Easy and Practical Suggestions

There is no prettier way of making a one-piece frock than by the model illustrated here. Seldom does one find the little details that count for so much, worked out to better advantage than they are on this model. It is developed in crepe de chine, but looks well in all of the soft silk finished materials. For the woman of average size, 4 1/2 yards of 44-inch material will be required, and as the fashionable effects in crepe de chine range from $1.50 to $5.50 per yard, one can be either economical or extravagant in selecting the dress. Notable features of the waist are the yoke, round collar, and lapel effect introduced in the adjustment. The collar is smart if made of a contrasting material, which may also be used to cover the buttons.

The skirt is cut in four pieces, and the front may be finished in either straight or rounded effect. To cut the dress, place pieces of pattern with edge marked by triple "TTT" perforation on a lengthwise fold, except stay which is placed on a crosswise fold and remaining pieces with line of large "O" perforations on a lengthwise thread of material. For large collar in rounded outline, cut off lower part on small "o" perforations. Cut off extension of left front on small "o" perforations. Cut off front edge of left front gore, and back edge of right back gore on slot perforations.

For the waist, close under-arm seam as notched. Gather edges of front and back between double "TT" perforations. Sew shoulder edge of back to front as notched. Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Sew large collar to neck edge, and standing collar to shield as notched. Adjust shield to position matching corresponding perforations in shield and in back. Sew stay to front and back, centers even, small "o" perforations at under-arm seam.

To make the Bishop sleeve, close seam as notched, gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations. Turn under edge of cuff on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations, notches even and fasten with buttons. Sew to sleeve, notches even, small "o" perforation at seam. Sew in armhole, seam at notch in front.

"DAMAGED GOODS" IS POWERFUL PLAY

Brioux's Play a Strong Argument For Eugenic Marriages; Effective Drama

To those who have questioned the value of the drama as a factor in sex education, the presentation last night by Mr. Bennett and his company of Brioux's "Damaged Goods," was a decisive answer. It proved conclusively that subjects of this character can serve as an effective dramatic medium.

The frank discussion of one of the so-called "social diseases," which is the basis of the play, is handled in a manner which could not offend any serious minded man or woman. There is no catering to the puritan-minded sensation seeker. It discusses with sincerity and conviction a subject which has been tabooed by society with disastrous results. There has been much talk of late years regarding health and hygiene, but until recently the prejudice against the uncovering of this festering sore has been too strong to be overcome.

The facts which every medical man and social worker has confronted these many years, prove a startling revelation as handled by the dramatist. The ethical content of "Damaged Goods" is superior to the great majority of the plays which have been presented in recent years in which the subject has been sex problems or the consequences of vice.

In the majority of these offerings the playwright has deftly shifted the burden of responsibility for the moral turpitude of the principal characters upon society. "Damaged Goods" places the responsibility upon the individual. A play which displays so forcefully the weaknesses of both human nature and our social system must necessarily propound many questions for which no solution is suggested.

A satisfying rendition of a part which in less hands might have been talky at times. Olive Templeton was charming as the young wife, and Milton its full dramatic value. Joseph Weber, as "Lochee," was a real and convincing Morrison played the girl in a convincing manner.

Those who were fortunate enough to see "Damaged Goods" will not soon forget the play and its lesson. It has been widely read and discussed, but such a rendition as Mr. Bennett and his "co-workers" gave, make it a powerful and genuinely impressive sermon.

8 Starving Children and Their Parents Get Relief From Poor Board

Eight starving children and their parents were given relief by the Board of Poor Directors this morning when they received a pathetic letter from the mother. The family lives in Royalton.

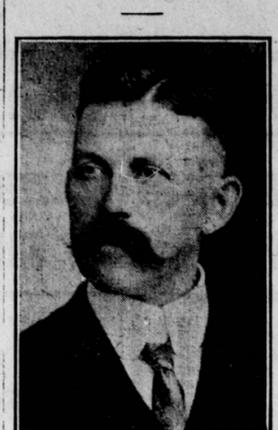

The letter is that of a mother driven almost frantic by the sight of her children crying for bread when she has none, with a husband who can get no work, and unable herself to get any food.

John Guyer, clerk to the poor directors, on reading the letter one got into touch with John M. Rutherford, of Middletown, and arranged to have the Royalton family supplied with food until the end of the month, so that the head of the family will have a chance to get work.

