MANY HEAR WILL OAKLAND

Through the medium of the phonograph many who have never seen Will Oakland will go to the Orpheum this week to admire his fine tenor voice. In none of his records, however, does his merit stand out with such striking force as in the excellent musical novelty, "A Night at the Club," in which he and a sterling quartet are now appearing. Yesterday afternoon and last evening the splendid headliner was warmly received and the singlets would have responded to all their enticements. The title of the act tells its story. A gathering of clubmen are seen in their favorite haunt in search of amusement. The guests are introduced to themselves as well as their audience. A neat comedy number is introduced in which the act tells its story. If good-natured banter, the tease of the "grouch" and the hale and hearty good fellows are amply supplied with solos. Lovers of good male voices will find a trip to the Orpheum this week well worth while. The splendid Keith attraction supported by a novel feature film in two parts, that ought to pack the Orpheum all week.—Advertisement.

AT THE COLONIAL

Comedy is the keynote the rattling vaudeville that was introduced to Colonial patrons yesterday. It is made up of a great comedy play called "The Law" with a team known as Fred and Mave, clever couple in a novelty singing act consisting of a close second. The Franklins, in a novelty sharpshooting attraction, add another attraction. "The Queen of the White Lights," a Kalein feature film in two parts, will be a special attraction tonight in moving pictures.—Advertisement.

POLITICS HAS THE CALL NOWADAYS

People in Philadelphia Think Stuart Will Be the Candidate Beyond Any Doubt

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—Sentiment is clearing in the matter of the probable nominees of the several parties in Pennsylvania this year, but there is a disposition among Republican leaders to allow the party preference to be freely and fully expressed in the primaries. Among the most insistent gossip is a story that Judge George Kunkel, of Harrisburg, is being strongly urged for the Supreme Court. He is believed to be the most available from every standpoint and all the common pleas judges, and his friends in all parts of the State are emphasizing the importance of the selection of such a candidate for the judiciary this year. Judge Robert Frazer, of Pittsburgh, is also being pushed by the Western Pennsylvania leaders, and James B. Galbreath, of Butler, by Bull Moosers, Democrats are talking of James B. Kelly, of Pottsville. It is practically certain that the three contestants for the United States Senate will be E. P. Penrose, Gifford Pinchot and A. Mitchell Palmer, representing the Republican, Washington and Democratic parties, respectively, with the radical progressives having a candidate from Western Pennsylvania. The State Ticket As to the gubernatorial nomination, the consensus of political opinion seems to be that William H. Berry, representing the reorganization faction, and Michael J. Ryan, the old guard faction, will fight it out at the primary on the Democratic side with Ryan the present favorite. "Farmer" William T. Creasy wants to be a candidate, too, but will be shunted into a sidetrack for Secretary of Internal Affairs. George W. Guthrie is not showing eagerness to run as yet. Among Republicans leader the situation seems to have developed the unusual strength of ex-Governor Edwin S. Stuart, although there are many strong party influences back of Senator William C. Sprull. Neither Stuart nor Sprull is an active candidate. There is also discussion of Lieutenant - Governor Reynolds, Speaker George E. Altier, ex-Auditor General A. E. Sisson, ex-Lieutenant-Governor L. A. Watters and others, but Stuart seems to be the favorite. For Lieutenant-Governor, ex-Senator J. S. Fisher, of Indiana; Mayor Frank B. McClain, of Lancaster, and James Scarriet, of Danville, are said to be under consideration in potential quarters. Mr. Scarriet says he does not want it. Not a single name is mentioned in opposition to Henry

Howk for renomination for the office of Secretary of Internal Affairs in the Republican camp.

Factional Troubles

It is fast becoming apparent that the contest this year is to be unusual, inasmuch as all parties are more or less factional in their present line-up. Rapidly the reorganization bosses of the Democratic party are losing their hold upon the masses of Democratic voters, and it will not surprise many to see this faction unhinged by the next organization of the State Democratic committee. A. Mitchell Palmer, the recognized head of the reorganization faction, is even now very much in doubt as to whether he can land any of the several places with which his name has been connected. He is making a bold bluff at the strength of the Democratic alignment, but the weakness of the claims of both the Palmer and Washington party leaders is shown in the statement of Palmer that the Roosevelt vote will be 25 per cent. weaker than when the Colonel was running for President, while the Washington party leaders are insisting that Pinchot is 25 per cent. stronger than Penrose. These varying claims would seem to indicate, if they indicate anything, that the opponents of the Republican party are very wide apart on their estimates. As a matter of fact, there is a lining up of Republicans all over the State to resist the opposing parties, and within the next few weeks it is expected rows in both the Democratic and Washington parties will be in full swing.
