

The Telephone Company's Obligations

The object and the obligation of a public utility is to furnish service. This obligation, as it applies to the telephone company, means that it shall furnish at all times good, dependable service—service that is good not only from a technical standpoint, but that is satisfactory from the standpoint of the patron.

Telephone service embraces a variety of operations; the installation of telephones and changes in location; telephone operating; maintenance of the central office equipment, outside plant and telephone apparatus; accurate and up-to-date directory listings; billing; collecting and numerous other things that must be done to give service that will be complete and satisfactory.

It is the aim of the management to keep in mind at all times these obligations. To fulfill them satisfactorily, it is necessary that the revenues received for its service will be sufficient to pay the expenses of operation and yield a fair return on the value of the property used in the service. This return is the money paid to investors upon whom the Company must depend for capital to build and expand its system.

Notwithstanding our aim to give the highest possible standard of service, we realize that at times difficulties will arise. Usually they are quickly remedied. But defects at times occur which, in spite of our watchfulness, are not immediately detected.

Our patrons will confer a favor upon us if they will advise us immediately of such occurrences. Or, if they may have at any time suggestions or criticism which they think may lead to better telephone service, we will be grateful if these are made known to us.
