. WARD WOULD DOUBLE SCHOOL'S CAPACITY—SEES POLITICS IN OTHER INSTITUTIONS—WANTS CONSIDERATION IN BALTIMORE.

Enlargement of Western Maryland College to double its present capacity is contemplated in plans now being formulated by the Rev. A. Norman Ward, new president of that institution...

With the completion of the preparation of this ground the college will have a campus of approximately 100 acres. A 65-acre farm adjoining the college was recently purchased.

Dr. Ward has inspected nearly every large athletic field in the country and expects to embody their best features in carrying out the plans at Western Maryland College.

Other buildings will be constructed with regularity until the entire program is completed. The new structures will be so arranged as to surround entirely the present main building, which was erected more than 50 years ago.

Although the plans as outlined in their entirety have not been presented formally to the board of trustees, it is believed by persons in close touch with the authorities that they will be carried out.

Dr. Ward is opposed to the growth of educational institutions to the point where they may become cumbersome, however. He expressed the belief that Maryland's educational needs will be much better served through the continuance of several State-aided institutions...

Strengthening of the bonds between Baltimore is our base of supplies. College is strongly advocated by the president. He said he wished the citizens of Baltimore would come to regard the college as one of the city's institutions.

"Therefore, I think the people of the city should include us as a part of the Greater Baltimore." Dr. Ward hopes that present relationship between the college and the State will be maintained.

Famous Gospel Singers Attracting Large Crowds.

Mr. and Mrs. James Christy, gospel singers, of Baltimore, are a real spiritual power in the splendid revival meeting now in progress at St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, South, Enterprise.

Tuesday night, sermon theme, "Heaven and Who Will Be There." Wednesday night, boys' night. A large chorus of boys will sing.

A Poultry Show for 1921 Assured

The first annual exhibition of the Carroll County Poultry Association, held in the Armory, Westminster, closed last Saturday night. During the week more than a hundred citizens of Carroll county joined the association...

COUNTY FAIR

A SUCCESS

SCHOOL PUPILS ENTERTAINED AT HERR FARM—DR. STONE ADDRESSED STUDENTS PERTAINING TO HEALTH—CLARENCE MYERS CHAMPION CORN RAISER—MISS JONES DEMONSTRATES DRESSMAKING TO THE GIRLS—PREMIUMS FOR WOMEN'S WORK AWARDED

Saturday, the last day of the Farm and Home Products exhibition of Carroll county, was given over to the boys and girls. Early in the morning they began to come here from all sections of the county and gathered at the Armory, marshaled by E. G. Jenkins, State Boys' Club agent; W. W. Chichester, assistant State agent; Dr. H. C. House, of the University of Maryland.

Clarence Myers, the Carroll county boy who, by raising 112 bushels of shelled corn on one acre of ground, won the first prize for the county and the State championship, gave a short talk telling how he did it.

Friday was filled with interesting happenings. At 10 o'clock S. B. Shaw, of the University of Maryland, gave to a large number of fruit growers on the farm of Daniel P. Shipley, Jr., a demonstration in methods of pruning and caring for young orchards.

At 11 o'clock, about 600 boys and girls of our schools marched to the Armory, where practical address on subjects pertaining to health were made by Dr. Lewis K. Woodward, chief health officer of Carroll county, and Dr. William Stone, of the State Board of Health.

For the women of the county interest in this afternoon centered in County Agent Fuller's headquarters, the walls of which are covered with art exhibits in crayon, painting and needlework from the Maryland Institute, Baltimore, and similar work from the hands of Carroll county women.

Awards for women's work and exhibits have been announced by the judges. Probably no more important event has ever taken place in the agricultural life of Carroll county than the fair's just ended. The poultry exhibition was a feature.

The building was constantly thronged with visitors from all sections of the county, and large audiences attended the lectures given by specialists from the United States Department of Agriculture. The exhibition of farm and garden produce not only in variety but also in excellence was a revelation and will be a stimulus to increased production and improvement.
