POTATOES—THEN AND NOW.

Last year potatoes sold at $3.50 and $4.00 in the markets around home. This year dealers offered 20c per bushel and hundreds of bushels were not marketed, farmers being compelled to feed them to hogs and chickens. Last year they sold in Chicago at $7.50 per bushel. This year car loads are being sold at 20c per bushel. Farmers are planting a large acreage this season, hoping that if they go in the ground cheap, they will come out at a good price.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

When we read, twenty years ago, about flocks of sheep and cattle, thousands in number, in Bible times, owned by one man, it seemed like a dream for one man to have so many possessions. Now, in these modern times, news comes from a nearby town, of a man who has 1,200 laying hens, and 2,700 chicks. His poultry market amounts to nearly $200 per week. Of course, he has expenses, as he feeds a ton of scratch feed a week, besides other grain.
