EARNINGS DECREASE; REDUCTIONS FOLLOW

Superintendent W. B. McCaleb Explains Withdrawal of Pennsy Trains

Retrenchment when earnings are showing a big decrease, is the policy of every good business man, said Superintendent William B. McCaleb, of the Philadelphia Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, this morning when asked for a statement as to the meaning of the withdrawal of trains and other reductions, announced yesterday.

Following or preceding trains will take care of the travel. Passenger department officials of the Philadelphia Division were of the opinion that the public would be better served by the withdrawal of trains, and the impression of the people, but this train will run from Philadelphia to Harrisburg as is the general impression of the same train on Sundays. Owing to decrease in the passenger travel, these trains can take care of all travel offered, which will be handled by hauling the cars, or some of them from the trains taken off, on the other trains.

It will be remembered that at the time the opening of the new station in New York, our new through trains were put on at one time with business out of New York, but it has now developed that the business offered by the opening of the new station is not so great as was expected, and the hauling of heavy freight, during the summer months, will be in all probability a heavy task for the road.

RAILROAD NOTES The supreme court of New Jersey today set aside an order of the board of Public Utilities Commissioners requiring railroads to furnish drinking water to passenger trains which require one-half hour or more to traverse the state.
