When You Smell the Good Food Cooking And It Makes You Sick It is a Sure Sign That You Need Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

It is time to pay attention to your stomach when the sight or the smell of food makes you sick, for were this not the fact the stomach would not cause such disgust upon the par of the sight and smell and taste when meal time comes around.

The Dyspeptic: "How can a man live in a small like that?" Taste, sight and smell all have an influence upon digestion. If one eats something that does not taste good one retards the work of digestion because the juices necessary to digest the things eaten will not flow in correct proportion. On the other hand, good food will always excite the taste through actual contact with the food in the mouth or through the sight or sense of smell, unless the stomach knows that it cannot digest it. We thus readily learn that the simple act of giving nature the digestive fluids she needs, will bring back all the joys of good eating, and tasting, smelling and seeing dainty dishes will excite a rousing appetite. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are composed of natural ingredients that a worn out digestion simply welcomes with a wild delight. They enrich the stomach juices quickly so that if you want to eat an out-of-the-ordinary after-the-theater sort of a dinner, just carry a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in your pocket, take it after the meal and you will digest that meal. Your druggist will supply you with a box no matter where you live. Price 50 cents.—Advertisement.

THREE DWELLINGS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Columbia Firemen Make Good Fight Against Blaze in Zero Weather

Special to The Telegraph. Columbia, Pa., Feb. 13.—A fire that rendered three families homeless within a few hours and that threatened a dozen more dwellings in the center of the town, broke out between 9 and 10 o'clock yesterday morning and raged with fury for several hours. The firemen could check the spread of the flames, which had communicated to adjacent buildings. At the time of the fire the thermometer registered only a few degrees above zero, and the intense cold, which had frozen some of the fireplugs, impeded the work of the firemen, and when streams were put into play on the flames many of the firemen were covered with ice. The dwellings destroyed were those of Harry Fisher, Joseph Shertzer and Samuel Cranford, Jr., the latter manager of the Columbia Opera House. At the time of the discovery his wife was lying in bed, having the day before broken her kneecap in a fall. She was carried across the street to the home of her sister on a couch. Most of the household goods were removed by the firemen and citizens, who responded to the alarm. The buildings were frame and are totally lost. The owners are Joseph Knapp, Joseph Shertzer and Harry Long.

FLORIDA CITRUS EXCHANGE

In the orange and grapefruit groves owned by members of the Florida Citrus Exchange the pickers wear white gloves to protect the fruit from bruises and contaminations. They clip—not pull—the fruit from the trees and carefully lay it in canvas lined baskets. The wagons in which the fruit is conveyed to the packing houses have springs that prevent bruises on the way from the groves. At the packing houses the oranges and grapefruit are washed by machinery and assorted for size, wrapped in tissue paper and carefully packed in boxes—all by white-gloved workers. No child labor is employed in any packing house of the Exchange. No human hand touches the fruit from tree to the grocery or home in which the box is unpacked. This insures the consumer fruit handled in the most sanitary manner and the care taken with it means that it will keep well. You can safely buy it by the box.

Florida Oranges and Grapefruit Untouched by any Human Hands From the Tree To the Consumer

The Florida Citrus Exchange is a co-operative, non-profit making association of orange and grapefruit growers formed for the mutual protection of consumers, dealers and producers. The mark of the Exchange in red on boxes and wrappers means tree-ripened, sweet, juicy, well-flavored fruit. No matter what grade you buy you will get more for your money if you insist on Exchange fruit.

Up-to-date grocers and fruit dealers in practically every city and town have for sale Florida Citrus Exchange oranges and grapefruit. Your dealer probably will have the fruit in stock.