The letter sent to the directors follows: Kind Friend: I want to kindly ask you whether you will for God's sake send me an order, haven't a bite to eat and have eight children. My husband is willing to work, but hasn't got it. I hope to God you will help me along so we don't starve. With my little ones, God knows we need help the worst kind of a way. I know God will answer you for your kindness.

When the Pipes Leak You Can Yell For 110 Plumbers if You Wish

When you find a leak in your cellar and vainly yell for a plumber it may be some satisfaction to know that there are 110 men in this city licensed to take care of leaks in pipes and such things that plumbers are supposed to take care of.

The reports of the Board of Plumbing Inspection shows that there were forty-seven master plumbers and sixty-three journeyman plumbers registered in the city last year. Of this number two masters and ten journeymen failed to be re-examined. These men will have to be re-examined.

During the year twenty-four journeymen and one master took the exams and six of the journeymen failed to pass. Examinations for registration and license will be held on January 19 in the offices of the Division of Health and Sanitation.

NATIONSBURGERS AT FOURTEENTH ANNUAL AUTOMOBILE SHOW

Many Interesting Displays at Fourteenth Annual Exhibition in New York

By Special Correspondence
New York, Jan. 8.—Harrisburg, as usual, is well represented at the Fourteenth Annual Automobile Show, now being held in the Grand Central Palace.

With record attendance Tuesday that exceeded by 25 per cent, the combined attendance of the Grand Central Palace and Madison Square Garden of last year, it can readily be seen that this national manufacturers' show has a charm even for those who live hundreds of miles away.

The most popular feature of the show this year is the displaying of all exhibits under one roof. The architectural beauty and arrangement of the present building require very little additional decorative effect or alteration, while Madison Square Garden had to be practically rebuilt inside and draped in order to be presentable for such an exposition.

The show colors are white and green. The white walls and marble columns are draped and entwined with smilax and flowers. Statues of "Motors," the goddess of motoring, are mounted on pedestals marking the division line between the various exhibits.

Increase in Sixes
The increased number of sixes; the coming of the light six; the electric gear shift; the two-speed gear; the stream-line bodies; the introduction of the cycle cars, and a greater number with left-side drive—these are the most notable changes apparent among this year's models.

Of seventy-nine manufacturers showing gasoline cars fifty-four display sixes and eighteen of these makers had assistants to assist in their sales. Five years ago only eight companies built sixes.

No noticeable change in motor construction has been brought out this year beyond the increase in smaller, high-speed engines, but some important mechanical changes are apparent. Extra tonneau seats that fold entirely out of sight are being adopted quite generally.

Bodies Are Changed
Convertible bodies are shown that may be made into a hard-top roadster effect or coupe. This makes it possible to make a change in the body with very little trouble.

The tenth annual automobile salon in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor is attracting thousands. Here the coach builders' art is displayed at its best among the various foreign and American models. The American coach builders have shown their ability to not only copy the best foreign coachwork, but show that they are able to create beautiful and exclusive designs of their own.

There are 350 exhibitors, all told, including cars, accessories and motorcycles. The cars range in price from $7,200 to a trim little runabout for $295.

Local Men There
C. D. Stewart, of Harrisburg, is assisting Mr. Guber in the management of the Abbott-Detroit exhibit. C. C. Crispin is deeply interested in the demonstration at the Cadillac exhibit. I. W. Dill keeps in close touch with the Hudson exhibit and is now assisting the Krit. Robert L. Morton divides his time between the Chalmers, Studebaker and Saxon displays. Mr. Guber is enthusiastically over the Overland showing and is particularly interested in the possibilities of the Willys-Knight Six. George McFarland has quite a family of models, including the Reo, the Hudson, the Buick and the Duryea. Then there is George A. Deakant assisting at the Case exhibit, and H. G. Zimmerman inspecting the new contract. The importations are as E. L. Leinbach, posting himself on the latest in accessories. Frank B. Bosch watches the wheels turn round in the Miller tire display.

Miss Roshanara, daughter of an English army officer in India, has come to the United States to show Americans the Nautch dances of India. She thinks they will create much interest, for no one has ever done these dances gracefully here. Miss Roshanara was forbidden by her parents to practice these dances while she lived in India, but she says she went out among the natives and learned how to dance them, and now she feels that she is as much of an adept as the best Indian dancers.
