

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. "The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special News Correspondent.
Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—The most of the Senate Republicans evidently take the view that the seat belongs to Newberry because he bought and paid for it, for there can be no other reason for their attitude. The price was a bit high, for several hundreds of thousands have already been accounted for, but just at that time the Senate was practically a tie, and control in the hands of the big interests was very important.

A new party is being organized in Nebraska—or the revival of an old one—called the Progressive party. The Wall Street Journal doubtless discovers a danger that it may grow into something that will take from the Republicans a few seats in the Senate, for it has not forgotten the Populists, the Silver Republicans, the Bull Moosers and the Non-Partisan League. It is curious what an attraction those parties have for the Northwestern farmers. Probably it is due to their having repeatedly been stung by accepting Republican promises. Certainly the moral is plain—they might vote the Democratic ticket. The Journal devotes the best part of a column to crushing the new party in its very inception—which would be some indication of its possessing both virtue and possibilities.

Cordell Hull, the able chairman of the Democratic National Committee, recently made a speech in which he devoted two hours to some of the failures and short-comings of the Republican party. The Washington Post promptly took up the cudgels in defense of the administration and took occasion to warn Mr. Hull of the embarrassing position he would be in "if somebody in the audience should ask for an accounting of the money spent during the war." Has everyone forgotten that the last Congress constituted the Graham "smelling committee" to go into that very thing, for the purpose of digging up enough scandal to keep the Democratic party out of power forever? The Committee spent nearly a year on the job and finally agreed that there was one corporation toward which the finger of suspicion might well be pointed—a great Pittsburgh steel corporation of which Secretary Mellon is a Director!

This doesn't seem to have hurt the gentle Secretary greatly with the Administration, for he is still handling the people's money and has been of great aid to the big rich fellows in getting them "unsoaked" in the matter of income and excess profits taxes, but it suggests that Republican editors might find it less embarrassing at times to be better informed.

Secretary Mellon is not very well known to the general public, a fact due largely to his peculiar reticence. With him secrecy is a foible. He is connected in a large way with some of the worst predatory corporations in America, such as the Aluminum Company of America, one of the proudest of the monopolies, but it is practically impossible, after searching through all sorts of manuals, to learn anything worth while of these companies, their income or their profits; they are all well concealed. So it was in the days of John Barleycorn, when Mellon was managing his fortune out of whisky and beer. Few are aware that Mellon's family wealth rivals that of the Rockefellers. In fact, it is believed that the family controls about two billions of capital—twice the amount of the national debt at the beginning of the war—and also controlled the Republican machine of Pennsylvania through the late Senator Penrose. Secretary Mellon is an officer and director in banks and insurance companies with resources of $860,193,541. He is an officer and director of other companies having known assets of $753,480,923. He is head of a family having a controlling voice in banks with resources of $18,845,310 more, and corporations with assets of $106,702,265 additional, making a grand total of $1,739,222,039. It is small wonder that he is satisfactory to the big interests.

Mr. Tinner of Kansas, in the exuberance of his soul, cried out in the House for a tariff tax of one thousand per cent on importations from Germany. Mr. Mann of Illinois, who tries to keep his feet on the ground, said in reply: "Let there be a few more statements on this side of the House that the Republicans are in favor of a tariff duty of one thousand per cent, and there will not be enough Republicans here to gather together and have a party out of whisky and beer. I have had been here long enough to know."

Mr. Frear, of Wisconsin, is a Republican Congressman; on page 822 of the Congressional Record, January 3, he said: "Congress is repeatedly charged with unsoaking the rich while preparing to skin those least able to pay. Is that charge true? * * * In this session of Congress it is proposed to pass a consumption tax and sales tax that will lay a new tax burden and increased prices on necessities of life consumed by four to five millions of idle laborers and their families, on millions of farmers and other laborers and their families who are now fighting for a bare existence, and on over three millions of ex-soldiers and their families, who are told the price of any compensation bill is a consumption tax." And yet the Congress has sent 20 millions to Russia to feed people no more starving than millions here in the United States.

REUNITED AFTER 20 YEARS

WOMAN, KIDNAPPED IN CHILDHOOD, FINDS BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 10.—Kidnapped in this city when she was barely 4 years old and taken to Washington, Pa., where she was adopted by the family of an undertaker after having been deserted by her kidnappers, Mrs. Helen Smith was today reunited with her brother and sisters here after more than 20 years.

Mrs. Smith said her kidnappers went to California after leaving her in Washington, and although she was very young when spirited away from home she had a vague recollection of her brothers and sisters, and only a short time ago began an investigation of her lost relatives. Through a letter to the police department she was informed her mother and father had died during her long absence, but her brothers and sisters were living here.

