MEDFORD, MARYLAND

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Wallace Bassford Special Correspondent.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—The President who proudly rode into office in March of last year with seven millions majority behind him is now so uneasy as to the result of the coming November elections that he and his Director of the Budget, General Dawes, juggle appropriation figures and boldly distort the facts in their efforts to fool the people into again voting for the party of special privilege. The President's claim to saving $1,600,000,000 in the past year was taken up in the House the other day by Congressman Byrnes of South Carolina and shot full of holes. Mr. Byrnes said: "The President announced to the country that we will this year reduce our expenditures $1,600,000,000 below the expenditures for the last fiscal year. Well, the expenditures for the last fiscal year which were authorized by a Republican Congress were the largest ever authorized in time of peace in the history of the country. If now, four years after the war, there was not a tremendous reduction in expenditures there would be little hope for the preservation of the government."

"My regret is that the President in issuing this statement did not call attention to the fact that for the year 1916, the last year prior to our entering the war when we were engaged in measures of preparedness, our expenditures did not amount to more than $1,115,000,000, and that the estimate he now makes as to expenditures this year is $3,922,372,000, or $2,807,372,000 more than was spent under the Democratic administration for the last fiscal year prior to the war. "I regret that he did not call attention to the fact that while the Budget Bureau claims these bogus savings of $1,600,000,000, the fact is that the same departments have to date secured from the Congress deficiencies or supplemental appropriations amounting to $374,691,000.65."

"The Secretary of the Treasury does not keep up with this political game. He issued a statement that we are facing a deficit, and then along comes General Dawes, who says that we have saved a billion and a half dollars. The President, if he has any confidence in him at all, ought to urge the Congress to declare a dividend to the taxpayers of America, and we would all be entitled to a share. I favored the Bureau of the Budget. There was real work for the Director of the Budget to do, but the Bureau of the Budget has never functioned as Congress intended it should. The Bureau submitted estimates for an amount larger than the appropriations for the current year and before the subcommittees of the Committee on Appropriations no one appeared to defend his estimates. The director contended himself with these baseless claims of savings. It is nothing but bunk-political bunk. (Applause.)"

Mr. Byrnes then went on to show some of the specific instances where the President and General Dawes had made claims of saving—claims so easily disproved that the President appears in a childlike and ridiculous attitude before the country, if we assume that he was so easily misled by Dawes' political smoke-screen. Mr. Byrnes said, in part: "He says that $7,500 was saved out of an appropriation for the widow of Senator Proctor, of Vermont. Away back in 1908 when Senator Proctor died this money was appropriated for his widow. She declined to accept it, and the good lady has long since gone to her reward. It remained upon the books to her credit, but nobody else could get it, and General Dawes says he saved it this year. Who was trying to get it? (Laughter.)"

"There is $100,000 saved in enlarging the Capitol grounds. Do you remember in the distant past that appropriation was made for enlarging the Capitol grounds? It has been on the books, and it stays there. Therefore, it is saved out of the current appropriations this year. I wish my friend from Kentucky, Ben Johnson, were here, because it would bring back memories of the past to him. The trouble with this statement is that it goes throughout the country and some people are misled by it. They are misled into believing that there is a saving of $112,000,000, now increased to $125,000,000, when there is not any saving, and, as a matter of fact, it is only a saving on paper. It is nothing but a political saving; it will never relieve the taxpayer.

"Then there is the Panama Canal. Why, my friends, he has a saving in here of $19,674 in the original appropriation for digging a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, appropriated when the proposition was first urged for digging a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. He could not spend it. Because it was not spent this year. How could it be spent? In what way could he dig a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean for $19,000? The money could be spent for no other purpose. For years it has been on the books, and it is on the books, then he has saved it this year."

"Then we have censorship for foreign mails in the Panama Canal Zone where we have saved $53,205 this year. Evidently he has not heard that the espionage act is no more, and we could not spend it. Because it was not spent and could not be spent, the Director of the Budget says he saved $53,000. And the worst of it all is he seems to have induced the President to believe it, and he has given circulation to these absurd claims of savings."

