

The automobile of today can worry along somehow on most any kind of gasoline, but it will behave much better on the properly balanced, reliable "Standard."

Why "STANDARD" is consistently good

"STANDARD" Motor Gasoline doesn't just happen to be right in Ridgewood, N. J. or Baltimore, Md. There is a reason why it gives the same splendid results wherever it is used.

Every lot of "Standard" Motor Gasoline that leaves the refineries has been carefully tested at one of our refinery laboratories and checked up at the central laboratory in New York.

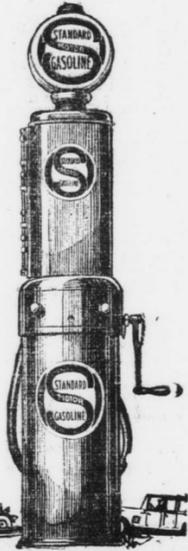

We know that what every user of gasoline wants is consistent quality, something that can be depended upon. And that is what this company's standard of testing insures. One feature of "Standard" Gasoline is the fact that it vaporizes completely—affording instant ignition, abundant power and maximum mileage.

Do you use Polarine? You should, to get the full benefit of "Standard" quality.

WOODROW WILSON

I nearly broke up a show the other night in Washington when an actor on the stage said it was an honor to play before Woodrow Wilson, whom he saw in the audience.

There were wild hurrahs and hand-clappings, and, says one dispatch, "The crowds which gather to see the president on such occasions are becoming a problem."

When he left the White House his popularity was at its lowest ebb. His party had been almost abolished at the end of his term. His health was broken. He was a wounded soldier of the World War. But it was not only in his body that he was disabled. His pride had received a terrific wound. He was despised and rejected by men. Yet, he never deserved this rejection. He had given to the world a great new vision of order and peace through a world organization. His own countrymen—for reasons which would make a long, long story—denied this dream's realization. Woodrow Wilson was the most tragic figure in the world.

But it is more than likely he never for a moment gave up the belief that his time would come in the field of history. It can hardly be supposed that he then turned to live to see the people of today turn back to him.

Such occurrences as that mentioned above show it. And we do not envy that man his nature who does not thrill with a generous joy to see the former president again receiving the acclaim of the people whom he served so well.—Cincinnati Post.