On and after December 3, will be at H. Rosenstock's every Saturday to buy all kinds of Raw Furs.

PAUL WINCHESTER.

BALTIMORE LETTER.

State House,
Annapolis, January 12th, 1922.

The General Assembly is functioning in a slow and halting manner, owing to the fact that Governor Ritchie is temporarily out of commission. The Governor really worked himself out. Ever since the election, he has been at work day in and day out, and far into the night. During the campaign he carried the whole burden on his back, practically, without any assistance except that which was rendered by the local leaders and candidates in the counties, and Mr. Robert E. Lee, and the candidate for Comptroller, Mr. Gurdy. The really prominent State leaders rendered nothing but the most perfunctory service—all, without important exception, were under the impression that the party was doomed to defeat, and were shy in taking part in what they believed was doomed to be a losing fight. They hoped to save the legislative tickets in enough Counties to give the history of the General Assembly by a narrow margin, but not one of these felt any confidence in the result. So all held aloof, and Governor Ritchie and one or two of his friends, had the burden of the contest all to themselves, and, greatly to the surprise of nearly everybody, they won out in a measure far beyond even the most sanguine expectations of those who had any hope whatever of victory.

To the Governor therefore really belongs the credit of the great triumph of his party. At the end of the campaign he was almost worn out, and should have eased up, but he did nothing of the sort. The very day after the election, he began to prepare for the General Assembly, and night and day he has been delving into the records, and, except for the very material rendered him by Mr. Kirkman, head of the State purchasing Agency, he has prepared the budget and all the bills necessary for the State Government, and on the opening day of the session, all were ready for presentation to the lawmakers of the State as they assembled in the State House, and then the temporary collapse came, after he had delivered his message in person, and laid before them his recommendations for the work they were expected to do. Fortunately for the people of Maryland, this disability is only temporary in its character, and it is the hope and prayer of all, that he will speedily recover and complete the great and patriotic task which he has undertaken, and on which he has been at work for a greater part of the past two years.

From a political standpoint the most important feature of the news here, and in Baltimore, for the past ten days has been the apparent change in the leadership of the Democratic party. Quietly, and without a flourish of trumpets, or noise of any sort, Mr. John K. Dennis, the State Treasurer, has assumed the place held by former Senator John Walter Smith, ever since the death of the late Senator Arthur P. Gorman. In all the conferences preliminary to the meeting of the General Assembly, Mr. Dennis has taken the place as State leader, and Senator Smith has been conspicuous by his absence, and it is known that all this has been done by the advice and consent of the venerable ex-Senator. And now it is commonly reported, and generally believed, that when the prouder time comes, Mr. Dennis will come to the front as the Democratic candidate for the seat in the United States Senate, now held by Senator Joseph Irwin France. Whether others will come to the front to contest Mr. Dennis' candidacy for the Senate, is at present uncertain, but many of those who are usually well posted on such matters, express the opinion that several Democrats of influence and ability will be in the field and that the suave and gentlemanly State Treasurer, will have a strenuous time before he reaches his ambitious goal, and that before he wins the nomination to become the Democratic candidate against Senator France, he will know that he has been in the hardest sort of a fight in the primaries of his own party.

It is the general opinion among the statesmen here from all parts of Maryland, that this will be a Democratic year, and that the party will, in all probability elect not only a United States Senator, but also six Democratic Congressmen. As a consequence, there will doubtless be several candidates for the party nominations to the House of Representatives. Already men of prominence, are giving out that they intend to enter the primaries—the first in the field being Mr. Andrew J. Cummings, familiarly known as "C. J.", of Montgomery county, in the sixth district, Mr. J. Augustus Mason, of Hagerstown, and Mr. Frank L. Stoner, of Frederick, are also mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination to run against Representative Zihlman, who will no doubt be nominated by the Republicans.

In the Second District, State Senator Millard A. Tydings, of Harford County, former Speaker of the House of Delegates, is announced as a candidate, and it is generally believed that Ex-Congressman Carville D. Benson, of Baltimore County, will also seek a renomination.

In the First district it is not known whether Congressman Goldsborough will have any opposition for renomination. In the Fifth district it is reported that Delegate Allan Coad, of St. Mary's county, will be the Democratic nominee against Mr. Sidney E. Mudd, who will be renominated by the Republicans.

And altogether the outlook is for a strenuous time in Maryland politics as well as throughout the entire land the present year of 1922. Reports from all the States are to the effect that the conservative, Democratic party of the fathers, has taken on new life, and will begin the work, of ousting the Republicans from power, in the Nation and the States, without further delay.