"Why, we are going to save $19,000,000 in the Treasury Department in the Supervising Architect's office. On what? On public buildings. Back in 1913 we passed a public building bill, and because they cannot get anybody to take the contracts for some buildings for the amount of money then appropriated, on account of the increased cost, it remains on the books. Therefore we have saved $19,000,000 because we can not get anybody to take the contract until we enact legislation increasing the limit of cost."

"Now, as to the Department of State. There is an alleged saving of a little over a million dollars. The largest single item is $750,000 payment to Columbia under the treaty of 1909. In other words, back in 1909, $750,000 was appropriated. Columbia refused to accept it. Director Dawes says it is saved this year. If it was a saving this year, it has been a saving every year for the past 12 years, and we have saved $9,000,000 out of this $750,000 fund."

"District of Columbia. Now, this statement of General Dawes would be a joke book if it were not serious in its effort to mislead the public. There is a saving of $100,000 for what? War emergency improvements. One hundred thousand dollars was appropriated for the District of Columbia to repair streets around the Army and Navy buildings constructed during the war. The Treasury could not pay a dollar of it after the end of the war. It was not spent during the war under the Democratic administration; they didn't spend a dollar of it, and it remains on the books. General Dawes says he has saved it this year when there could not have been a dollar of it paid out of the Treasury on any voucher. Who did he save it from? "Legislative. You do not know it, but he says that he saved $25,000 out of the salaries of Members of Congress. Who did not get theirs? (Laughter.) The only way it could be saved was when some member of Congress died. Did he kill them? And yet he claims that he saved that amount. I said it was a joke book. (Laughter.)"

The defeat of Senator New, in Indiana, is a severe blow to the Harding administration, he being one of its closest supporters. Harding and New are not only political allies from adjoining States, but are the closest of personal friends. Beveridge, the victor in the primary, represents the same old Progressive revolt that unhorsed the Republicans in the middle of Tat's term; it is the natural rebellion against boss rule and money dictation. Every effort of the administration was made to save New and at the same time save the President's face, even to sending to the State every man who could be found in the Departments at Washington, who had lived in Indiana. All in vain; the revolt is on and there is no chance for it to subside until Harding is driven from the White House in 1924.

The same fight is on in Pennsylvania; again is a reminder of the rise of the Progressives in 1910, referred to above. That year the Republican nominee came within ten thousand votes of defeat in the general election by the candidate of the Keystone party, which represented the Progressive uprising against Republican bossism. Had the Keystone party and the Democratic party united that year, the Republicans would have lost the State, for the Democrats polled 119,000 votes for Webster Grimm and of course every man who voted for him knew he had no chance of election. This year anything is possible in Pennsylvania. Gifford Pinchot is the Progressive candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, while the Republican bosses have put up Alter, the present Attorney General of the State; Pinchot's letter should throw the bulk of his followers into the arms of the Democrats for the November fight. That is their only hope of defeating bossism in the event of Alter's nomination.

The Democratic minority on the Senate Finance Committee have made careful calculations, with the aid of statistical experts, and come to the conclusion that the burden placed on the backs of the people by the pending tariff bill will be as great as the heavy load laid on them by the great world war. They assert that the high prices of today will be maintained under the new law and that the present high cost of living will even be increased. These indirect taxes are as real as our internal revenue taxes, but not as plainly discernible to the average citizen as the latter. However, there are none who can escape them, they make themselves felt at every turn in the road. They are included in everything a man has to purchase, no matter how necessary the article or how poor the buyer.

An Old Doctor's Advice.

Dr. O. T. Everhart, born May 18, 1832, at Manchester, Md., who died about a year ago, at Hanover, Pa., had been a practicing physician for 66 years—something unusual. He was a physician of the Old School and once said: "The difference between old and modern methods in surgery is as day and night. These are the days of specialists—the days of too much surgery, of too much cutting! Operations are oftentimes necessary, but I am too old-fashioned to believe there are many remedies, which, if used wisely, might prevent many an operation. When I went my rounds in the old days, I always carried a lancet and bled my patients. I'll never forget my first billion patient. I took from him a pint of blood. It's a great wonder the man didn't die! I remember one woman, a chronic invalid, who was bled every time the doctor attended her, and once she said to him, "Doctor, would you bleed a cricket?" And he quickly replied, "Yes, if I considered it necessary."
